THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JANUARY 20, 1897.

SMALL MATTHEWS BE APPOINTED

There was a clear understanding at the time of the Scott Act election that the Scott Act promoters, in conjunction with the civic authorities, should be held responsible for the operation of the law. Upon that understanding a majority of the citizens of Charlottetown voted; and upon that understanding we have the Scott Act to-day.

In justice to the Scott Act promoters it must be admitted that they are trying to perform their part of the implied agreement. When, after the last Dominion election, the Act became practically operative, they met together, discussed the matter, decided that the cause of the increase in drunkenness lay in the neglect of the city prosecutors to do their duty, and wait in a body upon the City Council.

The City Council, upon their representations, forthwith, passed a resolution calling for a "rigid enforcement" of the law on the part of the prosecutors. But drunkenness continued to prevail and violators of the law continued to go unpunished. Then the promoters of the Scott Act obtained, at their own expense, the services of Mr. Matthews.

Since then the prosecutions and convictions have been much more frequent. As a Scott Act prosecutor, Mr. Matthews is believed by the Scott Act promoters to be a success, and as such they have confidence in him. There were in the five months of May, June, July, August and September, before Mr. Matthews was appointed, twenty-five convictions; and in the one month of October after he was appointed twenty-six convictions; while in the two later months of November and December there have been thirty-four convictions.

This fact is held to be a sufficient proof of Mr. Matthews' usefulness in the capacity of Scott Act prosecutor.

It is now proposed that the city shall employ Mr. Matthews as one of their prosecutors and pay his salary. In support of this proposition, it is argued that the City Council are, individually and collectively, bound by honor and by oath to maintain all the laws of the city; that the City Council receive the fines resulting from Scott Act prosecutions; and are required to use the money so obtained "for the purposes of the Act"; and that as Mr. Matthews, has proved himself to be a fit instrument for the prosecution of the law, he ought, when recommended by the Scott Act promoters, to receive the appointment. These arguments are met by statements such as those contained in the letter which we publish to-day. These statements may or may not be true, or partially true. Suppose them true, is the position of Scott Act prosecutor one which must necessarily be filled by a man of high and unblemished character? Whatever our correspondents or others may think, we do not. And we think that the Mayor and Council will not be justified, upon this ground, in refusing the request of the Scott Act promoters of this city. If that request be refused, it must, under all the circumstances, be considered that the City Council are opposed to the enforcement of one of the laws of the city. Such a conclusion is manifestly inconsistent with their duty and their responsibility. We therefore expect that the request will be granted.

CONVICT WORK ON FARMS. The State of South Carolina, some time ago, bought about six thousand acres of land, divided the land into three plantations, and put to work thereon over eight hundred convicts. It is now stated that the output from the farms has been so profitable that last year there was earned for the state nearly sixty thousand dollars. Among other products, over eight hundred bales of cotton were sold. All the work is done by the convicts, who are, of course, under the care of guards. The report of those in charge is that the convicts prefer to work in the open air on these farms, that there are few attempts to escape, and that the health of the prisoners is good. This experiment has been carried on in one way or another for about ten years, and the authorities seem to be satisfied that results justify its continuance.

The best way to conduct a prison, they say, is to provide work for the convicts. Convicts' health is better when they are at work, and they bear confinement with less trouble to their guards. Of course, it is preferable to have them employed in the open air than in shops. Experience has shown that prisoners dwell less on their condition when at work than when idle, and they are not so active in planning escape. There is no logical reason why the state should not, as a matter of business, make those who have broken the laws pay the state in some way for maintaining them while they are serving their sentences; and there may be found in this experiment of South Carolina, a means of making our government farm pay.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Globe denies that either Mr. John Charlton, M. P., or Mr. Edward Farrer were sent to Washington by the Dominion Government.

The Pope has expressed the utmost satisfaction with the Anglo-American arbitration treaty. The most eminent divines in England and America also heartily approve it.

The tariff tinkers have been at Guelph, and the Herald of that city makes the cheering announcement that "two or three more free traders were unseated. Sir Richard will soon have enough followers to start a society and rent a meeting hall."

Yarmouth Times: The day is fast approaching when generalities can no longer be indulged in; when the people in every section will point the finger at some specific act of election pledge and demand fulfillment; when the Liberal editorial-makers will be cudgeling their brains to get excuses for a Government that can not show one pledge redeemed and which has deservedly earned the distrust of former friends and the contempt of opponents.

Montreal Gazette: According to a despatch to a Buffalo paper, Mr. Charlton and Mr. Ed. Farrer have been interviewing U. S. public men at Washington on the subject of reciprocity with Canada. Mr. Charlton is a personally responsible public man, who has a weaker sense of thinking more of Michigan than of Canada, when matters affecting the lumber trade are up for discussion or action.

Mr. Farrer is the man who wrote the pamphlet telling U.S. public men how Congress might best strike to cripple Canada's commerce. It can only be trusted that the report that these men are representing the Canadian Government to such a negotiation is not well founded.

