Born at Greenfield, P.E.I. in 1900, Father Sullivan later moved to Cardigan where he received his early education. He will long be remembered at St. Dunstan's as being one of the best athletes of his day. He took his seminary course at the Grand Seminary in Quebec and was ordained in Edmonton in September, 1925.

For about a year after his ordination, Father Sullivan assisted Monsignor Peter Hughes, now of Regina Archdiocese in Missionary work in Edmonton archiocese. After a year as pastor o fRadway he was appointed to Clyde in 1927.

They played games and had contests and were very generously treated by their teacher, Mrs. LeLacheur. The Women's Institute also treated the children with candy and fruit. After the games Santa Claus appeared and gave gifts to all the children and the teacher. The children tell about the fun they had and the happy afternoon spent in the school.

One Time Leading Actress Dies In Toronto Aged 81

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Anglin, 81, at the peak of her career one of the leading actresses in North America, died Tuesday in a Toronto nursing home.

In private life Miss Anglin was Mrs. Howard Hull. Her husband, an author and playwright she married in New York in 1911, died about 20 years ago.

Miss Anglin, who was childless and had no close relatives, entered the nursing home about four years ago when her health began to fail.

She was born in the Speaker's apartment in the old House of Commons at Ottawa. After several years in Saint John, N.B., she came to Toronto with her family at the age of seven.

Almost overnight she rose from theatrical obscurity to stardom. But after many years in the limelight she found the theatre closing its doors to her.

She was the daughter of the late T. W. Anglin, one - time Speaker of the House of Commons, and his wife, the former Ellen McTavish.

Miss Anglin was educated at Loretto Abbey and at the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Sault au Recollet near Montreal.

Before she was 20 she went to New York to study at a dramatic school. Her first metropolitan stage appearance was in a Civil War play, Shenandoah, by Bronson Howard.

REACHES STARDOM

She leaped to fame at the end of the 1890s with her appearance as Roxanne in the late Richard Mansfield's production of Cyrano de Bergerac. She remained with Mansfield until 1900 when she went back to Charles Frohman, who had given her her first Broadway role. She teamed with Henry Miller, also a Canadian to reach the peak of her popular career.

Miss Anglin and Miller teamed to produce William Vaughan Moody's drama, The Great Divide in which she played the part of Ruth Jordan.

Her downfall as a stage star followed her marriage to Hull. She was devoted to Hull, a man considerably younger than herself and she believed he could act.

But managers though otherwise. In 1929 she walked out during production of two plays and caused one management to suspend an opening four months while it trained a substitute. The rows which caused her to leave both plays were over roles for her husband.

THEATRES ARE COOL

For some years New York theatres locked their doors against her. She performed in occasional small road shows, in stock or in radio productions.

By 1936 the managerial wounds had healed to some extent and Miss Anglin returned to the New York stage in Ivor Novello's Fresh Fields. Subsequently she appeared in summer theatres then beginning to spread through the northeastern states.

Andrew S. MacDonald
A Tribute
By J. T. P.

ANDREW S. MACDONALD

"Words, my stock, are wanting to commend
So great a poet, so good a friend".
—Dryden

Those words come to mind as I try to put down a belated and brief tribute to the late Andrew S. MacDonald of Cardigan. True, he was not a "poet" in the conventional sense. That is to say, he did not write verse to sell in the market. But those who knew him well will agree that he possessed poetic insights in abundance, in the sense that he treasured the intangible values of life and preferred the riches of the spirit to the tinsels of material possessions; and few of his contemporaries had a greater grasp of the poetic heritage of our language. Certainly, he was a "good friend." Hundreds of men and women—yes, and children, too, for whom he had a particular respect—will say that in his passing they lost a true friend. No greater eulogy could be spoken of any mortal.

He was a man of grace and charm, those qualities which season human relations and which take the common things of life and lift them to the stars. Whether he was in one's study, discussing some new literary work or a classic of ancient times; in shop, dispensing groceries or other needs to customers of long standing, or at the festive board making humourous chit-chat about little happenings—his grace and charm were manifest, like a "city, set on a hill, that cannot be hid".

