A Jury of Women

Who have tested the merits of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills return the verdict that for backache and kidney disorders there is no preparation in any way equal to this great discovery of Dr A W Chase, America's great at physician. This great kidney cure is sold by all dealers at 25 cents a box, and has proved most effectual as a remedy for the many ills to which woman is subject.

G A SHARP, Superintenden, P.E. I.

A WOMAN WHO WOULD

SHE WAS EQUAL TO EVERY PHASE OF THE EMERGENCY.

The Only Effect Upon Her of a Mid-winter Blizzard Was to Sharpen Her Faculties and Make Her Think Quicker Than Usual.

No far search is needed along the wind swept coast of New England to find women of heroic fiber and a fertility of resource as notable as their unselfishness.

During the night of the great "February blizzard" of 1899 one of these good women, living on one of the thoroughfares of the Massachusetts "north shore" kept a light burning and a supply of hot coffee ready for possible need. It was not the first time this "lady bountiful" had watched on wild winter nights lest a sufferer should struggle by her door unseen.

Her husband lay on the sofa, and the rest of the family were abed. The wind shrieked outside, dashing the snow against the panes, and the very house shuddered in the plunges of the storm.

Tree branches broke, telegraph poles snapped and fell, and the drifts in the streets piled higher and higher.

Every little while the sleepless housewife went to the window and looked out. She could see little, for the flying snow was as thick as smoke. Only now and then a flash when the wind blew the fallen electric wires together "made darkness visible" and showed her where the road lay. One of these flashes revealed something that startled her. She called to her husband:

"There's a man wandering round in the snow out on the lawn!"

The drowsy husband thought she might be mistaken.

"There is some one out there, and there's a team in the street stuck fast!"

The husband roused himself and struggled into his boots and ulster. In a very short time he had a lantern lit and was out, capped and mittened, in the storm, while his wife made swift preparations to receive a guest.

It was a sorry looking figure that the man of the house brought in with him—cap and coat, hair, beard and eyebrows powdered white—the effigy of a half frozen teamster who had been stalled in the snow on his way from Marblehead to Salem. The warmth of the room soon brought him to himself, and a few minutes later he was sitting by the fire drinking hot coffee and finding out where he was.

"This is comfort," he said, "but my poor horses—faithful old fellows! I hadn't a thought but I could get home when I"—

"But," interrupted the lady, "we are not going to let your horses freeze. There's a barn at our next neighbor's a few rods farther on."

Her husband stood in his storm rig, thinking of the team, but doubting his ability to extricate it without help.

"My dear madam," said the stranger, "my horses could not be forced a step farther. They're swamped in the snowbank, and the wind in their faces blinds 'em."

"Then unhitch them and bring them up on the veranda and blanket them. They will be out of the wind there—partly at least. No; let me think. We can do better than that," she added. "Lead the poor creatures into the basement laundry. I'll move things out of the way and open the door."

The lady's husband was wondering what would come next. He mildly suggested that the back yard gate was snowed in and could not be opened, but her reply was quick and decisive:

"Lift it off the hinges."

The teamster looked up inquiringly. Her prompt and friendly interest in his case put new life into him. His host was beginning to laugh.

"What she says goes," he exclaimed. "Come, we'll dig out those horses. I never thought before what capital fodder cribs washtubs would make."

After a good deal of floundering the men succeeded in leading the fagged and bewildered beasts to the basement door and stabling them in the laundry. They were a fine pair of grays, and the lady welcomed them with admiring pity. Then another hospitable impulse seized her as she looked at their snow covered backs and sides.

"The poor, dear things! They are cold. Take them into the cellar where the furnace is. Rub them down, and we'll give them a hot supper."

Her husband winked to the teamster. "All right," he said. "It takes a woman to know what a horse wants. But where's the feed?"

"You wait," replied the lady, and skipped up stairs.

"Doesn't she beat all?" remarked the man of the house. "Did you ever see such a woman for expedients? It's always so. I call her 'general caretaker,' for she takes in the whole world. I'm only a private when she commands."

The teamster gave hearty and complimentary assent, but the amused wonder of both men grew perceptibly when the practical woman came down cellar with the "feed" in a big bucket and two big brimmed old straw hats for nose baskets.

"Have you got coffee and baked beans in the pail?" quizzed her husband.

The good wife was laughing now herself, and the hilarity became general when she explained:

"There was only a little Indian meal, but I emptied all the oatmeal, cracked wheat, graham and crackers into the pail and made a hot water mush, and I put in a little salt and a pinch or two of ginger."

But the horses ate it.

When the guest took his leave the next day—as soon as the road was broken out to make travel possible—he felt an embarrassment of gratitude, for his benefactors would take no money.

"After I'd gone to bed last night, thinking of the way you entertain strangers," he said to his hostess, "some of my Bible came back to me, and I told myself I was no angel, but, considering the pains you took for me, I ought to be one. 'Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.' Goodby, and God bless you, and I only wish women like you could vote!"

And, shaking hands warmly, the honest teamster parted from two friends whom he will never forget. Probably his horses never will so long as they travel that road.

DEAR Mr. PATON,—

The telegraph line must be tapped to send you this message. You will be sorry to hear about my accident, but when going at full gallop during a terrible snow storm the deer missed the road and went over a high precipice, taking myself, the sleigh and the Toys with them, it was an awful smash up, but as luck would have it we fell into a terrible snow drift, which saved the Toys from being broken and the deer and myself from been killed or much hurt

It took me about an hour to get myself out of she snow dritt and another hour to get the deer and sleigh eady for the road again. My careful management I did not loose any of the toys. If no more accidents happen I shall be a very short distance from Ch'town on Wednesday, but will telegraph again Monday. "Au Revoir."