Mail and Empire: To capture our rightful share of the Australian trade it will be necessary to follow the same policy as we have found to be successful on the British market. The Australians are wonderfully like the people of the Mother Country in some of their ideas, being possibly conservative, but certainly very particular in their tastes. They are not the kind of customers who can be persuaded to change their ideas and make experimental purchases of new things. Their taste has to be consulted and suited. That should be recognized by Canadian shippers. John Ball would not have bought much of our bacon if he persisted in curing it to suit ourselves instead of him.

Considering the continued increase of Cecil Rhodes' prominence, Olive Schreiner's opinion of him is of interest. She says that the South African dictator is "Napoleon over again, but Napoleon in a financial, industrial and political world. He has all Napoleon's greatness, not a little of Napoleon's pettiness, and he will fall some day, overwhelmed, as was Napoleon, by the corruption of his own tools. What Napoleon did with steel, Cecil does with gold. Around him there is a court of creatures who only live to minister to his will, but who would turn and rend him tomorrow if he were tripped up by fate."

Napoleon thought Providence was always on the side of the heavy battalions, so Cecil is convinced there is no God so omnipotent as that of the full purse.

In an article on the iron and steel industry in the Cleveland district of England, a writer in the Times says in regard to the habits of the workers: "That there is still a considerable amount of intemperance among blast furnace men cannot be denied, but the general body of iron workers, judging from the opinions of persons in Cleveland who have had them continuously under observation for a very long period, have fully shared in the general advance of the English working classes in sobriety and thrift. Street drunkenness is now comparatively rare, and the scenes of riot which were frequently to be witnessed at railway stations on the occasion of cheap trips are said to be altogether things of the past. The ironworkers have learned how to enjoy their leisure, when they get it, after a more rational fashion than in former days. They save more of their wages, and they spend more wisely. Large numbers of them belong to friendly and co-operative societies, and they and their families are better clothed and fed than they were a quarter of a century ago. In England, as well as throughout Canada there is, apparently a decided improvement in respect to 'the custom of the country.'"

It appeared in Calcutta and spread to Bombay, which is now a veritable City of Dead and Dying.

Julian Ralph, in a despatch to the Boston Globe from London, says: "No such calamity has befallen British India since the mutiny of 1857 as the scourge of plague and famine that now rages over so many vast areas of that populous land. And yet not until within the last few days has the English press thought it worth while to obtain any special information on the subject. There have been plagues before and there has been famine, but never have the two conjoinedly raged with such virulence as now. A whole nation of many millions of men is moving uneasily in agitation and alarm like the muttering of the sea before the storm. The disease crept into India from the Peninsula of Hong Kong where it had raged furiously for weeks and owing to the insularity of the place it could not be stamped out. It first appeared in Calcutta, then a few days later a suspicious case was reported from Bombay. The people at once said it was the plague, but the authorities uttered a shriek of angry denunciations saying it was false and a slander. It proved too true, however. Then came another case then several, then scores, then hundreds. Now Bombay is a veritable city of dead and dying. Never from the start have the authorities been capable of coping with the spread of the epidemic. The officials of the municipalities were more or less incompetent. The Europeans labored nobly but were overworked. The natives refused to permit the isolation of invalids. They inaugurated riots in the streets and stormed the hospitals and were fired on by the police. Every new health ordinance clashed with some religious custom or outraged some cherished superstition. Everyone who could fled from the town. Hundreds of thousands stampeded. The railway stations were packed and steamers were loaded down with the flying human beings. They seized every available vehicle, and those who were unable to leave had to remain and die. The official statistics admit that some 2,500 are dead already out of the 2,700 persons who were seized with the plague. But these figures do not nearly represent the true state of affairs. The death rate is now about 20.

THE CUBAN REBELLION. Spanish Gunboat Sunk. Havana advices state that on Sunday the 17th inst., a Spanish gunboat was sunk by insurgents by means of a torpedo, and several of the crew were killed. A detachment of rebels attacked the fort at Guanamo, some distance up the Cauto river, province of Santiago de Cuba. The Spanish troops asked for assistance from Manzanillo, on the coast, and Saturday night the gunboats Centinela and Relampago left Manzanillo to ascend the river and protect the fort. The gunboats used all possible speed in running up the coast to the mouth of the river, but when they began to ascend the stream they proceeded cautiously, as it was suspected the rebels might have planted torpedoes in the channel. When the gunboats were opposite Mango, despite all the precautions taken, the Relampago struck a torpedo. Instantly there was a terrific explosion and masses of water were hurled to a great height. The hull of the Relampago was torn open and she began to sink. There was no time to lower a boat, and the vessel soon went down. Those on board who were not injured jumped into the water and escaped their way in the direction of the Centinela, ahead of which the greatest excitement prevailed.

The Irish politicians have at last found a point upon which the Irish people are ready to agree and unite, viz., reduction of their taxes. Mr. Blake leads the van of the solid Irish phalanx prepared to discuss this question in the British House of Commons.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

LETTER FROM HON. B. DAVIES.

