

Clerical Workers Reach Settlement With UPEI

By this morning, the contract between the clerical workers, members of C.U.P.E. Local 1870 and the university should have finally been signed.

The Union has been in negotiations since its birth in July of last year. By early October, wages had more or less been settled as an issue. However since that time negotiations revolved around the issue of job classification.

The Union was desiring to have as few classifications as possible (the Public Service Alliance has only three) while the Administration has desired to continue the present system with over thirty different ones.

By early December, the negotiations were completed but due to a variety of reasons of a technical and administrative nature it is not to be signed until Tuesday morning.

The clerical workers' negotiations bring up one reflective question with regards to the Maintenance workers strike: didn't Denis Clough say that one barrier to giving them what they asked for was that the clerical workers would have to be given an equal raise? However that portion of the clerical workers negotiations had more or less been completed.

Speaking of maintenance strikes, negotiations will soon begin for the new contract. The present one expires March 31st. There have been rumours that the workers have been somewhat slack on the job and whatever in the next few weeks may well determine the amount of student support for the next round of negotiations.

CUSO Involvement Can Last Lifetime

If you are graduating this year, this is the time of decision-making and the weighing of alternatives. One of these is an overseas posting with CUSO.

Don't be deluded by the name. Canadian University Service Overseas does not mean young idealistic university graduates doing ~~xx~~ their bit in developing nations. Instead it means highly skilled individuals participating in the field of development.

Each year, several hundred Canadians fill positions in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean and the South Pacific. The requests CUSO receives are in response to overseas governments and agencies and for the most part are for a period of two years. A high proportion of CUSO workers are university graduates, some of them new graduates. They go into a wide range of occupations: Accountants, Business Developments, Officers, Architects, Civil Engineers and Technologists, Teachers, Public Health Nurses, Doctors, Physiotherapists, Foresters and Farm Managers.

CUSO can't offer regular salary reviews and increases -- because we do not pay, the requesting government does -- roughly equivalent to a national with your job, which is enough to live on comfortably and do some travelling. Acc-

NDP's Broadbent Slams Trudeau's Useless Promises

Ottawa (CUP)--- Federal NDP leader Ed Broadbent said in a televised address January 11 he isn't concerned about Prime Minister Trudeau's recent "superficial talk about planning and a new society".

Trudeau's assertion that the "free-enterprise" economy is in trouble "is a trivial platitude" according to Broadbent.

"In fact, a mixed economy replaced the pure market economy decades ago in Canada. And it's this mixed economy with its simultaneous high inflation and high unemployment that has now broken down."

What really bothers Broadbent and his federal NDP colleagues is the "unthoughtful, uncaring, incompetence" of the Liberal government, and the charges it has brought against the Canadian people in recent weeks.

Broadbent quoted Trudeau as saying Canadians "haven't been sharing much", and then contrasted this with the tax policies of the Trudeau government, which have resulted in the rich getting a larger piece of the national income every year.

Broadbent also said the PM asked Canadians to start "living within our means" while ignoring the fact that Canadian industry is operating at only 85 percent capacity. "How can we be (now) living beyond our means when we are not even using our means," he asked.

As for the Trudeau election promise to ensure that Canadians would regain control of our natural resources", Broadbent said the Syncrude deal meant the government has "sold out even more of our natural resources" to foreign interests.

"I am not concerned about the Prime Ministers superficial talk about planning and a new society: Broadbent concluded, but "I am concerned that he has made political platitudes about Canada's belief in fairness and justice, and that because of incompetence and insensitivity he never delivers on his promises."

Co-op Full-time Part-time

McMaster University now has a third option for students interested in proceeding to a Master of Business Administration degree: a co-operative option, whereby students alternate four-month periods of study and relevant work experience. A limited number of applications will be accepted for the semester beginning in September, 1976.

Co-op

An MBA degree from McMaster could help you to achieve your career objectives in the areas of management, administration, and education because the McMaster MBA program offers a wide range of optional courses (that can be selected to your needs) as well as providing a core of basic knowledge and skills. Although admission is restricted to those who have proven that they have the potential and commitment required to complete a demanding program, graduates in any discipline may be accepted.

Full-time

Academic standing is not the only entry criterion but, as a general rule, you can have a reasonable expectation of completing the McMaster MBA program if you have maintained at least a second-class standing in the last two years of your undergraduate program and if you can achieve a satisfactory test score in the Graduate Management Admission Test.

Part-time

Applicants for the McMaster MBA who have taken relevant course work may be granted advanced standing in our program. If you are interested in exploring this challenging opportunity further, fill in and mail this form.
