ELLEN'S DIARY

Visit To Winter Fair Is Happy Gala Event

And then with our Sunday gone by, seemingly as though we had just turned a leaf to read the next chapter of a new book, we this morning, stepped off into a brand new week. Some indication of its trail was to be seen at daybreak. It pointed to a veiled distance, which we were to explore slowly, only step by step. What should we discover along the way, we wondered? What see from its hilltops? What was around its bends? The answers to our questions were denied us at the outset. We would be allowed to read the trail only at our day's close. We would be allowed to read then we would know what adventures had been by the wayside, what pleasures, and what shadowed spots as well.

"Are you awake, Ellen?" James queried softly from the next pillow. "Then, it's all very well to me here," he smiled. "but it won't buy the child a frock, now will it? Or pay for the one he is wearing! Besides," he added, "it's almost broad daylight-time to be to work!" And it was a new day. One in which even the sounds of the morning about: the lows of cows come down the lane to the barnyard, the neighs and the cantering hooves of the horses in the near meadow, the blithe crows from the poultryyard seemed to declare that there indeed was a day made new. We heard James presently greet Scamper in the yard below, before we lost the sound of voice and step along the apath which leads to the barns. We opened the small window, one of the quaint pair under the eave eastward. The sun was showing now against the gray of the morning. Rather listlessly, the thought came. Would this be a washday? James settled this more or less satisfactorily at breakfast.

"I believe, Ellen, if I were in your shoes, with not too much to do-well," he amended with some apology, "nothing that won't keep for a day or so-and had the chance, I'd up and go to that Fair."

So we have "come to the Fair. Been there, caught something of the pleasurable feeling that grips one at such a gala event—the carnival spirit, that is, and once more looked in, and up and down, and about, at the Halifax Show. We met there the pair of sons of this old house, and Mack, and also, as it happened the one girl of the farm. "And how did you come?" one inquired. We came, truly quite pleasantly surprised at the turn of events which had made it possible, with kin of the family. And most comfortably along the Island's T.C.H. thence by ferry to the Mainland where settled then to a steady pace, the miles and varied scenes and scenery slipped by so smartly we wondered what a day's end we would most recall: the farlands, the mountains, the woodlands, and rivers? The wistful light in a lad's eyes when along quiet countryside one said "We just

Brownies, Guides, Rangers To Parade In Montague

A meeting of the local association of the Montague Girl Guides was held in the Montague Elementary School on Monday, November 1st. Mrs. John Hughes, district commissioner, chaired the meeting. Minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Ruth MacDonald and in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Mary Craig, the financial report was read by Mrs. George Warner. Several items of business were brought before the meeting including: a discussion concerning brownie, guide and ranger uniforms, but due to the small attendance it was decided to refer the matter to a future meeting, when it is hoped more members will be in attendance. It was decided that the brownies, guides and rangers will take part in the November 11th parade and will lay a wreath from the Guide family. Mrs. George Inman, divisional commissioner for Kings, informed the group that the Provincial executive meeting will take place in Montague Wednesday, November 10th at the Elementary School and that all King's Division Guides who attended the Heritage and International camps will be present, and will give a brief talk on their camp experiences. It was also decided that the new group of Rangers would be asked to take charge of the refreshments at the executive meeting as one of their service projects.

Montague Chapter 69 OES Is Officially Constituted

The worthy grand patron of the Grand Chapter Order of the Eastern Star of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, Frank Ripley of Kentville, N.S., constituted Montague Chapter No. 69 in the Elementary School, Montague, recently. This put the seal of approval on the Chapter. The officers and members have been working hard since the Institution six months ago to become proficient in the ritual. Assisted by the worthy grand matron, Mrs. Olive Croft of Halifax, N.S., Mr. Ripley then installed the officers into office. The worthy patron of the Chapter, Howard MacLeod of Dundas, was unable to be present because of illness. The officers installed were: worthy matron, Mrs. E.T. Buffum; associate matron, Mrs. Robert Leard, Mt. Stewart; secretary, Mrs. Gordon McKnight; treasurer, Mrs. Richard Knox; conductress, Mrs. Ernest MacDonald; associate conductress, Mrs. Russell MacDonald; chaplain, Mrs. Weston Johnston, Murray Harbour; marshal, Mrs. Raymond Reilly, Gaspereaux; organist, Mrs. Atwood MacDonald; Ada, Mrs. Howard MacLeod, DUNDAS; Ruth, Mrs. Louis Roper, Brudenell; Esther, Mrs. Forhan Bears, Commercial Cross; Martha, Mrs. Stanley Llewellyn, Gaspereaux; Electa, Mrs. Weir MacLure, Murray Harbour North; warder, Barbara Mabon and sentinel, Louis Roper, Brudenell.

