Physicians

prescribe Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites because they find their patients can tolerate it for a long time, as it does not upset the stomach nor derange the digestion like the plain oil. Scott's Emulsion is as much easier to digest than the plain oil as milk is easier to digest than butter. Besides, the fish-fat taste is taken out of the oil, and it is almost palatable. The way sickly children, emaciated, anemic and consumptive adults, gain flesh on Scott's Emulsion is very remarkable.

AN UNQUALIFIED PILOT

New First Published—All Rights Reserved.

Almost any pilot will tell you that his work is much more difficult than you imagine, but the pilots of the Hugi know that they have one hundred miles of the most dangerous river on earth running through their hands—the Hugi between Calcutta and the Bay of Bengal—and say nothing. Their services are picked and sifted as carefully as the bunch of the supreme court, for a judge can only hang the wrong man, but a careless pilot can lose a four thousand ton ship with crew and cargo in less time than it takes to reverse the engines.

There is very little chance of getting off alive when once you touch in the fore of the full salt of the fields of Bengal, where surroundings change two feet between tides and new channels make or efface themselves at every season. Men have sought the two hundred years till now, the river owns a huge building with drawing, survey and telegraph departments, and a large staff of engineers, as well as a body of wardens who are called the port commissioners.

They and their officers govern absolutely from the Hugi Bridge to the last buoy at Pilot's Ridge, one hundred and forty miles away, and out in the Bay of Bengal, where the steamers first pick up the pilots from the river.

A Hugi pilot does not bring papers aboard or scramble up rope ladders. He arrives in his best clothes with a native servant or assistant to wait on him, and he behaves as a man should who can earn ten thousand dollars a year after twenty years' apprenticeship. He has beautiful rooms in the port office at Calcutta, and generally keeps himself to the society of his own profession, for though the telegraph reports the more important soundings of the river daily there is much to be learned between trip and trip.

Some millions of tons of shipping must find their way to and from Calcutta each twelve-month, and unless the Hugi were as safe as the Atlantic, there is a fear that it might silt up as it has silted up the old Dutch and Portuguese ports twenty and thirty miles inland. So the port office sounds and scours and dredges and builds spurs and devices for coaxing currents and labels all the buoys with their proper letters and attends to the semaphores and the lights and the drum, bell and cone alarm signals, and the pilots of the Hugi do the rest, but in spite of all the care the Hugi swallows a ship or two every year.

When Martin Trevor had followed this life from his boyhood, when he had risen to be a senior pilot, he had been up to Calcutta the big ships drawing over twenty-four feet that can (or could till a few years ago) only pass by special arrangement, when he had talked nothing but Hugi and Calcutta. So the port office sounds and scours and dredges and builds spurs and devices for coaxing currents and labels all the buoys with their proper letters and attends to the semaphores and the lights and the drum, bell and cone alarm signals, and the pilots of the Hugi do the rest, but in spite of all the care the Hugi swallows a ship or two every year.

YOUNG JIM WOULD LIE IN THE BOW when he asked him if he could make anything out of the shipping, little Trevor replied by reeling off the list of all the house-flags in sight at the moorings.

"You'll come to a bad end, Jim," said Trevor. "Little boys haven't any business to know house-flags."

"Oh, Pedro at the Sailors' home taught me. He says you can't begin too early."

"At what, please?" "Piloting. I'm nearly fourteen now and I know where all the shipping in the river is, and know what there was yesterday over the Mayapur bar, and I've been down to Diamond harbor—oh, a hundred times—and I've—"

"You'll go to school, son, and learn what they'll teach you, and you'll turn out better than a pilot," said his father, but he might just as well have told a shovelled porpoise of the river to come ashore and begin life as a hen. Jim held his tongue—he noticed that all the best pilots in the port office did that—and devoted his young attention and all his spare time and money to the river he loved.

Trevor's son became as well known as the Bankshall itself, and the port office would not have been a place for him at table, and the mates of the big steam dredgers used to show him how the machinery worked, and there were certain native rowboats that Jim practically owned; and he extended his patronage to the rail that runs to Diamond harbor, forty miles down the river. In the old days nearly all the East India Company's ships used to discharge at Diamond harbor on account of the shoals above, and now ships go straight up to Calcutta, and they have only some meetings for vessels in distress there, and a telegraph service and a harbor master, who was Jim's intimate friend. He would sit in the office and listen to the soundings of the Hugi as they were reported every day, and attend to the movements of the steamers up and down (Jim always felt he had lost something if a boat got in or out of the river without his knowing it), and when the big liners, with their rows of burning port holes, tied up in Diamond harbor for the night Jim would run from the ship to the other side through the sticky hot air and the buzzing mosquitoes and listen respectfully as the pilots conferred together. Once, for a treat, his father took him down clear out to the sand heads and the pilot brig, and Jim was joyfully sea sick as she tossed and pitched in the bay. So he had to go down three or four times more with friendly pilots till he had cured his weakness. The cream of life, though, was coming up in a tug or a police boat from Diamond harbor, to Calcutta over the James and Mary—the terrible sands existed after a royal ship they sunk two hundred years ago. They are made by two rivers that enter the Hugi six miles apart and throw their own silt across the silt of the main stream so that with each turn of the

A Child Cured of Eczema by Chase's Ointment.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. The doctor advised the use of Chase's Ointment, and since using the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) Maxwell Johnston, 112 Anne St., Toronto.

FROM ALL POINTS OF THE COMPASS.

Canada's Fiscal Policy Defended. LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Standard this morning says that Sir Charles Tupper, speaking at Newcastle-on-Tyne yesterday, defended the fiscal policy adopted by Canada in her relations with England. He contended that Canada's system of incidental protection are immensely increasing instead of decreasing her trade with Great Britain. England, he said, was the only country which, in respect to trade, treated her colonies as foreigners, and he thought the time had arrived when this subject should be dealt with in a manner likely to prove to the advantage of both England and her colonies.

The great success of the chocolate preparations of the house of Walter Baker & Co.
