THE INDIAN SUMMER.

When the Summer breezes have died away,
And the Autumn winds are drear,
And the forests have changed their green array,

The brilliant dyes of the Autumn woods Have gladdened the forest bowers, And decked their pathless solitudes,

The hazy clouds in the mellow light, Float with the breezes by,
Where the far off mountain's misty height

'Tis a season of deep and quiet thought, And it brings a calm to the breast,
And the broken heart, and the mind o'er-wrought,

Yet over all is a mantling gloom, That saddens the gazer's heart,
For soon shall the Autumn's varied bloom

GRACE WELDON.

FREDERICA, THE BONNET-GIRL.

That is better, perhaps, because more artful!
How does it concern his honor? he asked quickly.
This is only to make the lure more certain,

'You seem to be strangely willing now that I should see him,' she said, fixing her eyes upon his, which dropped suddenly before her gaze;

'I want it over, and you be convinced that he is indifferent to you, so that you can give yourself to my views! You have been obstinate long enough!

'Now retire,' said Clow, taking the note. There is my bell! I expect a visitor! As soon as he is gone I will go to the opera with you.

'You are ever at your post, Philip,' said this young man, with a gay air, but which nevertheless did not conceal a certain look of conscious degradation.

'Why I am quite full of news; but more than all, I am full of that lovely little Jewish opera singer! I have heard her, last night was the third night, and I am in raptures. She is divine! I do not know which most to praise, her voice or her beauty!

'I have no time to talk of singers, Mr. Ellery,' answered Clow, concealing under a cool look of disapproval his deep inward satisfaction. 'What more of our matter with regard to this young merchant's clerk?

'It progresses favorably. To-morrow, as you know, will be the crisis. Every thing has been most artfully laid! He will fall, and there is no help for him!

'Why what a lady's hand you write!' exclaimed Ellery, as he opened the letter which Clow handed to him. 'One would swear it was written by a female! Yes, this will bring him into our power!

That is all I wish! This will do the work, be assured! The other parts of our plan will work out of themselves to-morrow, as you know.'

'Yes, I should like to be a witness!'
'As I shall be! But I will report to you all.
Give me the letter, and I will see that he gets it tomorrow in time. Now about this charming opera girl—this adorable Jewess! Have you been able to learn who she is, or anything about her since I saw you? No one knows! She comes and goes from the theatre to one knows how or where; and it is my belief that she lives in Jerusalem, for I can't find any body that knows where she lives here, unless it is you, Philip, who know every thing!

'I do know,' answered the mulatto, in a quiet way.
'You know! Then I must know. How did you ascertain? The sum I offered you—one hundred dollars—when I was here night before last, to ascertain where she was, and get me an introduction to her, shall be yours. How did you find out?'

'I do not deem it necessary to let all the machinery of my results be known. It is sufficient that I know where she lodges, and that I can get you an introduction!'

'Then you are my best friend! I am irrevocably in love with her! I am captivated! Who is she?
The whole town is taken by surprise! Who is she?
everybody asks, but nobody answers.'

'The name by which she made her debut, and is known to the public, I learn is not her true name!
She is the daughter of a Portuguese nobleman, and a Jewess, his wife. The nobleman is a widower, and is poor, and necessity has led him to place his accomplished daughter in the position she has now taken before the world. My knowledge of the Portuguese, and my character as one in the society of the hotels and in the street, gave me facilities, you perceive, in making my inquiries, and, as a Portuguese, of obtaining their confidence. His daughter is not nineteen yet, has been brought up in the most perfect seclusion, and is as beautiful in the drawing-room as upon the stage!'

'Then you have seen and spoken with her?'

'Yes, and supped with them. I have the free entries to their house, and perhaps I could have the privilege of introducing you.'

'I did, and you shall have it when you have fulfilled the conditions.'

'To-night I will see them again. To-morrow night, of course, you will be here!'

'Then I will let you know my success, and when you can pay, with me, a visit to her.'

'You are a prince for aiding a friend, Philip,' said Ellery, grasping his hand and warmly shaking it. 'Take no denial from your friend, the Don, her old father! I must see her!'

'And you may depend upon it, your wish shall be gratified,' answered the mulatto, with very positive significance. 'But why do you hasten?'

'Why? It is the opera-divinity's night! I must be there! For I would not lose a note for a pearl each! What a lady's glove, Philip!' exclaimed the young man, stooping and lifting from the floor beside the table a white glove, made for a small hand. 'You have visitors of the other sex, too, my lonely anchorite! I have had my suspicions; I had heard the retiring rustling of silks before I was admitted!'

'It was a glove I found on the street and brought home.'

CHAPTER XVI.

