Clergy Commends Council, Asks Housing Committee

SUMMERSIDE — Clergy of the seven major church denominations in Summerside yesterday joined forces in a letter to the Summerside Town Council commending the council for its "declaration of war" on bootlegging, rowdyism, and violence within the town, and the council's plans for a clean-up campaign against unsightly and unsanitary properties.

The clergy recommended the inauguration of a "citizens' housing committee" to deal with sub-standard housing and other inadequate housing accommodation within the town, which they felt contributed to part of the lawlessness that has occurred.

The letter to the council was signed by: Rev. Mark Ferguson, St. Mary's Anglican Church; Rev. Keith Hobson, First Baptist Church; Rev. D. L. Howett, Church of Christ; Rev. P. E. O'Haniey, St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church; Rev. Philip Chatto, Church of the Nazarene; Rev. Cecil R. Webber, Trinity United Church; Rev. J. Donald MacKay, Presbyterian Church.

At the time the letter to the council was released to the press it was learned that the important development in interchurch relations had developed in Summerside.

It was learned that the clergy of various denominations in Summerside have been meeting together at regular intervals for the past several months for the purpose of promoting greater understanding and harmony.

A spokesman for the group said that while it was considered that theological differences exist, there are many mutual problems and interests which can be solved and improved by a co-operative approach.

The text of the letter sent by the clergy group to the Summerside Town Council is as follows:

"It was with much satisfaction that we learned through the medium of the press that a declaration of war against Summerside's "bootleggers" has been unanimously declared by the town council, and that a decision has been reached to take action against "young men who have been causing trouble in the stadium.

"It was gratifying, too, to learn that a clean-up campaign will be carried out in regard to certain unsightly and unsanitary properties in the town.

"It is our opinion that much of the lawlessness that is bringing a blight and stigma upon our town thrives, at least in part, from sub-standard housing and other inadequate housing accommodations.

"We respectfully recommend, therefore, that a citizens' housing committee be set up to deal with these matters.

"We commend your earnest efforts to raise the moral and cultural tone of our town, and we offer our united support to any action initiated by you to make the town of Summerside a better, safer, happier, more law-abiding and more beautiful community in which to reside".

RECOVERY

impact area. A failure of the retrorockets to fire automatically as scheduled may have caused the overshooting.

Apparently the rockets did not fire at 1:17 p.m. after a countdown heard on the astronaut monitors.

Radio contact with the Aurora 7 was lost a few minutes after it re-entered from orbital flight about 1:35 p.m. But navy bomber picked up an automatic electronic homing beacon from the space ship soon afterwards.

When the news of Carpenter's sighting was broadcast, his frail mother in Boulder, Colo., Mrs. Florence Carpenter, couldn't suppress a heartfelt, "hooray."

At Palmer Lake, Colo., Carpenter's father, Marion Scott Carpenter, said after the flight "that was the tensest five hours I've ever spent. But he's safe now and we are all so happy."

The elder Carpenter is divorced from the astronaut's mother. He and his present wife, Edyth, watched the entire operation on television.

INTERRUPT DEBATE

The U.S. Senate in Washington interrupted a debate on the farm bill to applaud the announcement that the astronaut was safe.

Carpenter left earth atop a flaming 360,000-pound thrust Atlas missile at 8:45 a.m.

Though Carpenter was calm throughout, he was not cool. At one point the temperature inside his aluminumized space suit climbed to 100 degrees fahrenheit.

Midway through his second orbit, it appeared that a shortage of fuel for his in-flight controls might develop and force him down before the end of the planned three orbits.

Despite these difficulties, all correctable, the voyage was a scientific success, matching that of marine Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr., Feb. 20.

During his four hours and 56 minutes aloft, in which he reached a maximum altitude of 164 miles and a speed of 17,533 miles an hour, the astronaut:

Concluded that the mysterious particles encountered in space by Glenn and called "fireflies" for lack of a better name looked a great deal like snowflakes.

Became the first American to drink water copiously in space, taking about 24 swallows to restore the water balance lost through perspiration.

WAS FOURTH

By his feat, Carpenter became the fourth American to enter space and the second to go into orbit.

Navy Commander Alan Shepard Jr. was the first American to enter space May 5, 1961, taking a 15-minute flight aboard a Redstone rocket. He was followed on an identical flight by Air Force Capt. Virgil Grissom July 21, 1961.

Marine Lt.-Col. Glenn became the first American to orbit the earth three times last Feb. 20. He followed two Russians, Yuri Gagarin and Gherman Titov, who had gone into orbit the previous year.

At takeoff, the 155 - pound astronaut was subjected to forces 7 ½ times that of gravity, which means that for a brief period he weighed 1,160 pounds.

Carpenter began reporting back to earth almost as soon as he began his climb into the path which would take him through three sunsets and three sunrises in less than five hours.

'STATUS GOOD'

Three minutes after lift-off the astronaut reported "fuel and oxygen are steady. My status is good. Cabin pressure is 5.8 (pounds a square inch). I am reading you loud and clear, Gus."

