THE DAILY EXAMINER.

APRIL 1, 1889.

Cape Tormentine Pier.

CONCERNING the proposed pier at Cape Tormentine, Mr. Welsh has had something to say, as follows:

Mr. Welsh—"I have got a little to say about this harbor. The Almighty never intended that a harbor should be built there, or he would have made one. Now, I would like to know from the Minister of Public Works who ever asked for the pier? No one in Prince Edward Island. I want to tell him that the Almighty has made some very fine harbors in both Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

These remarks of our junior representative are calculated to make the representatives of Ontario and Quebec believe that a pier is not needed at Cape Tormentine. Representatives of the Maritime Provinces, who know better might, at the same time, infer that Mr. Welsh is only mad because the Government has not ordered corresponding harbor works at Cape Traverse.

It is, at all events, certain that the shortest route between Prince Edward Island and the Mainland is by way of the Capes; that piers are necessary if this route is to be followed; and that the policy of the Government, as indicated by the building of railways to the Capes, cannot be carried out unless the proposed works are built.

Debate on the Jesuits Estates Act

THAT only thirteen members of the House of Commons could be found to vote against the Government of Canada in the matter of the allowance of the Jesuits Estates Act is a very significant fact. It cannot be held that all but the thirteen are under the domination of Rome; it must be concluded that the action of the Dominion Government, at least, was constitutional and right.

The point most strongly urged by Mr. O'Brien and his supporters was that as the Pope was one of the parties to the settlement made under the Act, and as his assent was necessary to the fulfillment of the bargain, the Pope had been allowed to control the legislation of a Canadian Province. This contention was disposed of by the Minister of Justice, who said,—"Now, sir, it is said, and the House will remember with what gravity and force of eloquence it was urged on the House this afternoon, that this statute denies the supremacy of Her Majesty the Queen. I have read to you all the passages which refer in the slightest degree to any person outside of Her Majesty's Dominion. I have stated the facts with regard to the possession of this property, the negotiations which were had with regard to it, and I think I may leave it to the dispassionate judgment of any man in this country, be he Catholic or Protestant, whether the Act in the slightest degree in its operations considered in the light of surrounding circumstances, denies in any way the authority or supremacy of Her Majesty, spiritual or temporal. Let me ask what rights Her Majesty had. As the spiritual, as the temporal sovereign, what right had she in this property? Absolutely none whatever, excepting that she stood as the trustee for the Province of Quebec. Her own personal rights were not affected. Her sovereign rights were not affected. They were not portions of Her Majesty's domain that were contributory to Her Majesty's revenue. If they were sold and turned into money to-morrow not one dollar would ever pass into Her Majesty's treasury. Not one dollar will be disposed of by the advice of any of Her Majesty's ministers. Therefore, neither as the spiritual or temporal sovereign did she have any interest in this property. As head of her Church, as head of any religion of the British Empire, what power has she? None whatever. It is a question purely of public concern, purely of the public domain of the Province of Quebec.

The power of the Provincial Legislature having been called in question, Sir John Thompson said:—"We heard last night the singular statement that the Provincial Legislature is only a delegated authority. I deny that statement as explicitly as it is courteous to deny any statement made by an hon. member of this House. I go further, and say within the limit of its authority, and subject only to the powers of disallowance, the Provincial Legislature is as absolute as the Imperial Parliament itself. (Applause). The Imperial Parliament is not restricted as to the subjects over which it can legislate. The Provincial Legislature is restricted over the subjects on which it can legislate, but in legislating on these subjects it has all the rights which it was possible for the Imperial Parliament to confer. I say more, that the Provincial Legislature, legislating upon the subjects which are given to it by the British North American Act, has the power to repeal an Imperial statute in so far as it interferes with its control over those subjects."

Notes and Clippings.

Part of the MS of the article entitled "Cruelty to Animals," which appeared in THE EXAMINER of Saturday, having been mislaid, we omitted the closing sentence, which ran thus: "The clergy lending their aid to the efforts of the civil law, we may hope for greater expansion of thought upon the question at issue, and for fewer exhibitions of that shocking cruelty to animals which so often disgraces our city of Charlottetown."

The Presbyterian Witness says: "The color question has reached an acute stage in the Dartmouth schools. The commissioners closed the colored school which had only about ten pupils and cost about $300 a year. It was thought the pupils could, without offence, be admitted into the public schools. A large minority are perfectly satisfied with the action of the commissioners; but an active minority offers strenuous opposition. We do hope the good people of Dartmouth will not disgrace themselves by a crusade against the colored scholars. They have too much good sense to condemn anything so paltry, and so out of date. There is not a school or college in Halifax where colored people are not welcome. The Presbyterian College, Halifax, has had colored pupils. So has Dalhousie. So has Acadia. So has Mount Allison. The Normal School and Pictou Academy are open to colored pupils. We do not know what excuse Dartmouth friends can urge on their own behalf. To be scared of colored folks is un-British, un-Christian, uncivilized. It is the foolish old caste feeling which Christianity is sure to abolish."

Charlottetown to Pictou.

THE steamer Princess of Wales left here for Pictou at 5 o'clock on Saturday morning, arriving there at ten o'clock. Captain Cameron reports that he passed ice on the eastern side and to the south of St. Peter's Island, but the Nova Scotian side of the straits was comparatively clear. The captain says that if the ice clears away from the island shores, he thinks he will be able to immediately begin the season's regular work. The passage over from Pictou was very rough, owing to the strong wind blowing during the run. The Princess left again for Pictou at five o'clock this morning. She did not encounter any ice on the run over, and left on return at two o'clock this afternoon. The Stanley left Pictou for Charlottetown about 1.30 on Saturday, and did not arrive here until about 9 at night, having been obliged to "lay to" for several hours off St. Peter's Island during the thick snowstorm which prevailed in the afternoon. She left on return to Pictou at seven o'clock this morning with a general cargo and several passengers.

A Scene in the County Court.

A scene which is, perhaps, unprecedented in our courts, occurred in the County Court on Saturday last at the trial of an action of trover for the value of a cow alleged to have been illegally seized under execution against Ewen Stewart, of Brackley Point Road, and claimed by his son, Walter Stewart. In support of the plaintiff's claim a witness was called, named Peter Stewart, whose oath was challenged on the ground of his infidelity. The following are the questions put to him by the Judge and his replies thereto:

"Do you believe in the Deity?" "No, not in the ordinary acceptance of the term."
"Do you believe in the Trinity—God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost?" "I do not."
"Do you believe in the Bible?" "I believe the Bible is a history."
"Do you believe that it is the inspired Word of God?" "I do not."
"Do you believe in rewards and punishment after death?" "I expect no reward after death for any good I do, and no punishment beyond the grave."

The next witness called, whose name was William Roberts, was also objected to, and interrogated in the same way. He replied substantially as follows: "I do not believe in the Bible. I do not believe in God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. I can't say that I believe in any God. I do not believe in Heaven or hell, nor in the doctrine of rewards and punishments after death." These men were both middle-aged, and appeared to be intelligent. After this declaration of their faith, or rather want of faith, Judge Alley refused to allow an oath to be administered to them. In doing so, he expressed himself in emphatic terms regarding their views, and stated that if they adhered to them through life they would doubtless have good reason to believe in hell before the end of their existence. This incident shows that our home missions afford a good field for evangelistic effort. Mrs. R. Young will show her French and English trimmed millinery to-morrow (Tuesday) upstairs at A. L. Brown's. Mob caps, handsome crapo bonnets, etc., etc.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, London, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion and taken it myself.
