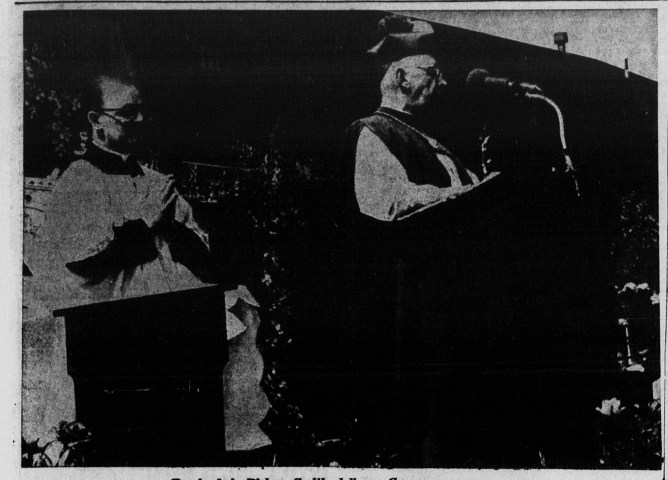
Rebellion And Savagery Boil Throughout Congo



Pembroke's Bishop Smith delivers Congress sermon

Clergy, altar boys, choir await opening of Eucharistic Congress

All parishes represented as thousands attend ceremony

Eucharistic Congress Here Is Attended By Thousands

Thousands of Roman Catholics from all parishes on Prince Edward Island participated in yesterday's Centennial Eucharistic Congress on St. Dunstan's University grounds.

Bishops, priests, religious and laity of all ages converged on the university yesterday for the great tribute to the Most Blessed Sacrament.

It was indeed a most impressive two-hour ceremony and an equally impressive demonstration of faith. Children who had just received their first Holy Communion, little tots unable to realize the solemnity of the occasion, teenagers, middle-agers and the senior citizens of the laity helped send the throng into the high thousands.

Before the celebration of Mass by Most Rev. Sebastiano Baggio, apostolic delegate to Canada, His Excellency Most Rev. Malcolm A. MacEachern, bishop of Charlottetown, extended a warm welcome to the Pope's personal representative. He reminded the papal delegate of the great faith of the people of Prince Edward Island, both Catholic and non-Catholic. He assured the visiting prelate that 95 per cent of the province's population were faithful to church attendance.

TRIBUTE TO FAITH

Archbishop Baggio, who has recently been named apostolic delegate to South America, thanked Bishop MacEachern for his warm welcome. He paid tribute to the great faith of the people of the Charlottetown diocese and to the outstanding pioneer work of its first Catholic bishop, Most Rev. Angus Bernard MacEachern. He cited the outstanding contribution in priests and bishops made from this province and had special words of commendation for the work of one of the Island's sons, James Cardinal MacGuigan.

Most Rev. William J. Smith Bishop of Pembroke, delivered the sermon at the Eucharistic Mass.

He termed such congresses great experiences in the lives of clergy and laity and was confident that such demonstrations would have the effect of bringing all Canadians closer to Christ. He reminded his listeners that the Eucharist was the central fact, the pulsating heart and the pivoting point in the Catholic faith. He urged his hearers to understand better the Holy Eucharist because "all things flow from it."

FACE SEVERE PROBLEM

Bishop Smith felt that Christians today are facing severe problems as the world offers compromises for the things of real value. He impressed upon all the all-important role the laity must play to insure that Christian principle play a major part in national and international questions.

The Ontario bishop warned that the godless were making far too much noise. It was, he deemed, far beyond what their numbers warranted. He pleaded for a swift return to decency and reminded Catholics of

BODY FOUND ON ROAD

Police Seek Driver In Highway Accident

RCMP in the province are searching for an unidentified motor vehicle driver following the highway death of a Nova Scotia man about Saturday midnight on the St. Peter's Highway at East Royalty.

The body of the man was discovered by a passing motorist early Sunday morning lying face down in the ditch.

