STOPPING A RUN.

There was a run on the Sandhill and District Bank. It had lasted the whole of one day, and had shown no signs of abating in the evening. If it lasted another day! Old Mr. Bradshaw wiped his brow. It had come just at the most awkward time—just after the farmers had got their usual loans, just when securities were hard to realize; in fact just at the moment when the bank, though in reality solvent, was emphatically not in a position to answer a long-continued demand for payment on the spot. Mr. Bradshaw groaned out all these distressing facts to his son Dick.

"We shall have to put the shutters up. One day's grace would save us, believe; we could get the money then. But if they're at us again to-morrow morning, we can't last two hours."

Dick sympathized, but had nothing to suggest, except that it would not make matters worse if he cleared out his engagement to go to the circus with the Flirtington girls.

"Oh, go to Halifax with the Flirtington girls, if you like," groaned Mr. Bradshaw.

So Dick went—to the circus (the other expedition, as he observed, would keep), and enjoyed the performance very much, especially the lion taming, which was magnificent, and so impressed Dick that he deserted his companions, went behind the scenes, and insisted on standing Sig. Philippini several glasses.

"IS HE CHAINED?"

"Is that big chap quite safe?" he asked, admiringly.

"I can do anything with 'im," said the signor (whose English was naturally defective; "but with anyone helse 'e's a roarer, 'e is, and no mistake."

After the performance Dick took the Flirtington girls home; then, with a thoughtful look on his face, he went and had some talk with his father, and came away, carefully placing a roll of notes in his breast pocket. Then he sought Sig. Philippini's society once more. And that's all that is really known about it—if, that is, we discard the obviously fanciful statement of Fanny Flirtington that as she was gazing at the moon at two a.m. she saw a heavy wagon drawn by two horses and driven by Sig. Philippini, pass along the street in the direction of the bank.

However these things may be, this is what happened next morning: When the first of the depositors arrived at seven a.m., they found one of the windows of the bank smashed to pieces and the shutter hanging loose. A cry went up that there had been a robbery, and one or two men began to climb in. They did not go far before a fearful roar proceeded from the neighborhood of the counter. They looked at one another, and said it would be more regular to wait for the officials. The roars continued. They sent for Mr. Bradshaw. Hardly had he arrived (accompanied by Dick, breathless and in shirtsleeves) before the backmost rows of the now considerable crowd became agitated with a new sensation. The news spread rapidly. Frantic men ran to and fro; several ladies fainted; the circus proprietor was sent for. A lion had escaped from the menagerie, and was supposed to be at large through the town!

"Send for Philippini!" said the proprietor. They did so. Philippini had started early for a picnic in the country, and would not return till just before the performance in the evening. The proprietor was in despair.

"Where's the beast gone to?" he cried.

A roar from the bank answered his question.

"Well, I'm blowed if he's not in the bank!" exclaimed the proprietor.

It certainly appeared to be the fact that Atlas (that was the lion's name) had taken refuge in the bank, and was in full possession of the premises and assets. Under these circumstances there was, Mr. Bradshaw explained, a difficulty in resuming cash payments; but if his checks would be accepted—the crowd roared almost as loud as Atlas at such an idea. Something must be done. They sent for the Mayor; he repudiated liability. They sent for the fire brigade and the life-boat crew. Neither would come. They got in, and peppered the furniture. Atlas retired behind the fireproof safe and roared worse than ever. Meanwhile the precious hours were passing. Mr. Bradshaw's money was also on its way from London. At last Dick took a noble resolution.

"I CAN'T 'OLD 'IM! 'E'S MAD."

"I will go in at any cost!" he cried, and, in spite of Fanny Flirtington's tears, he scaled the window and disappeared from view. The crowd waited to hear Atlas crunching; but he only roared. When Dick was ready he asked: "Is he chained?"

"Yes," answered Sig. Philippini from behind the safe. "Is the Aunt Sally business over?" and he came out with a long pole in his hand. He used the pole to stir poor Atlas up when the roars became deficient in quantity and quality.

"The money ought to be here in three hours," said Dick. "Have you got the back door key?"

Philippini reassured him. Then Dick took a wild, running leap at the window; Philippini stirred up Atlas, who roared lustily. Dick escaped with his life, and landed, a breathless heap, at the Mayor's feet. The Mayor raised him, and said he should write to Her Majesty and suggest that Dick would be a proper recipient of the Albert medal, and the vicar (who had no money in the bank) indignantly asked the crowd if they could not trust a family which produced scions like that. Several people cried "Hear, hear!" and told Mr. Bradshaw that they never really meant to withdraw their deposits. Mr. Bradshaw thanked them and looked at his watch.

