It keeps their delicate skins in good order. Made entirely from vegetable fats, it is an emollient as well as a cleanser, and is as useful on a lady's toilet as on the nursery. Faintly but exquisitely aromatic.

If We Knew.
Could we but draw back the curtains
That surround each other's lives,
See their naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
Purer than we judge we should—
We should love each other better,
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the bad and good within,
Often we should love the sinner,
All the while we loathe the sin.
Could we know the powers working
To overthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the care of trials,
Knew the effort all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim eternal roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Would we help where now we hinder?
Would we pity where we blame?

Ah, we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force,
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source.
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
Oh, we'd love each other better,
If we only understood.

—Mrs. C. H. Traintor, in Good House-keeping.

The Pulpit and the Pew.

Between a minister and his congregation there is an action and a reaction, so that the minister makes the congregation and the congregation makes the minister. When one speaks of minister's service to his people one is not thinking of pew rents and offertories, and statistics, and crowds; nor of schools, and guilds, and classes, and lectures. The master achievement of the minister is to form character and to make men. The chief question, therefore, to consider about a minister's work is: What kind of men has he made?
And one, at least, of the most decisive questions by which the members of a congregation can be judged is: What have they made of their minister? By that one does not mean what salary they may give him, how agreeable they may be to him, but how far he has become a man and risen to his height in the atmosphere of his congregation. Some congregations have ruined ministers by harrassing them till they lost heart and self-control and became peevish and ill-tempered. Some congregations, again have ruined ministers by so humoring and petting them that they could endure no contradiction, and became childish. That congregation has done its duty most effectively which has created an atmosphere so genial, and yet so bracing, that every good in its minister has been fostered, and everything petty killed — Ian MacLaren, in the July Ladies' Home Journal.

What is Bigotry.

Firmness in your religious convictions is not bigotry. It certainly doesn't follow that because a man loves his own form of faith he must hate and despise all others. On the contrary the chances are that he will be a truly liberal man. A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," and it is only the man of strong convictions who can understand and sympathise with those who while differing from him in the strength with which they hold them. On the other hand men who have no strong convictions on any subject are often themselves very narrow-minded, and intolerant. They cannot understand men with strong convictions, as the saying is they have "no use for them." The narrowest minded and most illiberal men I have ever met, have, some of them, belonged to this class of so called "moderate men." They can scarcely say anything too hard of men of strong convictions. To them they are "fanatics," "extremists," "firebrands." There is only room and use in the world for men of their own type. Bigotry then is not firmness, in matters of principle. It is stubbornness about trifles, a lack of sympathy for what we consider the intellectual errors of our opponents, a tendency to attribute evil motives to those who differ from us, and an incapacity for distinguishing between systems and individuals. The latter is the real test of man's bigotry. The bigoted man hates the individual as much as, and often worse than his errors.—Church Work.

July 4—

Drugs are expensive. Sometimes they are more expensive than food. And sometimes they are not so reliable as they ought to be.
There was a time when the prices of drugs were away up—too high altogether.
That is not the case now. The Apothecaries Hall changed that some time ago. You can get prescriptions from pure drugs at the proper prices—no fancy profits. You can get all my reliable special remedies; they've been tried and found effective.

The price—the main thing—will be found right in every case.

Weary of Experimenting

With salves, suppositories and ointments and reading a surgical oration, scores and hundreds have turned to Dr. A. W. Chase's ointment and found it an absolute cure for pile. The first application brings relief from the terrible itching, and it is very seldom that more than one box is required to effect a permanent cure.
