The Examiner.

Charlottetown, July 5, 1875.

JUSTICE DEFEATED.

An editor is, under certain circumstances, a dangerous animal. If he happens to be upon a Grand Jury, the most notorious criminal in the land may escape unwhipped of justice, should he, in the discharge of his editorial duties, have commented upon the criminal's case. In such a position he is, negatively, dangerous to the state; for the security of the state depends, to a great extent, upon the prompt and vigorous administration of justice.

The Court last week decided that, because Mr. Caven of the Herald office, was one of the Grand Jury which brought a Bill of Indictment against Mr. Gidley, late Keeper of the Lunatic Asylum, and because the Herald had previously contained an article criticizing Mr. Gidley's conduct as Keeper, the indictment should be quashed; for Mr. Caven, having expressed an opinion in the matter, was not an impartial Grand Juror. As the people of the Island have, through the Secretary of State for the Colonies, been officially rebuked by the Government of the British Empire, on account of the gross abuses charged by the Grand Jury respecting the condition and management of the Lunatic Asylum, and as Mr. Gidley protests he is not guilty of the misdemeanors laid to his charge, it is, we think, greatly to be regretted, in the interests of both parties, that the trial was not heard—that the people of the Island had not an opportunity to set themselves right before the world—and that Mr. Gidley had not a chance to prove his innocence. Still we find no fault with the decision of the judges, although—seeing that the Grand Jury did not and cannot pronounce a final verdict—it seems a rather strange one.

It is possible that the ruffian who assaulted the woman in the graveyard may escape on a precisely similar pretext; for Mr. J. H. Fletcher of the Argus office, was one of the Grand Jury who brought in the Bill of Indictment against the man charged with the crime; and is quite possible that the Argus contained a pretty strong condemnation of the vile outrage, and its brutal perpetrator. To prevent such an occurrance in future, it would be well to withold from editors the right and the honor of sitting upon Grand Juries.

"THE WATEROUS SYSTEM."

The peculiarity of the 'waterous system' of supplying towns with water is—we quote the Toronto Globe—

"The substitution of stationary steam force pumps for hydrostatic pressure. No reservoir is necessary. A stationary steam engine erected at the source of water supply drives a force pump (one or more if required), and the supply of water is direct from the pump to where it is needed. Pipes connected with the pump are laid at a sufficient depth under ground to protect them from the effects of frost. These pipes are tapped by hydrants at any required distance from each other. Two lines of hose can be attached to each hydrant, and they are so constructed that when they are shut the water runs out into the pipes, and, therefore, they are not liable to be frozen up. When a fire breaks out, all that is required is to attach the hose to the hydrants and turn on the water. All the force of the pumps being concentrated upon the hydrants that are open, an abundance of water is supplied direct from the pumps, the force, of course, depending upon the power of the engine."

The effectiveness of the system in the suppression of fire is shown in the following extract from the report of a deputation from Fredericton, who inspected the waterous works at Brantford, Ontario:

"At a distance of 2,094 feet from the engine house the hose was attached to the hydrant extending 100 feet, with a ⅞ inch nozzle, this threw a stream 123 feet horizontally, to where the water would be effective. Another hydrant was opened at the adjoining corner, and to it another 100 feet of hose attached with a nozzle similar in size to the first and with like effect. After this a 1⅛ inch nozzle was placed on the branch pipe; this threw a stream 153 feet horizontally. Both streams were thrown over a flag staff in the centre of the square, said to be over 100 feet high. The elevation at this point was 42 feet above the works. Another hose 100 feet in length was attached to the hydrant 330 feet from the last mentioned, and with a ⅞ inch nozzle, the water was thrown 123 feet horizontally. Another hydrant was opened at the extreme end of the street, and at a further distance of 1,354. Two hundred feet of hose were attached, with ⅞ inch and 1⅛ inch nozzles, both streams doing efficient service at 123 feet from the nozzle. The whole distance from the work was 3,778 feet or nearly ¾ of a mile, the ground between the second and last hydrant being nearly level. The five streams of water were kept working at the respective distances named for over half an hour, without any diminution in the distance thrown. The highest water pressure used at the engine did not exceed 105 pounds to the square inch, carrying 75lbs steam pressure, when the greatest force was required. While playing three streams of water, only one pump was used; both, however, were in operation with the five streams playing."

An idea of the effect of the 'Waterous System' upon insurance may be had from a statement in the Toronto Globe article before quoted. It will be noticed that in some cases the insurer reduced the amount of his policy after the works were in operation, considering himself quite as safe with a low policy as he was before with a high one. The following is the statement:—

Leg Broken.—On Friday evening last, a horse owned and driven by Mr. William Rodd, sen., of Brackley Point Road, ran away on Pownal Street. Mr. Rodd was thrown out of the wagon and had his leg broken. Mr. S Mitchell, of this city, was also in the wagon, and had his nose badly bruised.

