ELLEN'S DIARY Monday Is Washday Despite Summer Rain

And Monday came. A day from and near. The first of our washday week. James beside me, in the wide old valley of this picture, rose to go and surveyed the reach of valley beyond the window. "Any sun?" we queried. "No, Ellen, no sun" he replied "looks like a dampish morning to me."

"No-hay-day" he observed. "No" he agreed, rising. "But it will be the crops. That last rain we had certainly put extra feed in the barns."

A summer-rain, warm and gentle, the morning brought. We must, we reminded ourselves, wash the black ewe's fleece for far fall and winter yarn.

"You got a longing to get on with your wash?" Papa Starling questioned with a greeting from his high terrace, when we came presently to the front verandah to take stock of the day.

"Please yourself" he said "but he shook his head. "I don't seem to be too promising a day for that. If it were sunny, I believe I'd wait for the sunshine. What? Sure it will come. Meanwhile" he smiled, "watch your patience—crop grow. I mean the patience that my old grandman used to declare was a virtue."

"I washed this morning. Yes, it's still on the line. But—well, Monday's my washday, and I always feel more satisfied when I stick to my schedule of work" a young man, who had been chatted together this evening.

Summerside Girl Weds In London, Ont., Ceremony Katherine Louise Campbell, London, Ontario, daughter of Mrs. Sadie Campbell and the late Norwood Campbell of Summerside, exchanged vows with Donald Edward Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parker, London, Ontario, at St. David's Anglican Church, London, Ontario, Rev. J. E. Houghton, officiated.

James Cliff, and Miss Joan Martin, both of London, Ontario. All were gowned in blue, pumpkin-styled street length dresses of pale sea and carried bouquets of white carnations tied with matching blue ribbons. Their headresses were crown hats, matching the dresses.

Mr. Fred Parker was best man for his brother and Mr. Leroy Ritchie, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured long ruffled sleeves and scooped neckline. Embroidered lace appliques, accented with pale blue, decorated the side of the gown.

Her crown of pale blue and pearls held a French illusion fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses. The matron-of-honor was Mrs. Alvin MacLeod, sister of the bride, of New London, P.E.I. The bridesmaids were Mrs.

MARY HAWORTH Wife Frazzled By Mate's Consistent Churlishness Dear Mary Haworth: I am 41, married 20 years and have four children. I have remained slender. My marriage is happy much of the time, as an I have a short memory and an optimistic spirit.

But my husband's ingratitude towards the children and me is beginning to wear me down. Lately I start crying when he complains about what we haven't done, instead of appreciating what we are doing to try to please him. The children see me lose composure.

John is a medical man and works very hard. Work is a religion in his family. Our domestic work is done by a woman who is very by nature but puts up a front, chatty and pleasant, with his patients when I was seven and I have helped in his office during the staff's vacations and we both choose to ignore the difference between his friendliness to others and curtness to us.

Just now the children are out of school and busy at home—painting furniture, cleaning the gutters, doing yard work, sewing. Yet he comes home scolding, mad about something (usually) that we are doing which we think we've been doing. This I resent, quite candidly. I don't know another woman who works as hard at being a housewife.

We've done some building recently and to keep down costs we've worked quite a bit at it too. In a way your comrade John has no hobbies, but he doesn't enjoy it. He has a maverick attitude which I consider a fault. He is very thorough; never drinks, smokes or looks at another woman. There is no tenderness in our relationship. Sex is only an appetite to him.

If and when the day dawns and you don't give a damn (except the phrase) about his displeasure, say "no" to his "appetite" if you aren't in the mood to appease him; when you feel called to do so, do it on always tearing down account of building. It is a matter of family relations, then is the time for it (if ever comes) when he will begin to really improve his behavior at home. M.F.I.

larger this year. The roses were of good quality and stood up well. Higher than usual, took the top honor, the Armat Rose, Wednesday night in the provincial rose show at Parkdale W.I. Hall. It was pointed out that the bush looked like the third picked from his bush, and that the bush looked like the third picked from his bush, and that the bush looked like the third picked from his bush.

Platform groups were Dr. R. Lee, H. E. Hyndman, Health Dept. and the Ontario Health Dept. Mrs. J. D. McNeill, president of the Parkdale Women's Association, and Mrs. Edwin Johnson, who was at the piano for the occasion, were the main speakers.

It is just as simple as that, which doesn't mean that it is as simple as that. The solution is out of your hands. It rests with him and could be achieved only by his wholehearted investment in emotional reeducation and reform, aided and abetted by freestyle psychoanalytic therapy, leading to spiritual rebirth.

Of the many entries in the rose show, one which caused perhaps the most comment was a spray of floribunda grown by Mrs. Guy Fichaud, Charlottetown. This was most unusual, in that both rose-colored and white blooms grew from the same bush.
