"RETURN OF THE TEXAN" AT THE CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

"Return of the Texan" is a beautiful and stirring new movie. The Twentieth Century-Fox comedy-drama in which Dale Robertson, Joanne Dru and Walter Brennan have the leading roles opens today at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside, to enchant local audiences with a basic heart appeal that classes its way above many a more spectacular and pretentious motion picture. Here is a film that family audiences have been asking for. Simple in outline, it is honest in intent and noble in spirit. The story of a young widower, left with two small children, who faces up to his dislike of city life and returns to the soil on which he was himself raised to bring up his small boys there, "Return of the Texan" has the warmth of the great outdoors, the poignancy of recognizable human drama, the pathos, comedy and wisdom of people who live close to the fundamental things of land and sky, home and family.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JOHN KILBRIDE

There passed peacefully away at Bayside at an early hour on the morning of January 3, one of the community's most respected and oldest members, Mrs. John Kilbride, in her one hundredth year.

Mrs. Kilbride had been in failing health for about four years, during which time she was tenderly nursed and cared for by her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman McIntyre, there where she resided for many years. Their patience and cheerfulness were an inspiration to her host of relatives and friends who visited her during her long illness.

Born at Lot 11, the deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Bulger. There she married John Kilbride and later moved to Port Hill where a family of twelve children were born.

While her affection and faithfulness were centred in her home, she is well remembered for her many acts of kindness and ever readiness to assist anyone at any time.

Her husband predeceased her twenty-nine years ago. Following this she spent many winters visiting members of her family who reside in the United States.

Surviving are the following: Mrs. Marshall McLellan, Grand River; Mrs. Herman McIntyre and Percy Bayside; Peter and Albert, Lincoln, Maine; Thomas, New York; Mrs. James Porkin, Louise and Evelyn, Watertown, Mass.; Mae Ernest and Agnes having predeceased her.

A large concourse of people gathered on the morning of January 7th to attend her funeral which took place at St. Patrick's Church Grand River, where Solemn High Mass of Requiem was celebrated by her grandson, Rev. W. Thomas McLellan, assisted by Rev. Leonard McDonald as deacon, and Rev. W. D. McDonald as sub-deacon. Services at the grave were also conducted by Father McLellan. Her pallbearers were her six grandsons, namely Leo McIntyre, Elmer and Angus McLellan, Lorne, Gussie and Gerald Kilbride.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

The Kirghiz of Western Asia eat their meals with mare's milk. They milk their mares two and sometimes three times a day as we milk our cows.

The immensity of the Shara Desert may be gleaned from the following comparison. If it were a quilt and spread over North America it would cover all of the United States, part of Canada and the Gulf of Mexico.

In some of the rivers of China you'll find thousands of people who live on floating homes built upon rafts. The children of these people play about with little wooden barrels fastened to their backs to keep them afloat should they happen to fall into the water.

When the English, Scotch and Irish crossed the Atlantic to settle in Prince Edward Island, they had to cut their homes out of the woods. There were no sawmills, no stores where nails could be bought, no brickyards, plaster or cement.

Nine-tenths of the Island was wilderness and most of it was covered with magnificent forests which had to be felled before farming could be started. Living as most of us do today in modern homes with all kinds of conveniences, we are apt to forget the hardships of our forefathers who, with axes in hand, looked about for some kind of shelter in which to stay while they tackled the job of building a crude log cabin.

Some followed the custom of the Micmac Indians, and built wigwams, using mats and skins to cover the poles. Six years after the party landed at Belfast and its passengers began to build their log huts, there were only a handful of dwellings on the Island which could boast more than one story, outside of the capital.

In those days every man was his own carpenter, builder, furniture maker and what have you. He felled the trees and hewed them into lumber. Then, with the help of his neighbors, the log cabin was erected.

In these early homes the logs were so cut as to leave openings for windows and doors. The building was made wind proof by chinking and most of their roofs were covered with split shingles which lasted well over a century.

Every log cabin had its large fireplace, crude cooking utensils, and humble furniture. Babies were frequently rocked in maple sugar troughs instead of a cradle, and junior reached his attic by climbing a ladder which led from the kitchen.

Such dwellings seem crude to us now but they were the first permanent homes of nearly everyone. When I was four years old, my mother wanted me to begin school, but since five was the minimum age, she juggled records and had me admitted. Now, although I am 15, everyone thinks I'm 16, and I was just given a sweet sixteen party at which I received many nice gifts. I'm afraid if my true age is revealed, I'll be put back a year in school.

ANSWER: It's doubtful if you'll be put back a class now, because of your mother's prevarication. However, since it would be most embarrassing for you to reveal yourself as 15 after the sweet 16 party, why not wait until you finish high school and are ready to enter college? The change in date can be made on the college records.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a man of 53 with a wife of 39 to whom I have been married four years. We have a 2-year-old baby and though I love her very much, I'm just too old to have a baby around. I'm a nervous wreck and my work is suffering. Should I get a divorce or leave town?

ANSWER: It isn't as easy to shunt obligations as you'd like it to be. Wouldn't it be better for you to face the fact that you have a baby, that she certainly won't be a baby much longer, and try to conquer your own nerves for a while? Don't make your wife's life miserable, either, by nagging about the child.

DEAR MISS DIX: A year ago I met a very nice soldier. He said he loved me and wanted to marry me. I love him, too. We wrote each other for a while, then he was transferred and I haven't heard from him since. I keep writing and writing but get no answer.

ANSWER: It's certainly obvious that your soldier's affections are not very stable. You're being foolish, and wasting postage, by continuing your letters to him.

DEAR MISS DIX: Six months ago I married, for the first time, at the age of 50. My husband has a small business, but never discusses it with me. I have some money of my own, which I would like to keep, but he is always asking me for some. He only gives me $10 a week, and thinks anything else I need should come out of my money. Since that's the only security I have, I don't want to take it out of the bank.

ANSWER: And right you are! You don't know too much about this newly acquired husband of yours, and he doesn't seem to be treating you too well. I'm afraid once you part with your money, he'll be ready to part with you. Hang onto the tangibles!