He was, withal, a man of considerable intellectual skill. He could say with Bunyan (though he would have been the last person in the world to say it): "I will talk of things heavenly, or things earthy; things moral, or things evangelical; things sacred, or things profane; things past, or things to come; things foreign or things at home; things more essential, or things circumstantial."

In his trust in the eternal verities of the faith by which he died, he was "like a rock that cannot be moved." He had bound them to his soul with hoops of steel. Yet, he was no sectarian; and intolerance and ridicule at another's beliefs and traditions never entered his heart. His was a curious and inquiring mind strengthened by faith in eternal things, the things which are not seen His epitaph could well be that of a theologian for whom he had a special regard, John Henry, Cardinal Newman: "Ex Umbris et Imaginibus in Veritatem" - from shadows and symbols into the truth.

"Good night, sweet prince, and flights of angels sing thee to thy rest."

Pilot Plant Layoff Expected

BATHURST, N. B. (CP)— Mayor R. J. Cormier said Monday a town delegation will visit Fredericton soon to discuss curtailment of operations by Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corporation Limited here with provincial officials.

About 40 men were laid off when the company's pilot plant completed its operation, a layoff which had been expected.

But there are persistent rumors that up to 200 men wille be laid off, Mayor Cormier said.

Purpose of the delegation would be to obtain information, Mayor Cormier said. "There are conflicting rumors and statements. This is affecting the economy of the town and the employment situation."

Brunswick Mining and Smelting operates two properties, about five miles apart and about 15 miles from Bathurst.

The layoff at the pilot plant was expected as the plant had served its purpose, but further layoffs would be a cause for concern, town officials said.

Protests Some Aid Documents Not Supplied

OTTAWA (CP) — H. J. Robichaud, New Brunswick Liberal, Tuesday protested in the Commons that he has not been supplied with all the documents exchanged between Ottawa and Fredericton on federal aid for New Brunswick power development.

The Commons passed an order Nov. 6 that correspondence on the matter be tabled.

Mr. Robichaud, member for Gloucester, said the correspondend refers to a document sent by Resources Minister Alvin Hamilton to Premier Flemming of New Brunswick but that the document itself has not been tabled.

Mr. Hamilton said the document in question concerned Progressive Conservative policy on federal aid for power development in the Maritimes and was therefore not part of his department's records. This document had been shown to Premier Flemming.

Speaker Roland Michener suggested that Mr. Robichaud place a motion on the Commons order paper calling for production of the document. The Commons then could deal with the matter separately.

British Exporters May Get Valuable Tips From Mission

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Britain's exporters may soon get a tip on ways to crack the huge Canadian market held by United States producers.

The guide will be contained in the final report of the 50-man Canadian trade mission which spent a month touring Britain.

The government plans to summon the members to Ottawa for a wind-up session Jan. 20-21, to prepare recommendations for diverting a slice of Canada's imports from the U.S. to the United Kingdom.

It appears certain members will urge Britain to embark on a big advertising campaign in Canada and give priority to Canadian orders to provide fast delivery.

These two points were emphasized by Trade Minister Churchill, mission leader, and deputy James Duncan of Toronto when the mission ended its tour Dec. 18.

The two said British industry is at a serious disadvantage in advertising in Canada because of the wide circulation of American media. Companies would have to spend more on Canadian advertising with every sales avenue explored, including the Anglo-Canadian sentiment in "buy British" campaigns.

U.K. SHOWS INTEREST

Britain's trade commissioners at Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax will be at Ottawa to meet with the Canadian mission. Sir William Rootes, chairman of Britain's dollar export council, will also attend.

The mission's report likely will be published in February.

All this work of correlating reports will be in the hands of Peter Stursberg of Victoria and Ottawa, a China-born Canadian war correspondent who helped organize public relations during the tour.

The 43-year-old Stursberg, of German, Irish and British extraction, left a Toronto Star editorial post last year to become a research worker for Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

His press work overseas found so much governm favor that he was put in charge of a newly-organized trade mission office.

Mr. Stursberg, whose father was a postal officer on the Chinese mainland years ago, worked on Canadian and British newspapers and for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He covered wartime landings in Sicily and Italy, the fighting in Southern France and the caputre of Rome.