He was talking to America's second spaceman, Grissom.

Trouble began when Mercury Control told Carpenter to fire his braking rockets and start his descent back to earth at precisely 1:17:52 p.m. EDT. That was as he approached the California coast.

At 1:20 p.m. Carpenter reported he was over the coast of Florida, that the forces of gravity were building up as he began his re-entry.

At 1:35 p.m., Carpenter was amid a great fireball and the air around was so ionized that radio signals could not penetrate.

At this point radar indicated Carpenter had been late in firing his rockets and he was going to overshoot his intended landing area by some 290 miles.

This was the beginning of a frantic race to rescue the astronaut.

By the time the first plane arrived Carpenter apparently had tired of being cooped up in the capsule, had blown his hatch and climbed into a rubber raft. While rocking gently in the calm sea, he waited patiently for somebody to turn up and rescue him.

Welfare Progress Subject Of Discussion

A conference of personnel from public and private welfare agencies throughout P.E.I. was held yesterday in the visual education room of Prince of Wales College.

Purpose of the conference was to share knowledge and ideas of persons in the field in order to improved services and welfare programs.

Hon. Henry Wedge, provincial minister of welfare and labor stated that he was very satisfied with the idea of a conference such as the one being held, and he hoped that future conferences would be held. He noted it was good policy to meet together because it served to develop up-to-date programs in the province.

At the morning session a paper was delivered by John Eldon Green, director of family allowances, on developments in welfare throughout Canada, referring specifically to P.E.I. He noted that the federal and provincial governments last year had spent $14,500,000 in welfare programs such as UIC, old age pensions, family and veterans allowances.

Mr. Green expressed belief that it is most important to get together and find out what others are doing and planning. He said programs to date have been remedial, not preventative.

Workshops held during the day took a critical look at programs and noted modifications that could be made.

This being the first conference and experimental in its state, a discussion was held at the conclusion to determine the value of the meeting, and all members agreed it had been worthwhile.

It was announced that next fall another meeting would likely be held. A committee of three was appointed to plan for this meeting. The members are Brig. W.W. Reid, deputy minister, chairman; Arthur Laws, executive director of the Protestant Family Welfare Bureau; and John Eldon Green, regional director of family allowances.

The conference, chaired by Eugene A. McDonald, director of child welfare for P.E.I., had 18 delegates in attendance.

Alberton Industries To Build Boats For Northern Fishing

SUMMERSIDE — Contracts for the construction of two fishing vessels by Alberton Industries Ltd., for use in northern waters, was announced yesterday by Dr. Orville H. Phillips, Progressive Conservative candidate in Prince County.

The contracts, amounting to $35,000 will provide facilities for demonstrating to Eskimos, modern techniques in the fishing of Arctic char, described as a delicacy in demand in American and Canadian cities.

It is hoped through the use of these boats the Eskimos can learn to use methods to improve their income and standard of living through revenue from fisheries.

Dr. Phillips said that construction of these fishing vessels would be commenced immediately, and would be completed by August.

One of the vessels will be 40 feet in length, and will cost $15,695. The other will be 46 feet long, and will cost $19,911.

In addition to supplying fishing boats and vessels for use in Maritime waters, Alberton Industries has supplied various marine craft for Newfoundland and Ontario markets, and this contract is their first boatbuilding product for northern waters.

Three Quebec Men Charged With Stolen Car Possession

SUMMERSIDE — Three men from the province of Quebec were charged yesterday before Prince County Magistrate W. Chester S. MacDonald, with possession of a 1955 Chevrolet, which had been stolen from Aurele Moreau, of Montreal, on May 19. All three were remanded without plea to give them time to consult a lawyer.

Andre Martel, and Pierre Louis Simard, both of Montreal and Andre Sergerie, of St. Laurent, were apprehended as they left the Borden ferry, by RCMP constables from the Borden detachment, they will be brought before the magistrate again on May 29.

George Garnet Warren, of Freetown, was found guilty of driving a motor vehicle while his abilities were impaired by alcohol, and fined $75 and costs or 15 days by Magistrate MacDonald.

Evidence in the case was heard several weeks ago and included the testimony of Const. Kenneth Lynn of the Summerside RCMP detachment and the accused, who was represented by J. Watson MacNaught, QC.

Possession of liquor in a place other than his residence resulted in the usual $20 fine to one man, while a $5 fine was levied on another person who pleaded guilty to failure to stop at a stop sign.

An assault charge laid by Mrs. Mary Arsenault, of Central Bedeque, against Aeneas Murray, Summerside, was adjourned after Mrs. Arsenault testified that she was visiting the home of her brother-in-law when the accused arrived at 2 o'clock in the morning, with several of his brothers and two women. She stated that they were scrapping outside and later the accused struck her in the face with his fist, breaking her glasses.

Under cross-examination by G. Bruce MacDonald, Mrs. Arsenault said that she never had a drink in her life and her husband was not at the house when the group arrived. She admitted asking the women into the house, but said she did not invite the men.

The case was adjourned until next week, so that the plaintiff could get the rest of her witnesses to court.