Mrs. Cecil Palmer and Mrs. Freeman Webster, both of Charlottetown, were among those presented with gifts for their devoted and successful work as instructresses to the new Chapter. Mrs. E.T. Buffum Montague, was presented with an attractive arrangement of dark red roses from the officers and members of the Montague Chapter. The meeting was preceded by a banquet and refreshment were served later by the members of the Montague Chapter.

Do-It-Yourself Recipe For Dry Biscuit Mixes

Can mixes be made at home? This question is often asked when the Chef and I make personal appearances before clubs and other organizations. Yes, some dry mixes can be homemade. They cost less than commercial mixes and are sufficient for three meal-times for six persons.

KEEP IN CANISTERS
As these mixes must be kept in tight-closed canisters in a dry place, be sure you have suitable space in which to store them. They will keep fresh about 3 weeks.

Here in the test-kitchen, we have worked out formulas for several homemade mixes, which will be culminated from time to time.
I took the Chef just 11 min. to put the following biscuit mix formal together. With it, and with just one mixing effort, it's possible to turn out all kinds of biscuits and quick rolls in double quick time.
Measurements are level
HOMEMADE BISCUIT MIX
9 c. sifted enriched flour
1 1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 c. double-action baking powder
2 c. firm shortening that stays firm at room temperature... In 3-qt. bowl, combine flour, salt, and baking powder. Stir well. Sift into larger bowl or pan. Add shortening. Chop in with pastry-blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Your homemade biscuit mix is now ready to store in closed canister on pantry shelf or to use as follows:
Drop Biscuits (from homemade biscuit mix): Into bowl, measure, do not pack, 1 1/2 c. homemade biscuit mix. Make hollow in center. Add 1/4 c. milk; stir in with fork until all of mix is moistened. Oil small muffin pans. Half-fill with dough. Bake in very hot oven, 425 degrees F. to 450 degrees F., about 15 min. Makes about 1 doz.
BAKING POWDER BISCUITS (basic recipe)
3 c. homemade biscuit mix (do not pack)
3/4 c. milk
Measure homemade biscuit mix into bowl. Make hollow in center. Add milk and stir with fork (about 25 strokes). Turn onto slightly floured surface. Knead 6 times. Roll out or pat 1/2" thick. Cut into 2" rounds with floured cutters; place on baking sheet. Bake in very hot oven, 425 to 450 degrees F., about 15 min.
Cheese Biscuits: Add 1/2 c. grated sharp American cheese to 2 c. homemade biscuit mix (not packed down). Stir in 2-3 c.

MR. AND MRS. R. R. MELOCHE

Former Charlottetown Girl Married In Kingsville, Ont.

In an all white setting of chrysanthemums and candlelight, at St. John de Brebeuf Catholic Church, Kingsville, Ontario, on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 9, Maureen Louise Paoli was united in marriage with Richard Robert Meloche.

The double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Rev. M.J. Dalton, who also offered the nuptial mass. Mrs. Len Howe was soloist, accompanied by the church organist. Hymns chosen were "The Wedding Prayer," "Ave Maria" and "The Lord's Prayer." The bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon P. Paoli of Kingsville, Ont., formerly of Charlottetown, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Meloche of Amherstburg, Ont. Escorted to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a regal empire gown of taupe de soie with a detachable chapel train sweeping from a self bow at the waistline. A delicate diamond pattern of crystal and seed pearl embroidery enhanced the elbow length sleeves, sapphire neckline and encircled the AA-line skirt. Her four-tiered shoulder length veil of illusion was held with an openwork crown of the same seed pearls and crystals and she carried white cymbidium orchids, stephanotis and ivy.

Myrna Mulcaster of Kingsville was maid of honor and Mrs. William Mayville and Sharon Meloche of Amherstburg were the bridesmaids. Their empire floor length gowns of taupe de soie styled similarly to the bride's were designed with emerald green bodices and frosted mint green skirts, highlighted with Watteau back panels draped from a pearly bow. Scalloped tulle veiled their wedding ring headdresses of emerald green sequins and their flowers were cascades of deep bronze daisy mums.

