

St. Teresa's School Closing Last Week

On the afternoon of June 23, the closing exercises of St. Teresa's School were held in the Parish Hall.

The stage was appropriately decorated in Coronation colors. The red, white and blue streamers led to the centre of the stage where they joined over a large poster of the Queen.

Merlin Gormley, Grade Ten, announced the various numbers on the program, which began with O Canada by the school. Several numbers which had been entered at the Musical Festival were repeated. These included a solo, "The Cradle Song" by Helen Bradley; two-part chorus, "Flower Carol"; a duet by Anna Evans and Patricia Nicholson; choral reading, "Please, Safety First"; and "The Three Little Kittens" by Grades 1, 2 and 3; chorus, "Misty Morning"; Gregorian chant, "Salve Regina".

Grade VI presented a literature lesson, after which Grades VII-X had a history review. Grades IV and V presented a morality play, "Every Boy". The Primary pupils sang two songs, "Beauty and the Beast" and "Underneath the Shady Tree". Elizabeth Lawlor, Grade 4, recited "About Teeth", and the pupils of Grade II dramatized "The Three Billy Goats". Following the distribution of prizes the final number, a pageant entitled "God Save the Queen" showed the various countries of the British Commonwealth of Nations pledging their allegiance and loyalty to Her Gracious Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II.

While the children enjoyed a treat of ice cream served by the ladies of the Women's Institute, the parents viewed the best work of the sewing classes which was on display.

Giant lobsters, weighing between 20 and 25 pounds, are quite common off the coast of Southwestern Nova Scotia. But, because they cannot be caught in the average lobster trap, the giant crustaceans go practically unexploited, except when "captured" in some unorthodox manner a fate which befell one seen above, caught in a trawl by Arthur Cosman of Yarmouth, N. S. Weighing 24 pounds and measuring three feet from the tip of its tail to the end of the big claw, the Cosman lobster, as it has become known locally, gained national attention when it was caught. Since its death, it has gained wider publicity. Presently being preserved for posterity in Boston, the crustacean, believed to be between 30 and 40 years old—is being sought by federal fisheries department, also the Royal Ontario museum, in addition to numerous other private enterprises.

barn on the old mill road on the old W. H. McEwen property which is vacant now.

The sympathy of the people of this vicinity is extended to her at this time.

Word has been received from Mrs. John A. Hughes of Arlington, Mass., that she is coming home this summer for a short stay after 73 years in Boston. She left here as a girl of 16 before cars were still a dream. Last winter this grand old lady spent the winter in South Bristol. Looking back over the years in Bristol, it's not so long since there was a starch factory here, a saw mill, a carding mill, a butter factory, as well as a village forge, wagon and sleigh making shops. Those have all come forever. The water is again raised in the old mill pond now called the Jordan Pond and is well stocked with trout.

An old industry that will be something new to the younger generation is on the way back to this vicinity and that is digging mud on the St. Peter's Bay with the old horsepower digger. Mr. Ambrose Phalen says he is about the only one who still has a complete digger of the older days. He has made arrangements with a group of farmers to operate the digger this coming winter and build a stable. Mr. Phalen states he knows where the mussel beds are in the bay from years of experience when as many as a hundred diggers were working at one time and the mud was hauled for miles by sleigh. This new crew plan to land the mud and haul it with truck in the summer months. Mr. Phalen reports farms have been going down in the last 30 years since farmers stopped digging mud.

How would you build a 200-foot television tower without a single construction worker leaving the ground.

Here's how Bell Telephone Company did it. They made eight-foot tower sections out of aluminum tubing. Then they placed the first section within a base on the ground. Next they hoisted that section and fastened another section underneath it. They kept on repeating the process—raising the completed part off the ground by means of a hand winch. One test tower was dismantled and re-erected on another site, all in one day. Just goes to show that we live in an age of speed—and aluminum. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan)
