Remembrance Day At Saint Peters

*Remembrance Day at St. Peter's was eventful for this quiet village. The veterans assembled in the Legion Memorial Hall, and in command of Lt. R. J. MacDonald, were first paraded to the Roman Catholic Chapel where services were conducted by Rev. Father Cass. Owing to circumstances, we were unable to attend; but the report we got from the veterans in attendance was glowing. Following celebration of the Mass the priest's message of hope and faith and eventual peace was inspiring and satisfying.

The parade was marched under the same command across the bay to the United Church, where Rev. Russel MacLeod took an appropriate text from Joshua, the warrior Prophet. He told the story of the passing of the children of Israel over the divided waters of Jordan, with the promise of triumph and accomplishment on the other side. He pleaded for unity of thought and action in all community work. Our valiant dead will not have died in vain if we achieve peace among nations, and have the Cross of Christ the world-wide emblem of love and understanding and tolerance to all peoples. That is our task.

To parents in attendance who had lost sons in conflict, the speaker's quotation from McRae's immortal poem, "To you from falling hands we throw the torch Be yours to hold it high. If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flanders field," held poignant memories. Though mellowed now by time and reconciliation, vividly, before each in memory's mirror, appeared a boyish face and form, sleeping now in foreign soil, or rocked in some faraway oceanic deep. They gave the most precious of all their possessions—their young lives, that we who stayed at home might be saved from the slavery and tyranny that has overtaken so much of the world.

Divisions of creeds and policies diminish in stature in the face of such thoughts. The importance of our convictions fade, and we are inspired and directed to the best and closest relations with all, even though they may differ with us in belief or action. Our sacrificed sons, now free from the trammels and conventions of this life, must smile, howbeit with tolerance, at our trivialities, having knowledge of their lack of importance, and realizing that when our short day is over, we too will acquire the same wisdom.

Lieutenant MacDonald thanked each clansman for the splendid and thoughtful address before parading his command from the church.
