

In Search of the Green

by Laurie Murphy

Whether you spent your reading break reading or not is none of my business. My concern is that you had a break of some kind, and that it was relatively free from financial stress. (It can be such a drag to have free time with no funds.) Perhaps, next year your budgeting will be such that your reading break is everything that you need it to be.

This year still holds midterms for some of you and I hope all goes well. When you have free time I invite you to drop by student services for a look at the undergraduate and graduate financial aid binders and accompanying files.

There are still any awards available.

The Provincial student aid appeals board met recently, and will probably meet a few more times before the semester is out. If you are thinking about pursuing an appeal of your own, then get me to have a look at it first. I can give advice, or relieve some of those unnecessary fears, or both. I have been the student representative on the board for three years now, and, believe me, the process is not as bad as you think.

The committee meeting concerning the fee 9th deadline UPEI Awards is scheduled for Friday March 2nd. It usually takes another week or so before notice is received by the winners.

The St. Dunstan's board of Governors administer two scholarships. I hope this information answers many of you that had questions. The Mary Ellen Mac-Donald scholarship awarded for leadership is still not decided, is march 19th. The George Mac-

Donald Scholarship Awarded for above average academic and athletic performance has a deadline date of March 1st.

I hope you are successful in your applications. That's That.
