There will be no armistice and no suspension of war operations till Spain agrees to the terms proposed.

IRISH LOCAL BILL PASSED.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

LONDON, July 30.—The Irish Local Bill passed its third reading in the House of Lords with some unimportant amendments.

The Quebec papers are pointing out that when Mr. Tarte was in Opposition he delivered a speech in Parliament demanding that judges should be nominated by the bar instead of being named by the Government of the day and appointed for political services. Now, as the Montreal Gazette remarks, we have the Chequette case. It is difficult to believe that Mr. Tarte could have proposed a reform. But he did. And, like the rest of them, he does not intend to carry his reform into effect.

One of the most essential conditions that I know of, in the growing of a good fleece of wool, is the keeping of the sheep; in a good condition all through the year and, whenever there is a falling-off in condition, the staple is affected.

THEY HAD A THRILLING ESCAPE.

The Story of a Spanish Captain.

TELLS HIS SORROWS TO A CIENFUEGOS PAPER.

Details of the Loss of the Spanish Steamer Alfonso XII.

QUANTANAMO BAY, July 28.—The following is a translation from a newspaper of Cienfuegos of the loss of the Spanish steamer Alfonso XII, which was driven ashore on the coast of Cuba by the United States auxiliary gunboat Hawk:

"Yesterday," says El Correa, of Havana, "there arrived here the survivors of the fine trans-Atlantic steamer Alfonso XII, which was scuttled in the waters of Mariel. With a natural desire to obtain information which would calm the anxiety of the public, we interviewed the survivors and ascertained that they were rendered nearly insensible by fatigue and anxiety. They were so faint from walking from Mariel to Guzajay and their hands were badly lacerated in violent and futile efforts to save cargo."

"We will faithfully relate that which occurred, reserving what in our judgement is not permitted to give to the public and what might serve as advice to our enemies. "The Alfonso XII was fitted out in Cadiz with six cannon, the necessary crew, three companies of marines, and other necessary articles. "In twenty days," said her captain, "I hope to make port and land the cannon and troops. I navigated the Alfonso XII with hope in God and in the valor of my own crew. I ran with all possible speed to the heights of Cienfuegos, where came out three cruisers of the enemy. Seeing them the Alfonso XII took flight toward the Isle of Pines, in which waters I lost sight of our pursuers."

Believing myself now free from pursuit, I laid my course directly toward Havana with the full intention of making that harbor. When eight miles distant my course was intercepted by three cruisers, which I was unable to encounter. The American cruisers took positions on my port and starboard and ahead. It entered the Alfonso XII, toward Mariel where I hoped to enter with the exclusive object of disembarking. I decided to save the cargo as the object in coming was to land provisions and cargo on the island.

I saw an embarrassing situation. The Yankees began throwing shells which landed in all directions around the ship, which proves that we have said a thousand times, that the Americans are not artilleryists and out of the hundreds of projectiles thrown at Alfonso XII only eight struck the ship."

"This corroborates the opinion of their bad training. Then Capt. Moret ordered the cargo to be thrown overboard in order that some of it might float to the shore which was but a pistol shot distance.

"We got out a boat," he says, "and prepared to torpedo the ship. I saw the Americans would not delay destroying the fine ship and therefore I placed an explosive bomb between the two funnels and instantly blew up the ship in a column of smoke, so dense that it made breathing difficult. Thus has been consumed the best ship of the Trans-Atlantic company and the pride of the fleet.

The Annapolis, Wasp and Leiden of Thursday sank in Nipe bay the Spanish gunboat George Juan, which was well armed.

Information has been received of the withdrawal of the Spanish troops from Ghara, from which place there is a railroad to Holguin.

CROMARTYSHIRE NOT TO BLAME

La Bourgogne--Cromartyshire Disaster.

CAPTAIN SMITH'S COURT GIVES A DECISION.

Interesting Incident After the Decision Was Delivered.

HALIFAX, July 29.—Captain W. H. Smith, R N R, gave his decision yesterday in the La Bourgogne-Cromartyshire investigation. After reviewing the evidence, the commissioner commented at some length on the details of the disaster, after which he read the court's conclusion, which was substantially as follows:

1. That the master of the Cromartyshire implicitly obeyed the regulations to prevent collisions at sea.
2. That the fog horn was properly sounded.
3. That a proper lookout was kept.
4. That the speed of the sailing vessel was moderate.
5. That the Cromartyshire was kept on her course according to the rules.
6. That the conduct of the master in saving life was highly commendable.
7. That the master of the Cromartyshire is entirely exonerated from all fault and his certificate is returned to him.
8. That the officers and crew are also free from blame.

An interesting incident after the delivery of the formal decision was witnessed when Capt. Douglas called Capt. Henderson to the bench and said: "I have very great pleasure in returning your certificate to you. I am sure you have been a very successful master."

THE SURRENDER OF MANILA.

Said to be Expected Every Day.

DEWEY ASKED FOR AN EXPRESSION OF OPINION.

The Cuban Junta is Greatly Exercised Over the Situation.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—News of Manila's surrender to Dewey is expected daily. Yesterday there was a noticeable move on the part of many gentlemen who are detained here by the to leave for their vacation in anticipation of early peace. But today the idea is somewhat changed and the gentlemen are again settling down to work. However, there is no change in the peace situation.

It is believed personally that President McKinley would like to get clear of the Philippines, but is determined to go slowly.

I am told from an official source to day that the president has cabled Dewey for an expression of opinion of the Philippine question.

One point that must not be overlooked is the fact that the president cannot give up the Philippines or any other island of Spain seized by American forces. That power lies alone with two thirds of the senate. The Philippines are at present in the possession of the Americans and must so remain until two thirds of the senate say to the contrary.

The most excited body of men in the United States is the Cuban Junta. Cubans in the field have driven the Cubans here almost crazy. The latter see public opinion turning against them. The prizes they have been working for years are likely to slip through their fingers. They don't blame the American government, in which they have utmost faith and to which they have ever shown themselves amenable, but they heap imprecations on the Cubans in the field and have been wiring them to do everything Shafter says and even, if necessary, to stop eating long enough to do it or words to that effect.
