

In Memoriam

MRS. FRANK McQUAID

Her many friends and acquaintances in the city of Charlottetown and the province in general were shocked and saddened to hear of the sudden passing of Mrs. Frank McQuaid (nee Caroline Cusack) on April 16th, 1955, at her home in Southport.

The late Mrs. McQuaid who was in her seventieth year was born in Charlottetown, P. E. I., the daughter of the late John Cusack and Ellen McGee, who later moved to Brookvale, Lot 30, where she received her early education at the local school.

In 1903 she went to the United States where she enrolled in a school for Practical Nursing. She became a successful graduate of this institution and all during her life continued in this noble profession—that of comforting and caring for the sick, the aged and the infirm.

Carrie, as she was so familiarly known to all, was of a kind and cheerful disposition and these traits of character combined with her natural industry and professional skill made her the ideal nurse and caused her services to be sought by many from far and near.

In 1914 she married Frank McQuaid of Emyvale, and after a few years residence in Haverhill, Mass., they returned to Emyvale, where they took up farming, about where they took their only son took over the old homestead but they continued to reside there until the fall of 1954, when they moved to a new home in Southport.

The late Mrs. McQuaid who had been in her usual good health remained at home with her three granddaughters, who were visiting her on Easter holidays, while her husband went to town on business. She had apparently seen that the children were comfortably tucked in bed and later retired herself, only to pass away in her sleep a short time later, where she was found by her husband on his return.

She was a sincere and practical Catholic. Her devoted life and charitable nature will without a doubt earn for her the reward of heaven for which she always hoped and prayed.

Besides her husband and one son, John F., she leaves seven small grandchildren who will miss her tender care and loving guidance. Four brothers and one sister also survives, namely: Peter, Emyvale, Walter Charlottetown, John, Boston, Dan, Western Canada, Lena, Boston.

Her funeral, which in spite of the almost incalculable condition of the roads was very largely attended, was held from the Charlottetown Funeral Home to St. Ann's Church, Lot 65, on April 20th, Requiem High Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. Charles McCarthy, who also was performed in the adjoining cemetery, where all that was mortal of a devoted wife and mother was laid to rest.

Palbearers were: Messrs. James P. McCloskey, Joseph Coady, Mrs. Elizabeth Jolly, Boston, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Egan, Elmwood, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gallant and family, Southport, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent McInnis, Kensington, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Rossiter, Morell, Mrs. Catherine Flood, Charlottetown, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly, Kelly's Cross, The Members of Lot 65 C. Tweed Ensemble

This three-piece ensemble is in an oatmeal and beige striped tweed. The fitted jacket of the suit is collarless although the vertical stripes give the effect of a collar. The box jacket worn over the suit is only slightly longer than the jacket of the suit.—(CP Photo).

What A Spastic Child Can Do

(Edinburgh Scotsman)

Most people have some idea what we mean when we say that a child is spastic. It is fairly generally understood that the child has sustained some form of brain damage, and is, to a varying degree, physically handicapped. How common is this condition, how does it arise, and what do we do about it when it does happen?

In this country, about one in 1,000 school children suffers from some form of cerebral palsy (the name doctors give this condition). There are two main kinds. In one, there is general spasticity or difficulty in movement, and in the other, there are slow writhing movements that go on in spite of the child's attempts to stop them. In both kinds, there may be different degrees of involvement. Both arms and both legs may be affected; or both legs, but not the arms; or the arm and leg on one side only.

FROM EARLY LIFE

How does this sort of condition arise? Most of the cases date from before birth, or from the time of birth itself, or from the very early weeks of life, when an acute infection may bring about some brain damage. However it occurs, their is brain damage in all cases.

But there is one mercy—it is not progressive. Once the extent of the damage has been established you know that it will not get any worse. All our muscular movements are controlled by the brain, and if there is brain damage, it is not surprising that control of some movements is also damaged or lost.

A most important thing to remember, however, is that we are on the whole, very adaptable creatures. Even though we can never mend or replace the brain-cells that have been destroyed, we can still do a great deal to re-educate our muscles, often bringing into use groups of muscles that would ordinarily not be used in a particular way to help out those which are in difficulties.

SPECIAL CLINICS

We can see, then, how important it is to recognise this condition early in life, so that the complicated business of muscle-training and re-education can be got under way as soon as possible.

This is a specialist matter, and there are clinics specially set up to deal with the needs of spastic children. The child may have to attend for months or even years, and carry on patiently with the exercises and treatment prescribed, but it is well worth while for the sake of the high level of adjustment that is often possible.

ACHIEVEMENTS

There have been some quite remarkable examples of what these handicapped children can achieve when given the opportunity. A great deal of work has been done for them by a doctor who had himself been a spastic child, and had had to overcome the unwanted writhing movements of his limbs, even when he was old enough to be a student. One point worries the parents of spastic children very much. This is the burning question: is the child going to be mentally handicapped as well? Obviously, brain damage may well mean that intelligence is also affected, and indeed this is so in a number of spastic children. However, it is vital to understand, that in a way, the same rules apply as with the affected muscles—training is terribly important. If the child is encouraged to attempt to do everything possible, he will thereby be given the opportunity to learn as much as he can. Nothing succeeds like success, and the more the spastic child is stimulated to learn, the more is he able to develop himself within the limits set by his handicap. A child that is "given up" and not expected to learn much loses by the absence of opportunity, and seems duller than he really needs to be.

A number of societies, notably the National Spastics Society, have been formed to help and encourage the parents of spastic children, as well as to offer practical advice and help. The family doctor can put the parents in touch with these bodies.

SICK CUBS PROMOTED

TORONTO (CP)—For the first time in Canada scouting history, two cubs became fully-fledged boy scouts Tuesday night while patients in a sanatorium. In a ceremony, Kenzie Dodds, 10, of MacTier, Ont., and Charles Smith, 15, of suburban Weston, were invested with their badges at the end of a year of hard study.