The man in his late fifties has been identified by RCMP as a Nova Scotia man who has been working in the province as a farm hand for the last two years. His name is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Coroner Dr. L.E. Prowse viewed the body and an autopsy was performed.

The RCMP have issued an appeal for anyone knowing anything about the accident to call the nearest detachment of the RCMP or city police immediately.

RCMP said the man appeared to have been walking east on his own side of the road while the hit-and-run car is believed to be heading west toward Charlottetown.

The accident is under investigation by the Charlottetown detachment.

LBJ Hits Sombre Note In Freedom Reference

By KARL BAUMAN

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—President and Mrs. Johnson returned to Washington Sunday after winding up a midwest political tour with the promise that the United States will unceasingly seek peace but will risk war to keep its freedom.

In a rousing finish to his Minnesota visit, the president spoke to an audience estimated by police at more than 100,000 at the annual Minneapolis Swedish-American celebration.

Warning that war could be the price of freedom, the president said, nevertheless "I will spare neither my office nor myself in the quest for peace."

It was the most sombre note of a two-day stay in Minnesota, in which Democratic party faithful shelled out more than $300,000 in campaign funds to hear the president and Mrs. Johnson.

He expressed the hope that after decades of war and threats of war "we may be nearing a time of peace." He added:

"Today, as always, a nation to keep its freedom must be prepared to risk war. When necessary, we will take that risk. . . ."

At the same time, Johnson appealed to all Americans to obey the civil rights law, saying "legal government depends upon law-loving and law-abiding citizens."

In the quest for peace, Johnson told a Swedish-American audience, the first goal is "restraint in the use of power." He said the U.S. is strong enough to protect itself and its allies but that "we do not advance the cause of freedom by calling on the full might of our military to solve every problem."

MUST OBEY LAW

In striving for world peace, Johnson said, "we can find guidance in our own country's historic pledge to the rule of law."

Stampede Marks Windup Of Montreal Celebration

MONTREAL (CP) — What started as the wingding windup to a week of merrymaking became a panicky stampede which led to one man's death and injured about 400 more.

The debacle Friday night came as thousands of rain-soaked persons celebrating the end of Les Fetes du Canada Francais tried to get off St. Helen's Island as a hail and thunderstorm hit.

Les Fetes were a week of events marking the feast of St. Jean Baptiste, patron saint of French Canada. Organizers said Friday night's ruined party cost about $78,000 to stage.

Paul-Emile Robert, president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society of Montreal, said the event was the only "shadow" on the week's events, which had been successful beyond expectations.

"Let us say that in the circumstances, the balance sheet could have been more tragic."

Jean Duceppe, organizer of the night, said panic hit in little pockets. It was not generalized.

"There was no riot," Mr. Duceppe said. "There was some local panic, but no riot. If it had been a riot there would have been 100 deaths."

400,000 ON ISLAND

Mr. Robert said up to 400,000 persons were on the 300-acres island. Some 100,000 paid the $1 admission and others swarmed in after ticket booths closed, or climbed the fences.

The dead man was Gerard Forget, 33, who died in hospital of what provincial medico-legal authorities said was a stroke. He had a history of heart trouble, they said.

Inspector Jean - Paul Gilbert of the Montreal police said about 400 persons were taken to hospital from the island, but only about 10 remained in hospital more than a few hours.

There were reports of a few broken arms and legs in the crush.

The trouble started as the mobs swarmed towards the single, narrow exit from the island, a ramp leading up to Jacques Cartier Bridge. People were trampled under foot, squeezed and many became ill or fainted in the close, muggy quarters.

IGNORED CLOUDS

The day dawned with a few thunderclouds on the horizon. But they had been there all week, hovering over Les Petes without shedding a drop.

People began heading for the island and its relaxing greenery early in the day. By the time the giant fireworks display started there were up to 400,000 on the island, site of the 1967 Montreal world's fair.

About four-fifths of the fireworks had been set off before they became soaked. Only a few tents and some city-owned buildings were available as shelter for the people.