At half-past three Philippini ran up; he also was breathless, and his shoes were dusty from walking in the country. At once he effected an entry, amid a scene of great excitement. A moment later he appeared at the window and cried in terror:

"I can't 'old 'im! I can't 'old 'im! 'E's mad! Look out for yourselves!" and he leaped from the window.

The crowd fled in all directions, and two boys were all but run over by a cart which was being driven rapidly from the railroad station to the bank.

"All right," said Dick to the signor "bring up the wagon." And then, with great difficulty and consummate courage, the signor and Dick brought an iron cage up to the window and drove Atlas in. The operation took more than an hour, because they had to feed Atlas and drink a bottle of champagne themselves before they set about it. So that it was about six o'clock before Atlas was out and the money was in, and the Sandhill bank opened its place for business.

"We gained just the time we needed," said Mr. Bradshaw. "It was dirt cheap at fifty pounds."

And Dick, although he did not get the Albert medal, was taken into partnership and married Fannie Flirtington. It was the only way of preventing her seeing things she was not meant to see out of the window at two a.m., and chattering about them in public.—From "Sport Royal."

Street Noises.

The essence of good Government has been defined as "the greatest happiness for the greatest number," and it is surely time to reiterate the question whether something cannot be done to make life less unendurable for those who work with their heads and are compelled to live in great cities. We believe we are correct in saying that in no foreign town and in few British towns is such license given to anyone to earn a living by annoying his fellow-creatures as in London. From an early hour in the morning the air is thick with the rancous yells of boys and men selling race cards and half-penny news sheets. Later in the day the torment is aggravated by piano organs, so-called bands and street-singers, while at a late hour of the night it is quite common to be disturbed by hordes or ruffians with voices like foghorns, rearing out imaginary and highly-spiced details of a murder which has never happened, or some even more unsavory subject.

The police, it appears, are powerless. News vendors cannot be interfered with if they move on—and they do move on—in a circle. Organs, we fancy, can only be moved from in front of the complainant's door, and as a piano-organ is perfectly audible 200 yards away this remedy is useless. There is only one remedy, and that is to compel anyone who wishes to make a noise in the street for the purpose of getting money to pay a heavy license for the privilege of so doing. No one would object to the sale of papers if it were not accompanied by howls worthy of an eighteenth century madhouse. Rates and taxes rise with the utmost regularity every year, and it is not too much to ask that something should be done to obviate a nuisance which gets yearly worse and worse.

The ringing of church bells, which, except those of St. Paul's, are always out of tune, should on no account be allowed in London, except for five minutes or so before service. Everyone who goes to church knows perfectly well at what hour to go, and those who do not go, probably do not want to know. In the age of faith the ringing of bells drove away devils, but the latter day fiend who yells "Paiper" and grinds organs is proof against their power, and to ring bells is but to add one more unnecessary noise to the large number of necessary ones which already exist. We have pointed on several occasions that there is no legal right to ring or toll a bell except before morning and evening prayer, or on the occasion of a funeral, and that the ringing of a bell previously to the celebration of the holy communion, which often now occurs, in the early hours of the morning, is wholly illegal and unwarrantable. It is a great torture to many sick and weakly people—The Lancet.

Lord Ashburnham's Coins.

The late Lord Ashburnham's rare and splendid collection of Greek coins was sold at Sotheby last week. Lord Ashburnham was so enthusiastic in his search for these coins that in his younger days he made several cruises in his yacht among the Greek islands for the purpose of hunting up specimens. It has always been said that during the last of these expeditions the yacht was boarded by pirates, and to Lord Ashburnham's inexpressible vexation his cabinet of coins (which he omitted on carrying about with him) was stolen by them. This grievous bereavement disgusted him with his hobby, and he gave it up for several years; but one day seeing some of his own coins (which had been carried off by the pirates) exposed for sale in Paris, he bought them, and that transaction was the origin of the present superb collection. Lord Ashburnham was a large purchaser at the sales of Mr. Samuel Addington's and Lord Northwick's collections, and he seized every opportunity of enriching his cabinet, being possessed of ample means as well as a thorough knowledge of the subject, so that he never bought any rubbish. It was one of the finest and most representative collections in the world, and very high prices were obtained for most of the specimens.—London World.

There was always a prejudice against taking Cod Liver Oil on account of its disagreeable taste, but Miller's Emulsion is agreeable to the palate, and that is one reason why it has become so popular with the medical fraternity, the hospitals of the country and the households wherever consumption or lung troubles prevail. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottle, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.
