

Miles and miles of beaches provide sun, fun for everyone

Beaches of dazzling pink and white sand, sloping gently to the sea, stretch for more than 1,000 miles around the shoreline of beautiful Prince Edward Island, a red and green fairland set like a gem in the blue waters of the Gulf of Saint Lawrence on Canada's Atlantic coast.

Sunshine and surf combine with salt water and sand dunes to make the island a veritable paradise for those seeking a seaside vacation.

The warmest salt water bathing north of Florida is found at these famous beaches where the average water temperature in the summer months is a high 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Happy families spend the entire day relaxing on a sandy beach at their favorite seaside resort when they visit the island. Because of the vast expanse of seashore there is never any crowding on Prince Edward Island beaches and any degree of privacy attainable within easy reach of most resorts.

From sand dune to surf, the beaches are 500 to 1,000 feet wide at low tide and also have space to spare when the tide is in. The gentle slope of the shoreline makes for a maximum of safety and allows the sun to warm up the water much more quickly.

As an added precaution, life-guards are stationed at some of the larger resorts.

Some of the finest beaches with the most highly developed facilities are to be found along the 25-mile stretch of land on the north shore known as the National Park. Here an excellent swimming and special bathhouses have been erected for the convenience of the bather.

A number of the island's better known seaside resorts are located along the Park. These include Cavendish, North Rustico, Brackley, Stanhope and Dalrymple. Accommodations of all types, from hotels and motels to cottages and farm tourist homes, provide facilities ranging from deluxe resort to comfortable tourist home atmosphere for the visitor.

Equally enjoyable swimming is to be had on the east coast at Souris, Montague and Panmure Islands; along the south shore at Wood Islands, Charlotteville, Argyle Shore and Summerside; in the west from Cavendish to Tignish, Alberton and Kildare.

No part of this tiny, sea-girt province is very far from the sea. Visitors deriving into the delights of life at a farm tourist home in the interior are never more than a few minutes drive from a beach or a good bathing shore on one of the many picturesque rivers which wind largely inland from the ocean.

For a relaxed, carefree holiday by the sea, there is no better spot than Prince Edward Island. After an invigorating swim in Island waters, nothing can be more pleasant or restful than an idle hour or more stretched out on the golden sands of a beckoning beach. A few days of this fare is sufficient for a visitor to acquire a tan which will be the envy of his friends back home.

The best way to judge the quality of Island beaches is to come to the province and see for yourself. More and more people from more and more parts of Canada and the United States are doing so each year. And, better still, they come back again and again bringing along their friends.

An important thing to remember, too, is that the beaches of Prince Edward Island are free from commercialism of any sort. The beaches are still as nature made them and there is no charge for the visitor who is welcome to roam the soft sands and revel in the blue surf to his heart's content.

For fun in the sun, choose Prince Edward Island, "the Isle of beaches," for your next vacation by the sea.

A RELAXED, CAREFREE HOLIDAY

Island's rural flavor in evidence at fairs

A total of nine agricultural fairs across the province offer a variety of interests to the visitors who are interested in agricultural products, handicrafts and women's work of various kinds.

They offer, perhaps, an even more general appeal to the summer visitor who desires to meet old friends and new ones in large numbers without having to travel over the province to do so.

The Old Home Week celebrations at Charlottetown during the week August 12-17 is the biggest attraction of the year, and in large measure the annual event is "a homecoming" for thousands, as the name applies.

It has displays of the best livestock and poultry in the province in addition to a women's work section, and a flower section that attracts widespread interest. And there is horse racing throughout the week climaxed by The Evening Patriot Gold Cup and Sauer free for all event.

Last year for the first time a Gold Cup and Sauer parade was staged which provided a spectacle surpassing anything seen on Charlottetown streets for more than a decade, as merchants and other people backed it strongly, many of them contributed beautiful and colorful floats and the parade featured eight bands, including a National Guard band from Bangor, Maine.

Thousands of people visit the fair daily, some attracted by the unusually good display of livestock and other farm products, some by the best horse racing of the year, but many whom the main attraction is the chance to meet a hard working group of men and women in that area are ever striving to come up with something new to attract interest. Elsewhere in the province slightly less attractive a year will be building up. The two-day show by the Prince Edward Island Plowing Match and Agricultural Fair Association at Dundas has for some years drawn the largest outdoor crowds to an almost entirely agricultural show. The Lobster, Venison and Agricultural Fair at Summerside, is rapidly building up interest as one of the island's main attractions, with its wide variety of appeal, not the least of which is the generous meal of the tasty crustaceans that is a luxury virtually beyond the purse of the average gourmet in areas farther inland.

This event backed by the energy and spirit which a Prince County centre invariably puts into a big promotion, is headed for continuing growth and expansion.

The show at Dundas is slated for September 11-12 and the week-long show at Summerside runs from July 15 to 20.

ALBERTON FAIR
The Prince County fair at Alberton, recently expanded into a two-day show, draws many of the best livestock exhibitors from Western Queens as well as Prince County, and its dates this year are August 21-22.

The Eastern Kings exhibition is held each year at Souris and the date this year is September 4.

Some of the most interesting handicrafts to be seen in the province are an important part of the annual fair in the French Acadian centre of Egmont Bay which traditionally draws large attendances.

Cranford has one of the most recent shows but it has attracted good exhibits and large crowds from the start, as early each day Pereth goes to the London vegetable market, buys the prettiest of potatoes, takes them back to his shop and peels them the Pereth way.

Then he delivers the finished product to the best restaurants in town.

Recently, caught chauffeuring a cargo of potatoes while drunk, he was fined $15 and disqualified from driving for a year.

CRAFTSMAN'S ROLE FOR POTATO PEELER

LONDON (AP) — Gerald Pereth joined the merchant navy to see the sea.

And what did he see? He saw potatoes, mountains of potatoes. As an ordinary seaman he was required to peel these for the ship's mess.

Pereth, a conscientious chap, worked hard at his chore and in the course of time became a speed and dresser second to none afloat.

Pereth-peeled potato when the Memphidree smoothness of a new-laid egg. The quality of Pereth's peels became famous in the shipping lanes from Mandalay to Madagascar.

A few years ago, Pereth decided he could go ashore with a ready-made profession: Peeling potatoes.

Pereth reasoned that the swankier restaurants would jump at the chance to serve their customers the perfect Pereth potatoes. He was right, and a career was born.

Each day Pereth goes to the London vegetable market, buys the prettiest of potatoes, takes them back to his shop and peels them the Pereth way.

Then he delivers the finished product to the best restaurants in town.

Recently, caught chauffeuring a cargo of potatoes while drunk, he was fined $15 and disqualified from driving for a year.

Pereth by Pereth's lover that it would be disastrous for Pereth's potato-peeling business if he were grounded for 12 months, an appeal court restored his driving licence.
