BENS DORP'S

ROYAL DUTCH COCOA.

BENS DORP'S Royal Dutch Cocoa has a most enviable reputation. It is manufactured at Bensdorp & Co.'s extensive works in Amsterdam, Holland.
The excellence of the beverage is not to be wondered at, considering the care exercised in its production. The beans from which it is manufactured are the product of one of the famous South American plantations, exclusively. The crop is shipped to the factory, where it is carefully picked, roasted and ground; the grease is then extracted by hydraulic pressure, resulting in a powder entirely free from oil and moisture, which completes the manufacture. The product is then put up in parchment papers and in turn enclosed in hermetically sealed tins, which preserve it from deterioration in any climate.
It is so highly appreciated at court that it is manufactured under Royal Letters Patent of the King of the Netherlands, by whose special command it is known as the "Royal Dutch Cocoa." The Royal family of Great Britain are constant consumers and prefer it to any other.

Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa is for sale in Charlotte-town by Geo. Carter & Co.

AGAIN DEFEATS
THE MEDICAL COUNCIL OF P. E. ISLAND.

STIPENDIARY Magistrate Fitzgerald gave written judgment in the case against Dr.
S. Baynes, dismissing the summons with costs against the Medical Council. The Magistrate held that the defendant, being a regular qualified Medical Practitioner resident in the City (Charlotte-town) and registered under the Medical Act of the Province, could not be guilty, and could visit his country patients as hechose.

CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

I am able to announce to your readers that I have received a supply of the "Bacillic Virus" for the cure of Tuberculosis, and am prepared to treat any who are suffering from this (I hope no longer) dread malady. From the letters, brochures and books I have received on this subject, I may say that the general opinion of the Old World medical scientists is, that it is a venereal cure for tubercular affections of the brain, lungs, skin, joints, &c., and although it has not succeeded in every case, still it is so much better than anything we have in use at present, it is the general opinion that any one suffering from any form of this disease has a much better chance of a cure than heretofore.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

BABYLON.

In that night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans, slain.—Daniel v. 30.

After the site of Babylon had been assessed, two millions of men were employed for the construction of the wall and principal works. The walls of the city were sixty miles in circumference. They were surrounded by a trench, out of which had been dug the material for the construction of the city. There were twenty-five gates of solid brass on each side of the square city. Between every two gates a great watch-tower sprang up into the heavens.
From each of the twenty-five gates, on either side, a street ran straight through to the other side, so that there were fifty streets, each fifteen miles long, which gave to the city an appearance of wonderful regularity. The houses did not join each other on the ground and between them were gardens and shrubbery. From house-top to house-top bridges swung over which the inhabitants were accustomed to pass. A bridge of the Euphrates went through the city, over which a bridge of marvellous structure was thrown, and under which a tunnel ran. To keep the river from overflowing the city in times of freshet, a great lake was arranged to catch the surplus, in which the water was kept as in reservoir until times of drought, when it was sent streaming down over the marshy land. A palace stood at each end of the Euphrates bridge; one palace mile and three quarters in compass, and the other palace seven and a half miles in circumference. The wife of Nebuchadnezzar, having been brought up among the mountains of Media, could not stand in this flat country of Babylon, and so to please her, Nebuchad-nezzar had a mountain, four hundred feet high, built in the midst of the city. This mountain was surrounded by terraces, for the support of which great arches were lifted.
On the top of these arches flat stones were laid; then a layer of reeds and bitumen; then two rows of bricks, closely cemented; then thick sheets of lead, upon which the soil was dumped, and the earth was deposited so deep that the largest trees had room to anchor their roots.
All the glory of the stately tropics was spread out at that tremendous height, until it had seemed to one below as though the clouds were all in blossom, and the very sky leaped on the arches of the cedar. At the top an engine was constructed, which drew the water from the Euphrates, far below, and made it put up amid this garden of the skies.
All this to please his wife! I think she must have been pleased.

In the midst of this city stood also the temple of Belus. On its towers was one-fourth of a mile high, and on the top of it an observatory, which gave the astronomers great advantage, as, being at so great a height one could easily talk with the stars. This temple was full of cups, and statues, and contained a million of gold. One image weighed a thousand Babylonish talents, which would be equal to fifty-two million dollars. All this by day; but now night was about to come down on Babylon. The shadows of her two hundred and fifty towers began to lengthen. The Euphrates at the mouth of the city, touched by the fiery splendour of the setting sun, and gates of brass, burnished and glittering, opened and shut like doors of flame. The hanging gardens of Babylon, with the heavy dew, began to pour, from starlit flowers and dripping leaves, a fragrance for many miles around.
The streets and squares were lighted in dances, and frolic and promenade. The theatres and galleries of art invited the wealth, and the pomp, and the grandeur of the city to rare entertainments. Scenes of riot and wastrel were mingled in every corner; and the splendour of the king's palace, and the splendid wickedness, came to the king's palace, to do their mightiest deeds of darkness.

A royal feast to-night at the king's palace! Rushing up to the gates are chariots, upholstered with precious cloths Dedan, and drawn by fire-eyed horses from Togarmah, that rear and neigh in grasp of the charioteers; while a thousand lords dismount, and women, dressed in all the splendors of Syrian emerald, and the color-bending of agate and the charmance of coral, and the amber glory of Syrian purple, and princely embroideries, brought from afar by camels across the desert, and by ships of Tarshish across the sea.
