Mother wants to know if you'll lend her a little mermaid to starch a cap, to go to see the President? said a little girl, coming into Mrs. Partington's kitchen, bearing in her hand a tin cup.

Certainly dear, said the good dame, pleasantly.

She never thought of the unreasonableness of the request; she never dreamed of guile.

The tracheal depository was brought out, and the golden liquid filled the tin receptacle, and the child departed.

Well! said the old lady, everybody is going to see the president. But what is a president, or a king, or a justice of the peace, or a hog reefer, but a man arter all, with flesh and blood, and bones and hair, like any of us?

And thousands will come further to see him than they would to see St. Paul or Hebrews or Revelations or David or Deuteronomy, or any of 'em.

Sich man-worship! sich man-worship! The President is coming, Aunt! said Ike, bursting in, and he is going by our door!

How do I look, Isaac? said the dame with animation. Is my hair combed, and my handkerchief digested right on my neck, and my cap border even? and she took her place by the window, as eager as any one to "see the President," and Ike stepped out. But her eyes were strangely dim, and those hitherto faithful specs gave indications of failing her.

She took them off to wipe them, and those glasses were gone! An hour before, Ike had borrowed them for a telescopic experiment.

But it didn't make any odds, for the procession had turned down another street, and didn't go by her door at all.

EASILY SUITED.

This morning a young gentleman from the country stepped into a store on East Water street, and informed the proprietor that his occupation was that of a carpenter, and he desired to get a bosom-pin emblematic of that profession.

"Yes," said he, "there's the compass and square. I use both of them—but why didn't they put a saw in it? It's first-rate as far as it goes. Hullo! there's G there—what does that stand for?"

The jeweller didn't know. The man studied it carefully for a moment, and a bright idea struck him. His face flushed as if he had made a discovery.

"I have it," he said; "it's all right. G stands for gimlet. Compass, square and gimlet. That will do—I will take it."

There was a little touch of sadness in his voice as he pinned the emblem on his coat, and he went away.

"Compass, square and gimlet. I do wish there was a saw, though."—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

A Mrs. Carm, of St. Joseph, Mo., recently eloped with a physician, and rubbed in the insult by leaving this touching epistle for her husband's perusal: "Dear Hubby: You're played out. I like the Doctor so well that I prefer going with him rather than staying with you—you good for nothing degenerated cuss. It's none of your business where we're going to. It won't do you a bit of good to follow us, for I wouldn't live another day with you to save your life. You made a mistake in thinking I loved you. I never did. I married you for convenience sake. I take the baby along, and I'll take good care of it. You can sue for a divorce, or get married, as soon you please. The woman who gets you next will have a healthy old prize. By virtuous and you'll be happy. YOUR LATE WIFE."

As Mrs. Partington stepped from the steambath, she perceived the signboard which requested passengers not to leave till the boat was secured to the drop. "How different from my poor Paul!" murmured she, as memory awakened something long forgotten. "How different from my poor Paul! for he would never leave till the 'drop' was secured to him. Dear, dear! it seems as if I could see him now, holding to his lovely lips the big quart tumbler, which he used to call his 'horn of plenty'; and plenty it was, to be sure, and often too much for him. How much better off he'd been if he hadn't taken such deep importations!"

Other things may be great, said old Roger with a nod, besides what's called so. Some very little thing, if it's done well, can be a great one, and passed on—in impudence, say, for instance. Yesterday a boy asked me pitifully for a fourpence; I gave him what I thought to be one, and passed on. Presently I felt a twitch at my coat-tail, and looked round, and there stood the boy, "Sir," says he, "you owe me a cent—this 'ere won't pass for but five cents—it's crossed." I gave the little rascal a shilling at once; I couldn't help it. The thing was sublime—admirable."

A hungry man is unmanageable. To be docile, he must, like a horse, have first a bit in his mouth.

A governess advertising for a situation says she is perfectly mistress of her own tongue.

What was Eve made for? For Adam's Express Company.

Peace makes plenty, plenty makes pride, pride breeds quarrel, and quarrel brings war—war brings spoil, and spoil poverty—poverty patience, and patience peace.

Domestic peace can never be preserved in family jars.

Mrs. Partington says there must be some sort of kin between poets and pullets, for they both are always chanting their lays.

SCRAPING APPLE TREES.—This is a good season of the year to perform this work. Many persons object to the practice of scraping trees; but we are constrained to say that after years of experience we still approve the plan, and follow it ourselves. Many noxious insects seek a shelter and a breeding-place beneath the rough bark of apple and other trees, which are destroyed if the trees are scraped. We have often known the apple borer to deposit its eggs at different points up the body of the tree beneath the rough bark where they hatch, and the young borers penetrate the tree. If the body of the same had been scraped, the insect would have directed his way to some other location. The work may be performed to much greater advantage after a rain when the bark is softened. The three cornered scraper with a handle eighteen inches or two feet long is the best implement we have yet found for this work. In scraping trees care should be used not to scrape too low so as to lay bare, or even cut very near the wood. Many persons recommend a wash to be applied, after the trees have been scraped. It may be beneficial, but we believe the scraper alone will do the work sufficiently well.

SOWING CLOVER.—It is the custom with man good farmers to sow clover seed very early in spring on lands that were sown down the previous autumn with Red Top and Herd's Grass. This seed may be sown on the snow, and as the snow settles the seed gently falls into its place to be beaten down and possibly covered in the soil by the heavy spring rains that follow. We have seen very excellent results from seeding in this way. When lands are to be laid down in spring, the work should be done as early as the state of the ground will admit, and then the clover seed may be sown with the grass seed. We have generally been successful in getting our land well covered with grass when we have done the work the last of April, and sowed oats with the clover and grass seeds. This crop generally affords a shade for the tender grass plants, though in years of extreme drouth we have sometimes thought it an injury rather than a benefit. We think the clover crop is too much neglected. There is nothing in the whole list of forage plants with which we are acquainted that will yield a greater amount of nutritive food for stock in green or dry state than clover. It is especially valuable to feed to new milk cows during the season when the pastures are short and dry. It induces a great flow of good milk.

It is economy to keep horses sharp shod. They not only do more work, but require less food. If sharp, a horse walks easy and fearless. If smooth, he endures himself and rider or driver, and works in fear with great exertion of muscle. Consequently, he needs more food to supply the waste. It is not good economy to keep a horse shod with iron shoes. By changing the nail of the shoes every week, they can be kept "rough-shod" without steel corks.

A KNIFE SHARPENER.—It is a difficult matter to obtain a "steel" which retains its sharpening qualities for any length of time. A common round file answers the purpose admirably. Fasten it in an old knife handle and it is ready for use.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's PREPARATIONS FOR THE HAIR.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer

is suited to both young and old. It strengthens the Hair, prevents its falling or turning grey, and imparts to it a beautiful glossy appearance. It never fails to RESTORE GREY HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL YOUTHFUL COLOR.

It is NOT A DYE, but acts directly upon the roots of the Hair, giving them the natural nourishment required, producing the same vitality and luxuriant quantity as in youth. It will restore it on bald places, requires no previous preparation of the hair, and is easily applied by one's self. One bottle will usually last for a year, as after the hair is once restored, occasional applications once in three months will insure against grey hairs to the most advanced age.

The Restorer Reproduces and the Hair Dressing Cultivates and Beautifies. Principal Sales Office, 128 Greenwich Street, New York City. August 1, 1867.
