Togs For Housewives

As has been the case with every phase of fashion, the housewife has undergone vast changes. We don't like the word housewife and we wonder why some smart designer hasn't coined a more suitable term.

The new things, though, are as smart as they are functional. And there's no reason why a woman shouldn't look pretty while she is attending to the practical side of life.

NEW COVERALLS
The nicest garments for working around the house are the new coveralls. Now what could be more convenient, more satisfactory for the active homemaker who climbs ladders, does gardening, washes her car, rescues the children from the garage roof—all in the course of an average morning.

WASH-AND-WEAR
These new, nifty coveralls are mostly made of wash-and-wear fabrics that require no ironing. Just put them into the washing machine and let them drip-dry or dry smoothly in the automatic dryer.

Easy to care for, they are also as gay as can be, which is important when there's plenty of work to be done.

We've seen some smart-looking styles in such color combinations as charcoal gray with red and white stripe trim or maybe light gray with pink and white or blue.

Miss Ethel Marie Jenkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Jenkins, Summerside, was married to Mr. Garnet Lee Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Jones, Amherstburg, Ontario, on July 28, 1956, at 2.30 p.m.

The very pretty wedding took place in the Central Christian Church, Summerside. The Rev. W.O. Weale was the officiating clergyman. The organist was Mrs. Myra Morrison. Before the signing of the register the Rev. W.O. Weale sang the "Wedding Prayer". The church was decorated with baskets of summer flowers. Pewes were marked with yellow mums tied with true lovers' knots.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a ballerina length gown of white nylon net over satin. There was an overskirt of lace with a scalloped nylon pleated net border. The bodice of matching lace was fitted and strapless. A bolero of lace to match the dress had long tapering sleeves and tiny covered buttons at the wrists. Her headpiece was a scalloped tiara with pearl trim, which held in place a shoulder length veil. The beautiful wedding bouquet was made in the style of a fan with briarcliff roses.

Miss Jean Agnew was the maid of honor. She wore a powder blue ballerina length gown of nylon net over taffeta. The strapless fitted bodice had a matching bolero. The headpiece was a blue bandeau. Her bouquet was a cascade of Lila Hibbard roses.

Miss Anne Jenkins, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her gown was pink embroidered nylon net over taffeta, ballerina length, with fitted bodice. The skirt was very full with shirring. The matching bolero was short sleeved. Her headpiece was a pink bandeau. She carried a nosegay of Queen Elizabeth roses.

Mr. Alan Kelly was the best man. The ushers were L.A.C. Morrison and L.A.C. Snooks. The reception for sixty guests was held at the Birch Hill Tourist Home. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake encircled with briarcliff roses. The cake was topped with a

MARY HAWORTH Pressed By Debts Youths Driven Toward Crime

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a daily reader of your column, and I am writing to you in a last effort to solve my problem before it drives my husband and myself to some act of crime—that we are being forced into.

First I will tell you about ourselves: I am 20; Ken is 24; and we have three children, ages 4, 3 and 2 years.

My husband and I find ourselves up to our ears in debt. At first this business of a dollar down and a dollar a week seemed so little. But, as time went by, the bills kept piling up, for clothes, doctor bills, etc., until the totals led us to several loan companies—three, in fact. We got in so deep that we even went so far as to mortgage furniture that we don't even own.

Lately we've tried to get all these loans into one—where a reasonably monthly payment could be made from our budget. But my husband's job is straight commission; and my present salary is only twenty-eight dollars a week. And your frantic aim is commendable, to get things in shape, so that you may make one overall payment monthly, on terms that keep you square with the world. This can be done, I am sure, with the encouragement, backing and leadership of such specialists in dilemmas as I have suggested above, M.H.

the County Attorney's office, located in the county courthouse—in the city through which you've written—can tell you where to find the Legal Aid Society; and can give you the name of the man to talk to.

If you call the newspaper, ask for the City Desk, and put your questions. Or ask for the newspaper library.

RESOLVE COMMENDABLE

Another likely source of help, in your desperate emergency, is the Family and Children's Service of your city—an agency that specializes in sharing the burdens of families who seem in danger of going to pieces under pressure.

In all probability, the Family and Children's Service has a working arrangement with the Legal Aid Society, in cases where a household (like yourself) need tough-minded protective guidance, in dealing with a swarm of anxious creditors.

Your panic is understandable, at finding yourself in debt over your head. And your frantic aim is commendable, to get things in shape, so that you may make one overall payment monthly, on terms that keep you square with the world. This can be done, I am sure, with the encouragement, backing and leadership of such specialists in dilemmas as I have suggested above, M.H.
