Visual Arts Study To Be Upgraded

Officials of the Confederation Centre Art Gallery are planning to upgrade study of the visual arts in this province.

This fall will see the beginning of the program, when students throughout the province will be given the opportunity right in their own schools to view slides of paintings hung in well known galleries throughout the world.

Mrs. James Lapsley, art extension education officer for the Confederation Centre Art Gallery will travel to schools in the province showing the slides, discussing the color, composition and style of the paintings, and outlining the history of the artists.

Moncrieff Williamson, curator, hopes that Mrs. Lapsley will be able to visit as many rural schools as possible during the fall and spring terms, and Charlottetown schools during the winter.

REGIONAL SCHOOLS FIRST

The program will be conducted in the regional high schools, and will be on a first come first served basis.

Mrs. Lapsley stated that any teachers who would like slide shows or help in teaching art should write to her at the Confederation Centre Art Gallery in Charlottetown. "The study of music has reached a high level in P.E.I. and it is hoped that the study of the visual arts now that we have the gallery" she said.

She added that after school tours might help the students who live in Charlottetown. There is no admittance charge for students, but they must be accompanied by a parent or teacher.

The Coutts-Hallmark children's exhibition will be hung during this week, she said, stating that this exhibition is representative of students from across Canada.

STUDIED IN ENGLAND

Born in Worcestershire, England, Mrs. Lapsley studied two years at Edinburgh University and four years design at Wolberhampton College of Arts in England. She was a teacher of art in England for two years and came to Canada in 1954.

She lived for a time in Newfoundland where she painted scenes of that province, taught at the Sanitorium and conducted private classes. Her paintings have been exhibited in Toronto.

Since coming to Charlottetown she has executed the backdrop of the old legislative building for the ladies aid fashion show, and reproduced it for the centennial committee in Ottawa.

At present she is filing the collection of slides that will be shown at schools this year.

Rally Day Service Held

ALBERTON — Carolyn Fraser conducted the rally day service in Alberton United Church Sunday morning. Each Sunday School class had a part in the service.

The story, "Growing Towards God" was told by Mrs. Fred Leard. The New Testament lesson was read by Fern Fraser. The children sang "Jesus Loves Me." Karen Hastings sang "My Task" and Leigh and Ricky Hardy sang "When He Cometh". The organist was Mrs. David MacDonald.

Members of the Sunday School staff are Henry Wallace Mrs. Fred Leard, Shirley MacArthur, Mrs. Ralph Fraser, Mrs Reginald Travers and Mrs. Wesley Hardy.

OIL HELPS CATTLE

The search for oil in Australia's desert regions is aiding the local cattle industry as unsuccessful bore holes invariably produce water if nothing else.

National Employment Service Seen As Aid To Industrial Development

Frank B. Ashmole, special services supervisor of the National Employment Service, Charlottetown, was guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of Rotary held at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. Robert Smith was chairman and Harry Bartlett co-chairman.

Mr. Ashmole's address dealt with "services available to employer's and employee's through the National Employment Service."

"The specific function of the service is that of a placement agency for assisting workers to find suitable employment and for employers to find suitable workers", the speaker said. Because this involves the responsibility of bringing order into the labor market, this function is a broader concept than commonly held of a labor exchange", he said.

The speaker went on to say "we must remember it is a federal government agency with a definite role to play in the economic policies of the community". The primary aim of any economic policy is the achievement and maintenance of the highest possible level of employment. Industrial development must be complemented with a balanced labor supply and demand situation, he said.

LESS THAN MAXIMUM

"Every man who is employed in a job which does not fully utilize his talents and skills is contributing something less than his possible maximum to the national production. Every employer who is satisfied to operate his business with workers whose qualifications are less than those required by the job, is passing up the opportunity to contribute the maximum possible to the gross national product, and also, to the success of his own business". Mr. Ashmole stated.

"I am particularly interested, as a special services officer, in counselling and also placing the vocationally handicapped. This necessitates the assessing of just what the handicap is and just what the man is able to do. Then through counselling and the necessary training, channel the man to suitable employment. We never send a man to an employer on sympathy", Mr. Ashmole said.

Stressing the need for a "really effective counselling program", the speaker suggested more programs than one or two a year. "The Home and School Association has become very interested in the field and I am sure will press for more guidance counsellors".

The speaker stated that "the credit for growing interest can go in a large measure to national employment service and the Rotary Club"

As an example of the steady expansion of the service, last year the NES through its special placement officers referred 30,000 employed people for training and was able to place 80 per cent of these people in grainful employment, the speaker said

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL NEED

"Employers are going to have to take a greater share in the content of the courses given at Vocational Schools. They are the consumers of the products of these schools", he said.

Mr. Ashmole was born in England and came to Canada in 1935. He served three years in the RCMP and later served as welfare officer at Halifax and then as Rehabilitation Officer at Point Edward Sanatorium, Sydney, N.S.

He was introduced by the chairman and on being thanked by the co-chairman was presented with a momento of the occasion.

