CHURCHILL—FUNNY MAN

LONDON, May 21 — (AP) — Sir Alan Herbert, a leading British humorist, ranked Winston Churchill Saturday at the top of his list of English-speaking funny men. "Mr. Churchill can always raise a laugh without any breach of taste or tact," Sir Alan said in his presidential address to the English Association, a cultural group.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A K Y D L B A A X E
I S L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Murder Could Not Kill

"Why, certainly. I'll tell you all there is to know. Sheehan was a swell American crook when I first met him in New York. I got to know him very well—to my sorrow. One day he played a low-down game on some of his gang and they got after him. That was always his way. Whenever he felt the draught he'd slip out from underneath and put the other fellow in the wagon. Things were looking mighty unhealthy, but he staged a fake suicide—and got away with it. All his pals believed he had drowned himself; he arranged matters very neatly. So he escaped their further attentions. He lay low for a bit, but they were too close, and he just had to get out of the States. I thought I was ace-high with him, but I should have known better; I accompanied him across Europe. We were staying in Hamburg, and there was a fire in our hotel. It was a pretty disastrous affair—you'll recall it. Made a sensation at the time. A good many lives were lost. Sheehan thought mine was amongst them—and who could blame him for thinking so?" She laughed bitterly, suddenly bent forward in her chair in obvious pain, and held her hand firmly to her left side. Barbara moved towards her in quick concern, but Hester motioned her away, with an attempt at a grateful smile. In a few moments she resumed.

"You see, he had tried to insist that Hester Rogan should be among the missing—locked me in the bedroom while pretending he was trying to help me to get out, when all he meant to do was to get quit of me and his own skin. It was a bit more complicated than that, but that's what it amounted to. Well, I wasn't a corpse—but I might as well have been. When eventually they let me out of hospital, my own mother wouldn't have recognized me! I'd had a lot of time and suffering to do my thinking in, and I came out with only one desire—to get square with Jack Sheehan. But I discovered he had been among the victims of the fire, at least it must have been part of his cunning that his name appeared in the list of dead when I was able to get hold of it and read it a good few weeks later; so I thought that after all Providence had taken the need for justice out of my hands. That's what I thought then, and continued to think for ten long years. Until to-night. Until to-night."

She paused; no one spoke. Then she continued in the quieter voice that had followed the sudden stab of pain: "I learned a few hours ago that the man who called himself Peter Lessing was Jack Sheehan."

All there in the little room had listened to her with breathless attention. From Laurette there came a gasp of horror and grief as Hester finished speaking and sat with her hands clasped in her lap. With businesslike precision, however, West had to continue his questions.

"How did you come to find that out?"

Hester turned her eyes on Barbara with a definite look of appeal; Barbara reassured her with a nod and herself answered.

"I told her, Inspector. Some time back Miss Rogan had observed what she thought was merely a resemblance, and more out of curiosity than conviction had asked me if Peter Lessing had a scar on his right forearm. I had told her no—until I learned he planned to treat me as he treated her. So " She moved her hands expressively, and the gesture was more informing than words could have been.

"I see. I see." West stood thinking for a moment before he spoke. "Why, though, did you keep his secret? What object had you? Why didn't you tell Miss Rogan? Were you afraid?"

"Just that," Barbara answered. "Afraid all round. In any case, I wanted the knowledge for myself. I saw how it might be useful to me." Unexpectedly she swung round on Laurette. "Miss Dexter, I was mad when I heard of your engagement to Peter Lessing. He was after your money, I know, but that was going to make no difference to me. I sent an unsigned communication to your father, telling him who Lessing really was, in the hope that it would make him insist on your breaking off the engagement. He must have spoken to him about

Dr. MacKenzie is Guest Speaker at Montague Men's Club

The Men's Club held their regular monthly meeting on Monday night, May 15th with thirty-six men present. It opened with a hearty sing-song with Mr. Johnston at the piano. Then came a piano-violin duet by Mr. Johnston on the piano and Mr. Archie Hume on the violin. This was followed by music by Mr. Johnston on the piano.

Dr. MacKenzie, as speaker for the evening, chose as his topic—"It Can Be Done", meaning that the new addition, being considered, can be built to the church. He stressed the very great need of it and the value it would be to the people as a whole. Mr. J. MacNair, president of Trinity Men's Association, extended the best wishes of his association to Montague men as to the erection of the new addition.

The president, Mr. Lorne Wigginton, issued a challenge to the men present for cash subscriptions towards the new addition, saying that eleven thousand feet of lumber had been donated towards the building. The men responded nobly with the result that over thirteen hundred dollars was subscribed. The women then served a delicious lunch. This meeting was the final one until next fall.