DEATH BY DROWNING.

The pleasure of the Holiday on Thursday last, was sadly marred by the sudden and untimely death of Edward Whelan—the only son of a widowed mother—the only son of the late Honorable Edward Whelan. The weather on Thursday was fine, and in the afternoon, pleasure boats were sailing on all parts of the harbor. Among the number was one owned by Mr. John Snelgrove, and occupied by Patrick McQuaid, of the Examiner office, Leo Harrington, and William Meikle, of the Herald, John Burns and the deceased. About four o'clock a squall was seen approaching, and, in most of the boats, precautions were taken against it. The crew of Snelgroves boat, however, either not apprehend the danger, or carelessly neglected to take in sail till too late. When a short distance off Southport wharf the storm broke upon them with great suddness and fury, the boat was capsized, and they were precipitated into the water. Fortunately the craft was light and tight, and did not sink. Those who were saved clung to her; but poor Whelan struck out for the shore. The disaster was observed from the wharfs, and soon, a row boat, manned by Captain Gavin, James Hennessey and Angus Gallant, together with the steamer Elfin and her crew, were to the rescue. McQuaid, Meikle, Burns and Harrington were taken into the row boat, and as quickly as possible, removed to Murphy's, Southport. Whelan, who was a bold and powerful swimmer, appears to have been seized with cramps, after having swam a short distance. The Elfin came to within a few yards; and a line, which touched his arm, was thrown to him, but he did not heed it; and sank immediately. When he rose one of the men threw a life buoy with such precision that it touched his breast. He was, however too far gone to avail himself of it, and soon sank to rise no more in life.

After the accident deep feelings of sympathy with the doubly bereaved widow were expressed. Her earthly hopes had all been centered in her boy; and there was every prospect that they would be realized. He was a promising youth of nineteen. He had been preparing himself for the profession of his brilliant father; and only the day before his death he had, after a short period of study in St. Dunstan's College, carried off a prize for proficiency in English composition. But he is gone—

"Gone in the flush of youth!
Gone ere his heart had felt earth's withering care,
Ere the stern world had soiled his spirits truth,
Or sown dark sorrow there.

Fled like a dream away!
But yesterday mid life's auroral bloom,
To-day sad winter desolate and grey
Sighs round his lonely tomb.

Fond hearts were beating high,
Fond eyes were watching for the loved one gone,
And gentle voices, dreaming he was nigh,
Talked of his glad return.

Beloved youth, farewell,
To thee, we trust a happier life is given,
One tie to earth for us has loosed its spell,
Another formed for heaven."

MR. CARTWRIGHT AND THE BANKS.

(From the Halifax Reporter.)

We are pleased to notice that Mr. Cartwright has at length definitely backed down from the perilous position he had assumed about the Bank deposits. He created a panic, and finally found that he had driven the banks into a corner and roused their ire to such an extent that that they flatly refused to agree to his circular or pay over the deposits to the Government. They absolutely defied the Minister of Finance. He thus stands in the position of a man who, after bullying himself, meets with a bigger bully, who gives him more of his own coin than he cares for. The Government has disgraced itself by the course pursued. After provoking a quarrel with the banks needlessly, and apparently in sheer wantonness, the Government find themselves the weaker body and have to yield. The real governing power in the country, then, are the Banks and not the people. The Grit Government, after all its boasts, is really the tool of the Banks of the Dominion—the mere registrars of the will of the Banks.

At the same time, while the Government is sinking beneath contempt; 1st, for having provoked a quarrel with the banks; and second, for having succumbed—we cannot but be pleased that the banks have won, because the success of the Government would have been the ruin of the country. The Government has been humiliated by the banks, and the people rejoice over the humiliation. That is about the position; and yet it is an anomalous position. The Government of a country should be the strongest force in the country. In the case of the Grit Government it is not. It meekly yielded last winter to the dictation which imposed Separate Schools upon the new Province of the Sascatchewan. It bent the knee to the absurd rider of Cauchon's on the New Brunswick question; and now it prostrates itself before the Banking institutions and promises to behave itself better. It goes on like a man running from the officers of justice in close pursuit of him for murder. He turns and doubles. He falls down and rises up and cuts up a variety of evolutions so as to distract the aim of the riflemen who are after him. The Grit Government have kept power by a series of well-timed falls. They hold on paradoxical as it may appear, by letting go. They retain their positions by dropping off of them. They remain rulers by careful abdications of power. It's easy but not honorable. It's calculating, but not calculated to advance the dignity of the country. Like a fawning, wheedling fellow, a Polonious-like individual who echoes what his master says whether he declares the cloud looks like a 'weesse' or a 'whale'—the Government seek to grow in the grace of the people by bowings and scrapings, by fawning and flattering now this power and now that, trying occasionally to act the bully, but rapidly rushing to its more natural character—the fawning hound—cringing, like the old Roman Attorney at the heels of his great patron. A sturdy people like the people of the Dominion will surely spurn such servile flatterers who, alernately, boisterously threaten and abjectedly wheedle. If Mr. Cartwright's cart was going in the right direction when he sent it with an order to convey the deposits away from the banks, then he should not have issued a new order to turn the cart in a wrong direction. If it was going by his order in a wrong direction he should never have given the order; thus he would have escaped the chagrin of having to add another to his numerous attempts at bullying, dwindling down to the direct opposite. If he felt the times were unpropitious, or that he was weak from any cause, he should not have tried a fall with the banks, which has resulted in his coming undermost.

