Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Who Is Married?

SIR,—In your issue of the 7th inst., Varia complains of your common form of announcing marriages as incorrect. He says it is the woman who is married to the man, and not the man to the woman, and therefore we should say—Married, Mary Maide to John Bachelor, rather than John Bachelor to Mary Maide.

Now, sir, I do not wish to find fault with Varia, or the authority he cites for this point of etiquette; but I think it would have been better had the reason for it been stated as a matter of history, and not as a sober fact in our modern life. Of course we all remember the legends of the savage Romans carrying off the Sabine women by force and arms, to be their wives, and of Paris of Troy taking French leave and stealing away the peerless Helen from the Greeks. Those were days when it might have been said with truth of the marriage contract, "He married her." The man was active, the woman passive. But does this express the position of the parties to the contract in our day, and especially on this side of the Atlantic? In most cases I trow, the tables have been turned. Job may flatter himself with the possession of the forms and semblance of power,—but Mrs. Caudle holds the reins. Such a thing as a man marrying a woman, whether she would or no (the common case in those barbarous times) is now unheard of.

The evolution of woman is proceeding. The next step will doubtless be to make perpetual the rules observed (or which should be observed) in leap year. The error Varia says you have fallen into, is, at most, a piccadillo, but "straws show which way the wind blows."

Yours hopefully,

MARGARET CAUDLE.

The Cruisers and the Lobster Law.

SIR,—I believe in having all good laws upon our Statute Books properly enforced. I also believe that what was intended at first as a good law often becomes very obnoxious to the people when improperly administered. The Act for the protection of our fisheries, for instance, is, in the main, a good one. But there is one section of it, the section relating to the lobster fisheries, which cannot be literally enforced without closing every lobster factory on the Island. Take last year's experience in the business. The commander of the fishing cruisers took a hand in enforcing that law, and here is how he did it.

On the 25th of June the steam cruiser Acadia called at Cape Spry, near Annandale, and sent a boat on shore in charge of chief officer Kent, who, on landing, searched the lobster factory there for unlawful fish. He and his men turned the bulk of the fish on the cooler about until they succeeded in finding seven lobsters which Mr. Kent declared to be of unlawful size. In measuring the fish a very uncertain and unfair way was resorted to. A kind of box was provided, into which the lobster was put, and if the lobster did not fill the box it was decided to be under-size. It did not seem to matter much to the officer of the cruiser how crooked the lobster was as he did not straighten out the fish to measure him. The boiling kettles, bath kettles and every nook and corner were then searched, but there were none found under size except the seven to which I have already referred. One of the proprietors of the factory, Mr. McPhee, was then taken on board the cruiser where Commander Gordon had the lobsters again measured, five of which he declared to be too short, and the remaining two he called "rubbers." He said that Captain McLaren and he had decided to make the fine for the first offence fifty dollars, and asked Mr. McPhee if he was prepared to pay it. If not paid forthwith, Mr. McPhee was promptly told that he would have to go to jail without further ceremony. Finally, however, he was allowed to go on shore on condition that he would pay the fine fine within two hours. The fine was paid, after which Mr. McPhee was condescendingly allowed to go at liberty.

Now, sir, I would ask what authority had Com. Gordon for acting as he did? He was sworn in as a fishery magistrate by a Justice of the Peace of Souris. It is the first time I ever heard of one magistrate swearing in another. The Judges of the courts have heretofore done the swearing in of Magistrates. But in any case, what right, I would ask again, had Com. Gordon to condemn and fine any person without a trial? I was always led to believe that, while under British rule, none shall be even arrested for debt, trespass or other civil cause of action, but by virtue of a precept or commandment of some court. Even the Queen herself cannot command anyone by word of mouth to be arrested, but she must do it by writ or order of her courts, according to law. It would appear that some of the captains of our cruisers consider themselves greater than either queen or law.

I need only add that if lobster packers are to be fined fifty dollars and over for every lobster found, when boiled, measuring one eighth of an inch short according to cruiser measurement, then it is high time to agitate for a better state of affairs. Everyone knows, who has taken the least trouble to find out, that lobsters, in boiling, will shrink from one-half to three-fourths of an inch. If the length of the lobster when boiled is to be the rule, then the law should say so, and instead of 9½ inches as prescribed by law now, let the length be lessened to correspond with the boiled lobster, or cruiser measurement.

If the present law is to be enforced by the cruisers next season as it was this, the only thing for some of the packers in King's County to do is to get out of the business altogether, which means a dead loss of thousands of dollars to them and next thing to starvation to a large number of our fishermen. I hope that this matter may be well ventilated in Parliament next session, and that, as a result, the law will be modified, and those who shall administer it instructed to act with a sense of justice and strict impartiality in every case.

