ELLEN'S DIARY

Now, Plans Are Made For Busy Days Ahead

A lightly clouded sky and a cool wind, this April day brought. And though we know the fields and woods bare, we say here on this place caught against the breeze of a breeze. We were ever spring with less flooding, less apparent run-off, than this? Now in mid-April we plan for the days ahead: shall we plant a hedge up there to the rear of the buildings to protect us from those biting winds of the north? Will Mack find time to set out apple trees in replacement for orchard a juicy mellow harvest apple perhaps, and a golden russet as he said, and maybe by way of an experiment a wished for pear tree or two? Indoors we tidy a room, and clean a window, and when the sun shines catch—this season the bright spring-glints in the stream. In a few days lads of anglers will come by to try their luck at the troutling there. They tell me James offered at dinner, "that has his stakes all sharpened and ready for the fishing. But I'm thinking it will be a while yet before folks will get to that. Unless there comes a sudden change." Pork chops was our meat, with an apple relish to flavor it. Odd snowflakes drifted by the window, and the sparrows that winged by were blown round of feathers—Tabby on a path eyed them before she continued on to the stables. The pussy willows along the old mill-road would also be wind-tossed today. Bread and cherry preserve was our dessert, the bright of the latter, an inspiring factor in the shadows of the April day. When I see cherry jam, James commented with a smile pickling up his spoon. "I am reminded of the time I went with a sister a distance by train to spend a few days at the home of kin. I was only a boy then. I doubt now that I could recognize the place, but I do remember the row of cherry trees there, laden ready with fruit!" Visitors we have at present, come by through the evening's shadows: youngsters who will presently be homing. Peter looks over the pages of a bright magazine, eyes scanning the pages. "Does a big 'M' mean a Mercury? And does 'Ford' spell 'Ford'?" he queries. "Of course, Silly!" Alex replies not looking up from his book. "Mack, did you say that you will be getting your driver's license this summer?" Peter questions at an intriguing thought. "Uh-huh, if all goes well. I hope, to" Mack replies. "Isn't it funny that you should ask me that! Listen to this: 'Man teaching his wife to drive: Stop on the red, go on the green. Take it easy when I turn white'" he chuckles. No stars tonight. No moon. But if it comes now, we remember to face to ward the promised sunshine, our shadows will all fall behind. Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night

Hungarian Beef Goulash Cooked Slow, Goes Fast

OLD WORLD charm flows in the large restaurant of Lou G. Siegel, which is located in the heart of the garment district in New York. High ceilings, wood paneling, glittering chandeliers and mirrors, covered pillars in the main dining room; on the walls, pictures of celebrities, devotees of the restaurant.

Our host, Lou Siegel himself, met our Chef and me at the door when we arrived for dinner. Tall, slender, smiling, agile, soignée in a fancy waistcoat, smartly tailored, with a red carnation in his lapel, Lou Siegel soon introduced the other members of his organization, his son Sidney, grandson Jay, and Murray Ginsberg, food service manager.

After cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, Lou Siegel conducted us to the spicily kitchen, then downstairs to the storage, food, preparation and baking rooms. Magnificent Meats We met the rabbi who supervises all food preparation: saw the magnificent beef, veal, lamb and poultry in cold storage; went into the frozen food departments (the restaurant also prepares frozen kosher foods for store sale).

Then upstairs to a dining room that proved both delicious and unusual. Murray Ginsberg, seated at my right, explained the various odds on which the following menu is based.

DINNER FOR TOMORROW (selected items from Lou Siegel's Restaurant menu) Greek Salad Dinner Rolls Hungarian Beef Goulash en Casserole Broad Noodles Garden Spinach Blueberry Pie Or Fruit Parfait with Sherbet Sauce and Sugar Cookies Coffee or Tea Measurements level; recipes for 6

Profitable Prizes Added To CNE List This Year

Although the C.N.E. is still some months away, now is the time to send for the 1965 Women's Prize List. Nearly an additional thousand dollars is being given in prizes this year. As well as the regular competitions, two exciting and profitable ones have been added.

The Special Candle Making Competition, $25.00 is being offered in prizes. And here is certainly something new in a knitting competition for tea cozies. First prize is $50.00, second $25.00, and third prize $15.00.

In the handicraft section there are classes for pottery and ceramic sculpture, metal crafts, precious metals, wood carving, leather work and rugs. And in each class there is a special Grand Award for best of class.

Quilts continue to be great favourites and there is a special award for best of class. There is also a special award for best of show in the knitting section. As well, there are many other classes for varied types of Home Craft work. The Hat Making Competition which has increased in popularity over the past three years will be continued.

There are special prizes for work of the blind hospitalized persons and for Homes for the Aged and persons over 65 years of age. Baking Day continues to be popular at the Exhibition and this year there are many classes for the enthusiastic cook to enter. Many special awards will be presented. For the junior entrants there is a special for a two-layer white icing butter cake.

All prize-winning entries will be on display during Exhibition in the beautiful Queen Elizabeth Building which houses the Women's Division. In order to obtain the 1965 Prize List, write to: Mrs. E. Jenkins Women's Division Canadian National Exhibition, Exhibition Park, Toronto 2-B, Ontario.

Legion Receives Cheque

Three new members, Mrs. Jack Murphy, Mrs. Foch MacDonald and Mrs. Wallace Jenkins were welcomed as members to the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion by president Mrs. Lillian Hildeby at the regular meeting in the Montague Legion Home recently. The president remarked that membership in the Auxiliary was showing a steady increase as three other new members, Mrs. Marion MacDonald, Mrs. Nan Nicholson and Mrs. Lester Carpenter were accepted last month, and this is very encouraging.

Plans were made for the coming Zone Rally and provision was made for serving supper to those in attendance. It was also decided to cater to the Curling Club banquet on April 22nd.

President, Mrs. Hildeby, presented a substantial cheque to the Montague Branch of the Canadian Legion during their meeting. Several other items of business were discussed and settled.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

DISASTER STRUCK TEETH

LONDON (CP)—Veteran news announcer Michael Brooke was reading the hourly BBC news summary when his top set of false teeth broke in two. He carried on imperturbably, but telephone calls began pouring in, asking what was wrong. Mr. Brooke said he probably sounded drunk, and read the next bulletin with his teeth patched with tape.

OUR CHEF EXPLAINS FRUIT PARFAIT This dessert calls for 1-qt. fruit water, sherbet, and sherbet sauce. Layer the sherbet and sauce alternately in parfait glasses. Finish with sauce. Top with maraschino cherry. Sherbet Sauce: Combine 1 c. each drained canned pineapple, canned apricot halves, sliced peaches, and 1/2 c. red maraschino cherries. Put through coarse knife of food chopper, or buzz 1 min. in blender. Stir and mix in 1 c. apple sauce, 1/2 c. sugar and 1 tsp. rum flavoured extract. Keeps refrigerated up to 1 week.