The Inebriate Asylum.—The (Halifax) Recorder states that the property in Dartmouth on the Preston Road, so well known as the beautiful residence of the late Col. Sinclair, has been leased for the purpose of the Asylum, and will be ready for the opening of the institution on the 1st of August. About $3000 have been collected towards its support in Halifax alone, exclusive of the Dartmouth contribution.

Neil Currie vs. Donald Farquharson. Action of trespass; case going on.

On Friday, Mr. McLeod moved to quash the indictment against R. M. Gidley, late Keeger of the Lunatic Asylum, on the gaounds that one of the Grand Jury who filed it was a relative of an inmate of the Aaylum, and that another—Mr. John Caven of the Herald—had editorially condemned Gidley previoms to the time the indictment was made. The Judge decided to quash the proceedings.

The Change of Gauge—Compliment to Mr. Manager Luttrell.—We the undersigned, for ourselves and fellow passengers, beg to express our cordial appreciation of the courtesy and attention extended to us by R. Luttrell, Esq., Railway Superintendent, and our admiration of the energy show by the men employed by him in the change of gauge. We arrived at Moncton by a broad guage train at 3 a. m. this morning, and at 10 a. m. we were forwarded by special train, narrow gauge, to meet the Prince Edward Island steamer at Point du Chene. The prompt accommodation was of great importance to us all, and to one of our number a favor which he can never forget, and the manly kindness with which it was rendered by Mr. Luttrell made it doubly valuable.

A P. E. Island Thief.—One of the parties who stole the trunk from the Right Market Hotel was arrested yesterday by Detective Hutt and Sergt. N. Power, who had the matter in hand. A man who gave his name as Robert Montagu boarded at the hotel, and his movements were considered suspicious. He was arrested, and the and the trunk was found at Vibert's boarding house, where it had been left by two men who were in company with so-called Montagu. These men had broken open the trunk, taken out the contents and put in their old garments. It is supposed that they have left the City, as they can not be found. Montagu's real name is Lawrence Hickey. He belongs to P. E. Island, and is said to have committed several crimes of which he is wanted in that Province.—Halifax Chronicle.

Card.—The members of the Band of the 62d Volunteer Battalion, beg to return their sincere thanks to the members of the Encampment of St. John, and to Mr. T. N. Robertson in particular, for the kindness and attention shown to them during the recent excursion to Prince Edward Island.

A. Blain,
Chairman Band Committee.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMERICAN BUCKEYE!

EVERYWHERE TRIUMPHANT.

The subscribers have imported for this season a number of these excellent

Self-raking & Reaping Machines,

The Buckeye has been so long and so favorbly known by the farmers of this Island, that it is unnecessary for us to say much in its favor. The fact that during the season of 1874, the has taken 14 first prizes at field trials in Europe, and 72 in different States of the Union, in competition with the Champion, Wood, Kirby, and others, establishes its reputation as King of the Harvest Fields. It is now the most universally used, and the most popular Machine in the world.

BUCKEYE

The Cutter Bar.

of the Buckeye is in front of the driver so that he can see his work without turning his head and looking backwards while endeavoring to drive his horses straight, as he is compelled to do in the case of Machines having the Cutting Gear behind the driver. By a simple contrivance the driver, from his seat, can raise and lower the whole platform so as to pick up lodged grain. This cannot be done on any machine that has the Cutter Bar in rear of the driver. He must get off the machine in order to lower it on the outside which necessitates some loss of time. Another advantage which the Buckeye possesses over all other machines is its simplicity of construction, and the ease and safety with which it can be operated.

The Buckeye Machines which we offer for sale this season are superior to any hitherto sold here.

—ALSO—

The Patent Self-Operating

Whitecomb Hay Rake.

We have a supply of these Rakes which have proved to be the best ever imported into this country. We have received from well-known intelligent farmers who have purchased from us, a large number of testimonials, which can be seen at our office.
