THE MUSICAL MARVEL AND HIS WONDERFUL TALENT.
The Discovery of His Remarkable Gift
And Its Development—Eccentricities of
This Slightest Master of the Piano—His Physical History.

The recent death of Gen. Bethune, the original owner of the musical negro slave boy known as "Blind Tom," has aroused much public curiosity as to the disappearance of Tom from view. The best information I have been able to obtain is that he is passing the closing days of his life in a lunatic asylum, his vagaries having taken on too dangerous a form to admit of his going freely about as heretofore.

Tom was born in Muscogee county, Ga., says a writer in Kate Field's Washington. His father's name was Mingo, and his mother was called her own name, Aunt Charity. While he was still a boy, and supposed to be a mere idiot as well as sightless, he used to conceal himself in his master's parlors and play the same organ into the parlors and play the same music with which his young mistress entertained her guests a few hours before.

It was not until he was about ten years old that he was discovered. He was then taken to the city of New York, and there he was exhibited as a musical marvel. He was soon discovered, however, and reprinted. A public view was taken of his eccentricities when his master discovered that the boy's gift might be turned to profitable account, meanwhile, the children of the household, delighted with his marvellous powers, had not hesitated to defy the discipline of their elders and encourage him to play for them on the sky.

Besides being a remarkable player of other people's music, Tom was a composer himself. He was near enough to one of the battlefields of the civil war to catch the sounds from it, and these he wove into a piece which his manager entitled, for a popular effect, "The Battle of Manassas." In it the drums imitated the music of the fife and drums, the charges of the cavalry, the thunders of a battery, the groans of the wounded and dying, and all the incidents of the battle so faithfully as to call up a panorama of the scene before the mind's eye of the listener.

ENCOURAGE HOME INDUSTRY.
Sir,—Allow me a space in your valuable paper for a few words on the encouragement of home industry. Mr W D McKay is an enterprising man. His whole aim is to keep the money and the trade in our own country, and this should be the aim of all our merchants. In the first place he buys the wool from the farmer to encourage age here to raise sheep. Then he also employs a large number of hands in his woolen mills, where girls and men can earn good wages. Mr Dixon has entered into partnership with him, and his business is now known as the McKay Woolen Company. They have also taken Mr Enman's shop next door to the corner store, where they carry on a large tailoring establishment. Here he gives labor in another direction that the town is much in need of. The goods you get from him you can rely upon, for they are made from our own wool. He also has two traveling agents in the Maritime Provinces where they sell a large amount of employment in buying up calf skins. The mats he manufactures from them are something beautiful—they can be always seen in stock at his store. My idea is to patronize the man that encourages home industry. If we had a few more such enterprising men as Mr W. D. McKay in our town, our young men and women need not go abroad to seek employment. There is ample room for all here if our men with money would encourage trade. I wish him every success in his business. By the look of his store on Saturday night his trade is increasing daily.
Yours truly,
ONE OF THE WORKING CLASS.
PRINCIPLES OR VOTES—WHICH

Both will be important in the coming elections. Both parties want votes; principles may come in later. Some people say that principles tell in the long run more powerfully and conqueringly than votes. Certainly the principle, or root motive of Rigby, has told convincingly all over the country. The old rubber waterproof is dead and buried. The problem was to produce a garment while, while being perfectly waterproof, should at the same time, be unobjectionable as an ordinary overcoat. This dual character is admirably sustained in Rigby's Waterproof. A Spring Overcoat of this material, perfect ventilation, durable service. Don't be afraid of the rain or the chilly air; Rigby will protect you from both. Rigby is talked about; worn by thousands.

THE KENT CASE.
Physicians Universally Admit the Diagnosis to have been Correct.

OTTAWA, April 22.—The diagnosis in the case of Mr. G. H. Kent, of this city, whose recovery from Bright's disease by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills has been so extensively chronicled appears to have been a very correct one. The swelling of the body and extremities to an abnormal size, the fearful convulsions and subsequent insensibility, the racking pains, the retention of the hard ridges across the pit of the stomach and the great loss of albumen are all symptoms of this terrible disease, and it is universally admitted by all who have been approached on the subject that the case was unmistakable in its character. It is also universally admitted that he owes his restored health to the above mentioned remedy.