WE will now take the reader to the counting-house of Mr. Weldon, on the morning following the events related in the last Chapter. It is a counting-room, on the second floor, consisting of two apartments, an outer room for the transaction of the general business of the house, and an inner room for the more private intercourse of the merchant with his commercial friends and customers. Along the centre of the outer room, which had two windows looking out upon the wharf and shipping, was a tall, oblong, writing desk, with a mahogany frame-work in the middle, to hold ledgers, account-books, bills, &c., &c. The desk slanted two ways, and four clerks were seated upon high stools, facing one another, engaged very busily with their pens; one of them, however, who seemed the principal book-keeper, was not so fully occupied as not to be able, now and then, to exchange a word with Carlton Ellery, who was seated near him, in waiting for some bills of lading the lad next to the book-keeper was making out. At intervals Ellery would look listlessly round upon the maps, and paintings of favorite pack-ships, and files of newspapers, that adorned the walls of the counting-room.

'What are you doing with shipping these boxes to the Havana, Carlton?' asked the book-keeper.

'They are a private venture of my own.'

'You talk of a private venture!' said the bookkeeper, laughing. 'You, with the prospect of at least a hundred and fifty and three cyphers when your uncle goes; and that will not be a great way ahead, if he has many more of those attacks of the gout?'

'I don't do much, I assure you, Finney. I get down about ten in the morning, I leave at two, and don't trouble them till next day at ten.'

'That is delightful. Here I have to be at eight,' said Finney, glancing at the inner room, and lowering his voice, though the conversation was carried on in a low tone; 'I have to stay till two; here again at three and a half, and dark half the time finds me at this desk. But you are indulged because you are an heir.'

'Yes; I suppose that is something of the secret,' answered Ellery, in a careless tone; 'but the truth is, I only stay there to throw dust in my uncle's eyes. If I did nothing, he would call me an idle rascal, and so leave me nothing. By keeping up the semblance of doing something, I shall, by-and-bye, get something tangible.'

THE CHEAPEST AND SAFEST DOCTOR.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
THIS great household Medicine ranks among the leading necessaries of life. It is well known to the world that it cures many complaints other remedies cannot reach, this fact is so well established as that the sun lights the world.
Disorders of the Liver and Stomach.
Most persons will, at some period of their lives, suffer from indigestion derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels which if not quickly removed, frequently settles into a dangerous illness. It is well known in India, and other tropical climates, that Holloway's Pills are the only remedy that can be relied on in such cases. Almost every soldier abroad carries a box of them in his knapsack. In England most persons know that these Pills will cure them whenever the liver, stomach or bowels are out of order and that they need a physician.
Weakness and Debility.
Such as suffer from weakness, or debility, and those who feel want of energy, should at once have recourse to these Pills, as they immediately purify the blood, and acting upon the main-spring of life, give strength and vigor to the system.
To young persons entering into womanhood, with a derangement of the functions, and to mothers at the time of life, these Pills will be most efficacious in correcting the tide of life that may be on the turn. Young and elderly men suffer in a similar manner at the same periods, when there is always danger; they should therefore undergo a course of this purifying medicine, which ensures lasting health.
Disorders of Children.
If these Pills be used according to the printed directions and the Ointment rubbed over the region of the kidneys, as least once a day as salt is forced into meat, it will penetrate the kidneys and correct any derangement of their organs.
Should the affliction be stone or gravel, then the Ointment should be rubbed into the neck of the bladder, and a few days will convince the sufferer that the effect of these two remedies is astonishing.
Disorders of the Stomach.
Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the relaxed or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and acting through the secretive organs upon the blood itself, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.
Complaints of Females.
The functional irregularities peculiar to the weaker sex, are invariably corrected without pain or inconvenience by the use of Holloway's Pills. They are the safest and surest medicine for all diseases incidental to females of all ages.
Bilious Affections.
All young children should have administered to them, from time to time, a few doses of these Pills, which will purify their blood, and enable them to pass safely through the different disorders incidental to children, such as measles, hooping-cough, cowpock, and other infantile diseases. These Pills are so harmless in their nature as not to injure the most delicate constitution, and are therefore more peculiarly adapted as a corrective of the humors affecting them.
Dropsey.
Hundreds are cured yearly by the use of these Pills con-jointly with the Ointment, which should be rubbed very bountifully into the parts affected.
Derangement of the Kidneys.
The quantity and quality of the bile are of vital importance to health. Upon the liver, the gland which secretes the fluid so necessary for digestion, the Pills operate specifically, infinitely rectifying its irregularities, and effectually curing jaundice, bilious remittants, and all the varieties of disease generated by an unnatural condition of that organ.
Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known for the following diseases:—
