Former Islander Recalls Gruelling South African Campaign Of 53 Years Ago

Shown above are two members of the Canadian Contingent which went to South Africa during the Boer War in the early days of the century. On the right is Mr. Herbert H. Brown, whose letter appears below, while with him is Cpl. H. L. McLean. Paardeberg Day, which will be celebrated tomorrow, commemorates one of the biggest battles in which Canadians were involved during that war. A special service will be conducted at the Boer War Monument at 12:15 Sunday afternoon by the local branch of the Canadian Legion.

While there are only a few veterans of the Boer War left, there will be many memories in the families of those who have passed on as the anniversary of Paardeberg Day, February 27, approaches.

Recently The Guardian received the following letter from a former Islander who had served in South Africa. He is Mr. Herbert H. Brown, now residing in Detroit, and he describes graphically the conditions faced by Canadian soldiers on that occasion.

"In the month of February, fifty-three years ago," writes Mr. Brown, "the First Canadian Contingent including the Island section in G. Co's of 30 men who stood shoulder to shoulder with the cream of the British Army, the Gordon Highlanders, the Cornwalls and the Shropshire Light Infantry on the banks of the Modder River in South Africa, we at one side of this swift running river and the wily Boer on the opposite side. We expected to have a crossing by the steel bridge but on arrival we found that the bridge had been blown up.

"Our Engineer Corps were always necessary as we advanced and fought in enemy country who kept destroying all means for our advance. At this time we were able to anchor at both sides with three lines of 1" manila rope and all who could cling to this rope reached the other side but those under 5'9 had great difficulty and many were submerged in the swift current.

Interest Taken In First Aid Classes

Dr. T. L. Farmer lectured last night at Red Cross headquarters to the recently enrolled members of a First Aid Instructors class. The doctor dealt with the skeletal system, in addressing the 12 candidates in attendance, which is a routine subject in connection with the course.

The school meets every Wednesday evening during the course period under the supervision of Miss Mabel Matheson, and is taken part in by both men and women. On completion of the course, certificates of proficiency will be presented to those who qualify.

A number of First Aid classes have been organized throughout the country, among the most recent being that at Alberty Plains, where Mrs. Henry Peters gave instructions to a large membership last evening. The organization met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brendan Curran.

The Women's Institute of Summerside sponsored a class in that district with weekly meetings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Murphy. This course, which follows the standard Red Cross routine, is also conducted by Mrs. Henry Peters, with an enrollment of twenty.

Farm Labour Committee Meets

Mr. W. R. Shaw, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, presided over a meeting of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Committee held yesterday afternoon in the Agricultural office. Attending from the Regional Employment Office, Moncton, was Mr. Dave Hay; from the Summerside Employment Office Mr. Earl G. Cannon; from the Charlottetown Employment Office Mr. J. B. Murley and W. S. C. MacLeod. Mr. S. C. Wright of the Provincial Department of Agriculture acted as secretary.

Mr. Shaw predicted that a shortage of farm labour would develop in the spring. Mr. Hay, who is in close touch with the movement of farm labourers from Europe to Canada, brought the committee up-to-date on the present situation. Mr. Hay said that single Dutch farm workers would not be plentiful this spring, but Dutch family groups—many of them quite large. German farm labourers on the other hand are being recruited freely by Canadian immigration officers in Germany, both single and married.

It was decided by the committee to place a tentative order for thirty-five German workers, to arrive here in mid-April. These farm workers will arrive under the Assisted Passage plan, under which the Federal and Provincial Governments share the transportation costs, and the money is recovered from the immigrant in monthly instalments after he commences work in this country.

The committee authorized newspaper advertising to acquaint farmers with the possibilities of obtaining German workers.

Mr. Vernon L. MacDonald, construction supervisor for the Veterans Land Act for Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton, is in Saint John attending a conference for the construction supervisors of the Maritime Provinces.
