His remains were followed to their last resting place by a very large number of relatives and friends.

WE are sorry to learn of the death, on the 2nd inst., of Mr. Alfred J. Ives of Pictou, N. S. A fine young man only twenty-one years of age. He was, at the time of his death, accountant in the Bank of Nova Scotia at Amherst. He was cut off after an illness of three days by that fearful scourge, malignant diphtheria. The Teller in the same bank, Mr. Sydney Moore, who was his roommate, and attended him during his illness, came home last night, and we trust will speedily be restored to health.

THE Herald reports that the annual examination of the Tignish grammar school was held on the 29th of June. SINCE the withdrawal of the Government subsidy, the funds of King's College, Windsor, have been running low, and some of the students are trying to replenish them to some extent by holding a series of entertainments throughout Nova Scotia. The press of Halifax speak highly of the first entertainment held. The Chronicle says: "The Literary Association of King's College gave its initial entertainment in Windsor on Saturday night. The affair was in every way a success, and every one seemed highly delighted. The entertainment was of a very high order, quite different from the ordinary run of entertainments that are seen in the country towns. No doubt this association will do something towards raising the Endowment Fund of King's College. The students deserve success for their pluck." A correspondent of the Morning Herald writes: "The first College entertainment of the Literary Association of King's College, was given in Windsor on Saturday night, and was a decided hit. There was a good house, and was evidently only a forerunner of other good houses in the towns where the students intend giving their entertainment. The entertainment was of a very high order, and every one seemed delighted. There certainly can be no lack of love for Alma Mater among these King's men."

TORONTO, July 6—10 a. m.

Moderate to west winds, generally fair warm weather, with fair local showers.

The Comte de Chambord, who is past sixty years, is dangerously ill, and with his death the once illustrious name of Bourbon will become extinct as far as France is concerned. The Comte de Chambord's place in history, in many points, resembles that of the two Stuart pretenders of the last century. From the days of his childhood he has played the part of a sovereign without a country, and a king without a crown.

IN 1873, his opportunity came. Had he then been willing to accept the throne by an elective title, with constitutional limitations, and the tricolor as the flag of France, the National Assembly would have called him to the throne. But the obstinate Bourbon would only declare that he was willing to grant a constitution, and demanded that his restoration should be unconditional, and he refused to accept the tricolor in place of "the white flag of Henry IV." This put an end to all chances of restoration, and he must die as he lived—a crownless king.

Mackay, the California bonanza man, whose wife has been "astonishing the natives" in Europe, is investing largely in works of art. According to London Truth he has paid $500,000 to Sir Philip Miles, of Leigh Court, England, for his collection of pictures, and is negotiating with the Marquis of Lansdowne for some of the pictures in his gallery at Bowood.

Arrangements are being made for a match at Birmingham between an English rifle team and the United States visiting team.

The town council of Berlin, Germany, has voted one hundred and fifty thousand marks towards the expenses of the Martin Luther celebration.

The Regina Leader says the steam ploughs taken into the Northwest are practically failures, owing to the weakness of the shafting and cranks.

The Quebec Government on Saturday withdrew several more business tax suits against public companies, and was directed by the court to pay the costs.

The British iron trade is active because of the increased demand from the United States, owing to the new tariff. Numerous shipments have been made in order to take advantage of the new scale of duties.

Advises state that there is something approaching in the English cattle market. Beef has gone down about 3 cents per pound and carcasses 1/2 to 1d., equal to $15 to $20 on a whole animal. The last two weeks about 5000 head were shipped from Montreal. The shippers will likely lose heavily.

It is intimated as probable that before long more than one Maori will find their way into the New Zealand Parliament as the representatives of their race. A few years ago the Maories and the colonists were engaged in deadly hostilities, and the then Liberal Government of England was roundly denounced for telling the latter that they must carry on their own quarrel with the natives. The first result of the withdrawal of English aid was the conclusion of a lasting peace, and if this is followed by the election of Maories to Parliament the latter circumstance will be still more significant as a vindication of the Liberal colonial policy.