Inspector Gilbert said that at one point police estimated there were 75,000 persons on Jacques Cartier Bridge, about two miles long and six lanes wide.

Peace-Keeping Force Will Leave Tuesday

By ROBIN MANNOCK

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—With the last United Nations peace-force troops packed to leave by Tuesday, rebellion, political turmoil and primitive tribal savagery boiled in The Congo Sunday.

A grenade attack shattered a wedding party attended by high Congolese officials in Leopoldville Saturday night. Other attacks were aimed at voters in a national constitutional referendum.

In the eastern provinces Communist - backed rebels waged war and in some regions, army officers reported, tribes reverted to cannibalism.

A Communist-supported rebel chieftain was reported in control of the North Katanga province capital of Albertville on the western shore of Lake Tanganyika.

Moise Tshombe was back in Leopoldville appealing for unity of all Congolese to end what he called "fraticidal strife."

Tshombe, former leader of secessionist Katanga province, returned Friday. Another returnee was Albert Kalonji, the so-called god-emperor of the Baluba tribesmen in diamond-rich South Kasai.

PLOT OVERTHROW

The terrorists who attacked the wedding party and voting stations were believed to have come from Brazzaville, across the Congo River from here, where a committee of extremist exiles is reported plotting to overthrow the government of Premier Cyrille Adoula.

The terrorists lobbed three grenades but only one exploded. It landed under a table and witnesses said about 40 guests were wounded, eight of them seriously.

Among the wounded was Agriculture Minister Constantin Tshialamwana, who was host at the wedding party for Antoine Roger Katombe, a member of parliament and Baluba tribe grand chief.

About 10 minutes after the first attack, a car roared by and another grenade came hurtling into the party area. It exploded without serious damage. The terrorists who threw it also scattered leaflets urging Congolese to vote against a proposed new constitution now up to a national referendum.

The attack on the wedding party followed the bombings of two polling places in Leopoldville. About 40 voters were injured in one and 10 in the other.

URGES HANGINGS

Education Minister Michel Colin, who was invited to the wedding but did not attend, declared Sunday that public hangings are the only way to halt the bombings.

Tshombe expressed consternation at reports reaching Leopoldville that President Jason Sendwe of North Katanga province had been hacked to death by Communist - backed rebels seeking revenge for the massacre of nearly 200 anti-Sendwe insurgents in the suppression of a short-lived revolt in Albertville late last month. Latest messages from Albertville indicated Albertville is in the hands of Gaston Soumialot, a pro-Communist.

Islander Escapes From Prison Farm

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) — RCMP were continuing their search Sunday for two men who escaped late Friday night from the minimum security prison farm here.

Still at large are Glendon Elroy Yeo, 23 of Summerside, P.I. and Melvin Anthony Smith, 25, of Glace Bay N.S. The police were concentrating on a wooded area near here.

Yeo had been serving a two-year sentence and Smith was serving four years. Both were wearing grey prison clothing.

Dief Urges Separation Probe End

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker said Saturday night the government study of the ramifications of separation should be stopped.

"Acceptance of the possibility of Canada being split cannot be contemplated, academically or otherwise," he said in a statement.

"The division of Canada by the removal of Quebec cannot be considered an appropriate subject for study by an official committee of the federal government. The committee should be immediately told to desist."

Mr. Diefenbaker issued his statement to reporters after Prime Minister Pearson said in a press release that the government's study is into the "economic inter - relations between the parts" of Canada. It was not a study of the economic effect which would result from Quebec's separation, Mr. Pearson said.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the prime minister's statement, made several hours after a question and answer exchange in the Commons, was merely a watered - down version enmeshed the Liberal leader in a contradiction.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the prime minister's revelation officials are studying the ramifications of separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada "is a case of grave misgivings."

"One fact emerges . . . the government has accepted the possibility of dividing Canada by setting up a committee to investigate that possibility, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"In effect such a study undertaken at the federal level gives official countenance to separatism and lends to a movement not acceptable to the overwhelming majority of Canadians including those in Quebec an importance it does not deserve.