Junior bridesmaid Debbie Meloche, sister of the bridegroom, wore gold floor length taupe de soie fashioned with a jewel neckline, fitted waist and gathered skirt. Her matching headdress and basket of flowers were identical to the other attendants. Gerald Cote of Rockwood, Michigan, was his cousin's best man and the ushers were William Mayville, Les Drouillard, Roland Drouillard, both of LaSalle, and Louis Paoli, of Peterborough, brother of the bride.

A reception followed at the SEE BODY IN TRUNK
BLACKPOOL, England (AP) Police put out an alert after receiving reports that a car driven by a woman was seen with a man's hand and foot extending from the trunk. A search produced Mrs. Shirley Airey who explained her husband had been trying to find a leak in the gas line.

25th Anniversary Observed By Carleton Siding Couple

On Tuesday, October 26, Mr. and Mrs. John Myers of Carleton Siding celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. They were entertained in the early evening at a private supper by Wendell and Audrey Myers in their home.

Following the supper, a number of guests, members of both families, and friends arrived to join in the celebration. After they were assembled, Heber Myers and Mrs. Ivan Craig led the couple to seats of honor. Mrs. Ralph MacCaull read an address commending them for being such good neighbours and friends in the community, and offering congratulations and best wishes from all. The reading ended with a humorous poem referring to their sporting life. Mrs. Bennie Coughlin and Ramsay MacLeod then presented gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Myers on behalf of all present. A fitting reply was made by Mr. Myers expressing appreciation for the gifts and for their thoughtfulness.

Rev. E.S. Weeks then made a few remarks, recalling their wedding at which he had officiated 25 years before at Springfield West. The couple were called upon to cut an anniversary cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Ralph MacCaull, after which the guests enjoyed a hour of fellowship, followed by refreshments served by the hostess, Mrs. Wendell Myers assisted by Mrs. Gordon Myers, Mrs. Bennie Coughlin, Mrs. David Baarlow, Mrs. Ivan Craig, Mrs. Ralph MacCaull and Elizabeth MacCaull.

MARY HAWORTH

Wives Advised To Think Before Building Estate

Dear Mary Haworth: We learn from living and I have a message for women who struggle and sacrifice and do without in many ways, to help their husbands pay for mortgages, securities, a car, the children's schooling, etc. They ought to think twice before depriving themselves and their families habitually, solely with the aim of "building an estate" to leave to the children. Nothing is sure in this life. We don't know what Fate has in store for us. The self-denying wife may die unseasonably. And soon the grieving husband may marry again—some young thing who believes in living now, enjoying the goods the gods provide, luxuriating in the harvest of her predecessor's frugality.

In which case the children of the first marriage probably will be eased out of the picture gradually. If the man dies before she does, the widow's share of the estate would be hers, to share with another husband eventually, no doubt. That is how the working of fate may divert the fruits of the first wife's sacrifices from those for whom it was intended, and give it to strangers.

So I say to first wives: be generous to yourselves, your husbands and your children, now, while you are all still together. Stop spoiling your youth, happiness, looks and health with worry about old age, or about leaving money to the children, or other remote objectives having to do with a tomorrow that may never come. Give them health, education, love and happiness as you can, with what you have today, and take time to enjoy life with them, day to day. This is non-transferable treasure. Sincerely,—C.P.

Dear C.P.: Your conclusion is sound enough, namely, that one should live each day as if it might be one's last opportunity to do good to those around him. But your prior reasoning, where-them, to them, to threaten their financial house-of-cards. St. Paul's attitude towards supply—of coping equably with much or little, meanwhile recognizing God as the source of all good—is the attitude of a morally mature and balanced personality. Riches cannot dehumanize such a man. Neither can we imagine him plotting narrowly to guarantee, if possible, that his passing share of the bounty of Providence shall be reapportioned, after he's gone, strictly according to his designs, and no other way.—M.H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

BALTIC
Her many friends will be sorry to learn Mrs. Elmer Caseley, Baltic, is a patient in Prince County Hospital. All hope for her a speedy recovery. His many friends will be pleased to learn Douglas Johnson, baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Johnson, Margate was able to return to his home on Thursday, after being a patient in Prince County Hospital for the past few days.