Rotarian Frank Pellerin, retiring hotel manager received a standing ovation as he was presented with a gift from the club by president Andrew Likely, who said "Rotarian Frank and his Rotary Ann Doris have endeared themselves socially and in the business life of the community. They have done a fine job and we all agree that their sense of cooperation has been terrific. Best wishes for a happy and lengthy retirement and the assurance of a hearty welcome to Charlottetown at any time."

NEW MANAGER WELCOMED

The new hotel manager Jan Gruda was given a hearty welcome by the president on behalf of Rotary.

Chairman Hugh Simpson of the Rotary Auction Committee announced Tuesday Dec. 1 as the date of the big event.

George Chevarie was welcomed back to club activity following hospitalization due to a shooting accident.

Hope was expressed by the president that Rev. T. H. B. Somers, now undergoing examination in hospital at Halifax will receive a favorable report.

Visiting Rotarians were Eric Woodside and Earl MacEachern, Summerside; Stan Steeves, Moncton and Jan Gruda, city.

Car On Wrong Side Rules Inquest Jury

A coroner's jury that inquired into a car-truck crash Oct. 3 on the Trans-Canada Highway at New Haven, which claimed the life of former Charlottetown resident, Walter Joseph Morrissey, 57, of 39 Golding Street, Saint John, N.B., Monday night found that Mr. Morrissey's car was travelling on the wrong side of the highway at the time of the accident.

The coroner's jury attached no blame to Herbert Curtis MacFadyen, 21, of Crapaud, driver of the three-ton truck involved.

The coroner's jury recommended that all highways be clearly marked with white lines or distinct warning signs, immediately following construction.

The fatal accident occurred about 7 p.m. Oct. 3, when Mr. Morrissey was enroute to Charlottetown to attend the funeral of a sister, Mrs. Martin Power of 19 McGill Terrace, the following morning.

The coroner's jury took 55 minutes to reach its verdict. The inquest was held at the Charlottetown City Hall, with Dr. Lemuel E. Prowse, chief coroner for Prince Edward Island, presiding. The Crown was represented by Alan K. Scales. A total of seven witnesses were heard.

Assistant provincial pathologist, Dr. Andre Aquino, testified the cause of Mr. Morrissey's death was laceration of the aorta. Dr. Aquino said his findings showed an alcoholic blood content of 2.1 milligrams per millilitre.

HIGH ALCOHOLIC CONTENT

Coroner Dr. Prowse said this alcoholic blood content was "a relatively large amount and in most individuals would indicate intoxication."

RCMP Constable James Couse of the Charlottetown detachment, who investigated the accident, presented two pints of liquor, one partly empty, which he said were found in the trunk of Mr. Morrissey's car

Driver of the three-ton truck involved in the accident, Mr. MacFayden, testified:

"We were just coming around the turn in New Haven when we meet the trailer truck. I noticed a set of parking lights (Mr. Morrissey) cut across the road onto our side. When I first noticed him he was on his own side, and he cut straight across. I applied the brakes. I thought he was going into a driveway there. But he kept coming right along. If he had kept coming right along there would have been plenty of room between the truck and the edge of the pavement. And he turned to his right and caught the right hand corner of the truck," said Mr. MacFadyen.

Owen Eric McEwen, 17, of Long Creek, a passenger in the MacFayden truck, said: "I saw a car and thought it was turning off the side of the road, with its parking lights on, and just two car lengths ahead of us it started to pull back onto its own side and it hit us on the right hand side," said Mr. McEwen.

SAW CAR PASS

John Milford Buchanan of Churchill, said he was driving toward New Haven, and the Morrissey car passed his from behind. He said the Morrissey car had its parking lights on. The accident occurred ahead shortly after, said Mr. Buchanan, with the Morrissey car coming to a stop crosswise on the left hand side of the road, going toward Charlottetown, and the MacFayden truck at an angle in about the middle of the highway, headed away from Charlottetown.

Joseph Harold White of Bunbury, a trailer truck driver, said he had met the MacFayden truck on the turn. He said he saw the parking lights of Mr. Morrissey's car behind his trailer truck in the rear-view mirror. He said it was between daylight and dusk; it had been raining, and he thought the road was slippery. He said the accident happened on a "gentle curve."

Dr. Angus A. MacLeod, of Bonshaw, told of being called to the accident scene.

Members of the coroner's jury were: Foreman, Boyce Elmer Stevenson, Parkdale, Gordon William MacKenzie, 11 Falconwood Road, Parkdale, William Frederic Burke, Southport; Donald Harold Fraser, Sherwood; Reginald William Bryan, Parkdale; Clifford Benjamin Sentner, New Wiltshire and Donald Joseph Gillis, 19 Summer Street, Charlottetown.

DISCOVER MOUNTAINS

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet scientists claim the discovery of an 800-mile long mountain range under the Antarctic icecap near Queen Maud Land. Tass reports that the peaks tower to nearly 7,000 feet and are buried under hearly two miles thick. The range has been named after the late Russian scientist Vladimir Ivanovich Vernadsky, a pioneer in geochemistry.
