LET'S TALK IT OVER
A Prince County Viewpoint
(Teaching poetry appreciation to school children is probably one of the most difficult chores a teacher has to do; and one which is quite often performed badly too. Poetry is a fragile thing. It should never be used like a theorem in Geometry. If you analyze and dissect it, its beauty escapes you. Just as surely as songs are written to be sung, poetry is composed to be recited aloud. The poets labor, sometimes long and arduously, so that their words will trip along like a dance of fairies, or march to the sound of beating drums, or thunder and rumble like a storm sweeping across a countryside. You have to recite poems aloud to get the desired effects. Yet, in examinations, pupils are required to write the words on paper where their rhythm and melody and cadence are as dead as the page on which they are written. We concede that in government exams it would be difficult to remedy this condition. It is to be desired that pupils commit some of poetry to memory and the only easy way to find out if they have done this is to require them to write the poetry. If it were feasible to have them, one after another, recite the chosen poems before an examiner, that would be fine, and it is surprising how much the way a boy or girl recites a poem tells you the amount of appreciation they are deriving from it too. However, if this is not considered feasible, they will have to write their poetry, but be careful the exercise doesn't develop into a tedious experience. Some teachers require their charges to put in every comma, semi-colon and dash found in the original text. That is, perhaps, as easy a way to kill appreciation for the poem as any that could be devised. But, you say, isn't punctuation important? Quite so, we answer. We also believe in correlation of school subjects, such as teaching history and geography together occasionally, etc. By all means, pay strict attention to how pupils punctuate, but not too strict, if you please, when they are writing poetry. We doubt very much if they learn much about punctuation by this process anyway. Botany is a fairly important subject too. But if you receive a bouquet of roses, we don't think it would be wise to pluck out the petals and examine carefully the stamens and pistils to find out to what botanical family the plants belong. Just take a good whiff of them and drink in their delicate beauty. Poetry is also like that.)

FIGHTER PILOT KILLED IN CRASH
Pvt. Lt. Robert L. Kent (above) who was killed in the crash of his Mustang fighter eight miles southwest of Cabano, Quebec while on a training flight. The wreckage was spotted Tuesday and the body of the missing airman recovered. Pvt. Lt. Kent for a time was stationed at the Summerside Air Station of the R. C. A. F. and was well known there. His plane disappeared on Thursday, April 19. Burial will be in Vancouver.

DROMORE W. I.
Mrs. Michael McGuirk was hostess to the Dromore Women's Institute members for their April meeting. Nine members and one visitor answered the roll call, which was a penny for the size of their shoe. The meeting opened by the members reciting the Creed. The president occupied the chair; the minutes of the last meeting were read, approved and signed. There were no reports from either sick or school committees. A programme, pinning the tail on donkey, was then put on by the committee in charge, which caused much merriment. Programme committee for next month, Mrs. Michael McGuirk and Mrs. George Mitchell. The meeting was brought to a close with prayer. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Mary McGuirk, Mrs. Seymour Hughes and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell. A card game was then enjoyed by all, and a neat sum was realized from the articles played.

Shortstop Landry will not be playing for a Summerside baseball team this year. Landry is going to coach the Miscouche boys who plan to enter the Prince County League. Hank would like to play with Miscouche if permission could be obtained, but we seem to remember a rule in the P.C. League by-laws that would prevent this.

Just how many members of the championship teams we will be able to hold in Summerside this year is doubtful. There are rumors about certain players departing for greener pastures. The boys have been faring pretty well the last two years. Some of them may not want to go back on an austerity program.
