

STALAG 17 NOW AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

A motion picture that runs the emotional gamut from hilarious laughter to suspense drama and back again in Paramount's "Stalag 17," the comedy melodrama now playing at the Capitol, Summerside Theatre. Based on the sensational Broadway stage hit that rocked the nation for three solid years, "Stalag 17" is set against a prisoner-of-war camp in Germany during World War II.

As produced and directed by Billy Wilder, "Stalag 17" tells the story of a group of men incarcerated in Barracks Four. The atmosphere of this barren hostility is permeated with laughter, a rough and bawdy type of humor that would be expected from war prisoners who before their capture were sergeants in the United States Air Corps. Sprinkled throughout, the roisterous, raucous proceedings are incidents of bitter hatred and still more of grim suspicion. The men become aware of a spy in their midst when a fool-proof plan for escape leaks out to the prison commandant. It is from this conflict that "Stalag 17" gets its most powerful dramatic moments.

The starring cast—Holden as the cynical, wise-cracking GI, Taylor as the heel-clicking prison commandant, turn in sparkling performance. They, in turn, are ably supported by a large featured cast that includes Robert Strauss and Harvey Lembeck, two recruits from the stage play whose dim-witted cavortings are guaranteed to have audiences convulsing with uproarious laughter.

Believe it or not, farmers in South Western Saskatchewan are building durable homes of straw bales. Walls will be stuccoed on the outside and plastered on the inside.

These homes are expected to stand up under all kinds of weather for at least 25 years. The thickness of the walls makes them draft proof.

Several crates full of earrings turn up every year in the lost and found office of the U. N. building.

A total of 19,000,000 American women hold jobs. 10 1/2 million of them are married. Fewer than two per cent earn over $5,000 a year, and more than 80 per cent get less than $2,500 a year.

No map of the universe exists, but the astronomers at the Palomar observatory have been at work for several years putting together a gigantic photographic map of the Universe based on observations seen through the giant telescope there. This complete map of the universe will sell for about $2,000 a copy.

Sable Island, often called the "graveyard of ships" earned its evil reputation because more ships have been lost and more persons drowned there than anywhere else in the world.

The life of a pop bottle is about 2 1/2 years. It makes 50 to 60 trips from the bottling plant to the stores, then to the homes of pop drinkers and back again.

The word "fahrenheit" as referred to the thermometer simply means that Fahrenheit used the first person to use quicksilver instead of alcohol in his thermometer tube and the F. P. of 32 deg. and the P. 212 deg.

That little salt which some men wear in their coats has no real purpose except that it makes it easier for a fellow to get his hands into his hip pockets.

Plants grown side by side in the same soil vary as much as 100 per cent in their vitamin content.

Good men are not always popular, and popular men are not always good. The best part of some folk are the outside of them — the part which the world sees. The polish is supposed to cover up the defects. If you hit him a sound wallop on the back, you will find that he is quite hollow like some trees.

Some folk are angels in their homes and devils everywhere else. They are generous to their own kin and kind and mean and crabbed in their dealings with others. In the privacy of their own homes some people wear their sheen's clothing and dress up like the wolf when they go abroad. On the other hand, there are persons who are great fellows among their friends at large, and who make themselves very disagreeable at home.

Don't we all know the guys who have enviable reputations far removed from the place where they live, who are not so popular in their own neighborhood. They have heard so and so blow his trumpet until they are fed up with it, and they are fed up with the papers have to say about him, with amazement and contempt. They have inflated the fellow who looks so big to others, and he has collapsed before their eyes. They have seen how he acts, as well as heard his "line," and they judge him by his actions rather than by what he says. Then we have those who are not particularly liked where they are well known, because of too loud a bark and make an occasional mistake. Yet they may be true of heart, unselfish and sincere. Some persons become popular simply by the sweetness of their manners. They never go out of the way to help a friend in distress, but they have a smile and a handshake for everyone they meet, which costs nothing. They avoid all of their pilgrimages with honeyed words. If they feel obliged to decline doing the favor you ask of them, they refuse with such grace that they seem to be conferring an honor upon you.

Others are unpopular, simply because of their want of manners. They may be just and generous, but they are not always careful to confer favors. Those whom they do not love they may give a better for their gifts. They never hand out any ripe plums unless they are satisfied that the gift is needed, and will be rightly used. They never contribute, merely because they are asked to give. They do not make a parade of their gifts, because they are not liberal in the sense of making themselves popular.

One may easily obtain a sort of popularity by always saying yes or no to everything the other fellow says, or at any rate, by never contradicting him. They are the ones who never express their own minds until they are sure of what the others think. They let somebody set the tune, and then chime in the chorus. Forced into public life, you'll always find them siding with the majority. Abraham Lincoln was unpopular in his day because of his honesty. He cared more for the truth than he did for his own reputation.

In striving to do what is right your popularity may dwindle, but you will have a clear conscience.

In Memoriam
MRS. KENNETH MCLEOD

The recent death of Mrs. Kenneth McLeod of Hartsville, P.E.I. in her 92nd year brings to many friends a host of memories that link with the past much of the tradition and colour of Prince Edward Island.

The late Mrs. McLeod was born at Rose Valley in the year 1864, at which point her parents had farmed for a goodly number of years. Upon her marriage to Kenneth McLeod, they moved to the farm at Springton where they remained until the decease of Mr. McLeod in the year 1942.

Greatly respected in the district and community they managed in spite of early day struggles to adequately care for their eleven children, six of whom are now living—Mrs. J. Dell of Charlottetown, Mrs. J. Pratt of Quincy, Mass., Mrs. E. Coles of Loyalist, P.E.I. Mr. K. McLeod and Mr. D. McLeod of Hartsville, P.E.I.

Prior to her demise Mrs. McLeod resided in the U.S.A. for ten years with her daughter, Mrs. James Dell, after which time she returned to Charlottetown and resided with Mrs. T. Harper. Mrs. McLeod maintained a keen interest in the farming affairs of her earlier days often journeying out to Hartsville to visit her son and relatives.

A short illness culminated her very active life when she slipped peacefully away on February 7.

A short service was conducted at the residence by Captain Leslie Titcombe of the Salvation Army prior to the service at the Hartsville Presbyterian Church conducted by Reverend L. Blaikie assisted by the Captain. The church choir sang selected hymns, Mr. Ewen Lamont sang the solo, "There's A Land That Is Fairer Than Day."

Funeral services were held at the residence of Mrs. B. Craswell, E. McLeod, D. McInnis, D. Nicholson, K. McLeod, E. Lamont.

Rearrangement Of Royal Tour Being Considered

MELBOURNE, (CP) — Officials will confer here today on a possible rearrangement of Queen Elizabeth's tour of Western Australia because of an outbreak of infantile paralysis. There have been 114 cases in that area since Jan. 1.

The possibility of avoiding large groups of children will be one of the subjects to be discussed. Officials said there is no question of cancellation of the visit to the 1,000,000-square-mile area with a population of 600,000.

In Western Australia one of the polo victims is Mrs. Kim Beazley, wife of a member of the federal Parliament. She shook hands with the Queen at the opening of Parliament in Canberra two weeks ago.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh have been given injections of gamma-globulin, a serum which strengthens resistance to polo.