Yours truly,

A CONSERVATIVE.

Souris, Sept 9, 1889.

Bishop Ireland for Prohibition

HIS ADVICE TO CATHOLICS.

In a speech delivered by Archbishop Ireland at the annual State Convention of the Minnesota Catholic Total Abstinence Union, held in June last, he said:—

"We thought we meant business years ago in this warfare, but I hope God will forgive us for our weakness, for we went into the battlefield without sufficient resolution. We labored under the fatal mistake that we could argue out the question with the liquor sellers. We imagined there was some power in moral suasion, that when we would show them the evil of their ways they would abandon the traffic. We have seen there is no hope of improving in any shape or form the liquor traffic.

"There is nothing now to be done but to wipe it out completely. I have lost too much of my time striving in the past to repair the fearful evils wrought by the liquor traffic. I have lost too much time in speaking of total abstinence in hall and pulpit to men who, while listening, were with me, but who, out in the streets, would be invited by the saloon keeper to come and take a drink and forget their resolutions. Well, some of us are growing old, and do not intend to be throwing away our time in arguing with people who will not be converted, and I for one am going to go in with terrific earnestness in the future in this war against liquor in all shapes. I mean business this time.

"Now in order to succeed, I wish to enroll every man. We Catholics will unite with our fellow citizens of all classes and all denominations to do away with that terrible sin and shame and disgrace of the saloon. All those who violate the law and disgrace us go into the saloon first, and would we be patriots, would we be Americans, if we did not turn round and meet with our whole strength the spring of crime, the accursed saloon?

"So come and say to your friends that you have enlisted for war, but meaning business this time, clean out the whole institution of dram-selling. We are blessed in every way. There is not in the world a country equal to our own, and what we have to fear is intemperance, the one curse in country or city."

News Notes.

Desertions from the warships now at Quebec are reported to be numerous. It is stated that as many as 72 men have disappeared from the Bellerophon since her arrival in port. Probably the whole of this number have not really deserted. Many of the missing men are, doubtless, still somewhere about town. Meanwhile, the ships patrols are kept pretty busy nightly looking aafter them, and picking up the stragglers, who seem bent on thoroughly enjoying themselves when they get ashore, and making night hideous for the citizens.

Considerable activity in railway building is expected at Quebec this fall and winter. The Harbor Commissioners have granted permission for the erection of a bridge over the mouth of the river St. Charles for the joint use of the Lake St. John and La Bonne Ste. Anne railways and its construction, which will cost about $100,000, will be shortly begun, as will also a union station and a change of the line of Lake St. John road from Loretto to Quebec to avoid the heavy grades. Further the Intercolonial premises at Levis are to be enlarged and it is said that effectual steps are about to be taken to compel the Local Government to cause the Canadian Pacific railway to respect the conditions of the city's million vote to the old North Shore railway by extending the line along the river front to the Montreal Ocean Steamship Co's. wharf.

Personal.

The New Glasgow Enterprise says:—Louis Desbrisay, who has been in the employ of the Bank of Nova Scotia here for a short time, left for Montreal last Thursday, to take a position in the Bank of Montreal.

One of Mr. Gladstone's conversational advantages is that he has known every celebrated person for 50 years, and has endless reminiscences of all of them. On one occasion, at a dinner party, somebody was illustrating the Duke of Cambridge's remarkable command of damnatory rhetoric. The Duke has a fiery temper, and at a review one day he made a forcible observation about a certain officer's eyes. The officer promptly requested him to confine his objurgation to his own eyes. "Yes," said Mr. Gladstone, "but the Duke of Cambridge is mild compared with his uncles. I remember the old Duke of Cumberland, who was famous for his habit of garnishing other people's remarks with his own oaths. When the first bill for the abolition of church rates came before the House of Lords, the Duke was asked to express to the Archbishop of Canterbury the wish of the majority that he should move its rejection. Off went the duke with this commission. Presently he returned, and in a loud voice, for he was very deaf, exclaimed, 'The archbishop says that he will be devoted to everlasting fire if he does not work the rejection of the bill.'" It need scarcely be said that the language which his Grace of Cumberland professed to quote from his Grace of Canterbury has been somewhat softened.

PIANO FOR SALE.—Attention is called to the advertisement in another column of a Fischer Piano for sale. The piano is a superior instrument, and a splendid opportunity is offered for securing it. Apply to Prof. J. H. Logan, Kent Street.

A PLEASANT EVENING.—The season for out-door band concerts will soon be coming to a close, so let us all go to the square to-night and enjoy the sweet music of the new band. The dashing sprays of the fountain and the flowers which are looking beautiful, all help to make the evenings very pleasant