To the Editor of the Guardian: Sir,—You were pleased in your issue of the Guardian of this morning to criticize my remarks on the celebrated deputation to the Mayor leading the public to believe that the ministers of religion should not be active in enforcing a law of the land. Now I think it is very unfair to you to do so, because you say "We publish Mr. Davies' letter while dissenting from his expressed opinions." I deny, Sir, your statement. You did not publish my letter. You published only part of the letter that suited your interest to do so. If it had been in full it would have explained and supported the right of ministers, when they choose to do so, to take a part in civic affairs. And in doing so I expressed my opinion that the delegation had departed from the usual manner of presenting themselves to gentlemen holding the honorable position of the City Council and the Mayor are entitled to receive; for it is customary in all civilized countries to give intimation to the authority it appeals to of its approach. This the presenter of the specific petition is too well informed to ignore, and it was this slight that caused the well-administered rebuke of Councillor Nicholson and my remarks.

Yours respectfully, B. DAVIES.

P. S.—Will the Editor of THE EXAMINER oblige me by publishing the foregoing as I do not wish to have my views misstated as they have been by the Guardian.

B. DAVIES.

THE PATRIOT AND MR. MATTHEWS.

Sir,—In the Guardian of the 15th inst. there was a denial by the Rev. Mr. Turner of Mr. Matthews being concerned in a row which took place in 1895, and ended by his being denominated a Christian gentleman. This was copied into the Patriot without comment, and I am surprised at the editor, for he should know better.

Let him turn up his paper of March 7th 1895, and one or two later numbers, and he will discover his own account of the trial of this Matthews in particular and other Matthews in general for assault and riot. The facts, as given by the Patriot, are that the Rev. Mr. Baker was conducting meetings in a certain schoolhouse and that after the meeting came out the people were attacked and a riot took place. One of those who were hurt, I am told, will never get over his injuries.

At the trial of the rioters, Mr. Warburton prosecuted and Mr. Goddard defended. Some of the attacking parties were fined, among whom was Matthews. Another Matthews ran away, and has not since been on the island, as if caught the magistrates at the time would probably have sent him to the Supreme Court. Would it not be in order for the Patriot man to apologize either to Matthews, if he believed him, or to the public, whom he now appears to deceive.

Whether the above was the reason for the dismissal of Matthews from his professorship for Queen's County, I do not know at present; but that it quite justifies the action of the Mayor I am certain, and although certain of the city ministers are doing their utmost to coerce His Worship, I think he has too much of John Bull about him for that, and while remarking how strange and unbecoming it is for ministers of the Gospel, all of them strangers here, to attempt dictation to the people's chosen representatives, I may assure his Worship that the bone and sinew of the city, those who pay the taxes and have something at stake in the place, are one with him in his stand on this matter, and will also keep a strict eye on those of the Council who will allow them to be ridden roughshod over.

TRUTH.

SUMMERSIDE REGISTRY OFFICE.

Sir,—It is currently reported that Mr. W. C. White, of the Charlottetown Registry Office, has recently executed a careful official investigation of the work performed in the Summerside Registry Office, at present under the management and supervision of Messrs. D. Montgomery and J. C. Murray, and that the result (it is to be regretted) has been, owing to the circumstances, to report that to his great surprise he found the office in a most unsatisfactory condition, — the work, to some extent, improperly and imperfectly performed, and a very large amount of it remaining unperformed, to the great inconvenience and, probably, detriment of the public interest. If this report be correct, and of its correctness we have no reason to doubt, it becomes imperatively necessary, in the interest of the public of Prince County, that immediate and proper means be adopted to effectually remedy this unfortunate state of affairs, and cause the office to be conducted in the future on a sound business basis, and thereby in conformity with the magnitude of interests involved therein.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL. The Royal Society Meeting. Memorial of Cabot's Discovery.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20. Mr. Laurier went to Montreal last night to attend the Mayor's banquet there today.

Dr. Bourinot, Honorary Secretary of the Royal Society, left for Halifax, where he is to meet Sanford Fleming, who is expected by the Vancouver on the 23rd inst. They will discuss with Archbishop O'Brien, President of the Royal Society, the arrangements to be made for the annual meeting of the Society, which is to take place in that city from June 21st to 26th.

It is probable that a brass tablet, with a suitable inscription upon it, will be set up in Halifax to commemorate the famous voyage of John Cabot, who gave England her first claim to the Atlantic coast of North America.

THE ARMENIAN QUESTION. Effective Reforms Must be Granted.

LONDON, Jan. 20. In the House of Lords yesterday Lord Salisbury, referring to the Armenian question, said that all the powers were agreed that unless genuine and effective reforms were granted in Armenia, material pressure would be applied to the Sultan.

COLLISION OF STEAMERS. The Steamer Alvina Sunk.

New York, Jan. 20. The steamers Alvina, New York for Haiti, and the British Queen called off Sandy Hook Light yesterday. A large hole was made in the Alvina, which was run aground on a sand bar, and soon sank. The Alvina was in Halifax last week.
