Large Number Of Tuna Reported Off Nova Scotia

HALIFAX, N. S., July 24—Tuna are making their appearance off the south shore of Nova Scotia and large numbers are being reported by deep sea commercial fishermen, according to C. K. Howard, director of fishing and hunting parties for the Canadian National Railways.

Twelve have been landed to date, the largest weighing 487 pounds. A number of sportsmen have already been fishing in these waters.

Off Wedgeport, W. P. Smith and Otto Gasper, executive of the Chrysler Corporation, succeeded Monday in landing the 487 pound tuna after a battle which lasted for eight hours. J. W. Hyland, of Cross Point, Mich., landed a tuna weighing 480 pounds, while John Manning, of Los Angeles, Calif., got one weighing 436 pounds.

Townsend Martin, prominent New York big game angler, hooked a large tuna and fought it for eleven hours before it finally broke the leader and got away. Evoc LeBlanc, veteran tuna guide, who guided President Franklin D. Roosevelt at Wedgeport three years ago, hooked into another huge tuna and after fighting it for five hours lost it through a snapped line.

Fishing activities to date have been centred off Liverpool, Jordan, Shelburne and Wedgeport.

Has High Praise For Confederation Celebration Here

Mr. P. Campbell Johnston returned to the city during the weekend from Charlottetown where during last week he was an honored guest at the celebration marking the 75th anniversary of the Charlottetown Conference which led to Confederation.

He was one of four direct descendants of the Fathers of Confederation who participated in that conference, being a son of the late Hon. John M. Johnston, a delegate from New Brunswick.

Mr. Johnston speaks in glowing terms of the excellent programme arranged to mark the significant event, declaring the Confederation pageant presented during the week as the finest pageantry he had ever witnessed. He also speaks highly of the wonderful hospitality extended to him by everyone whom he met in Charlottetown and expressed the great pleasure it afforded him to be present among so acceptable a people upon the commemoration of so notable an occasion in Canadian history.

Another Monctonian who also returned home during the weekend was Mr. Daniel MacDonald, retired custom tailor, who had been spending his annual vacation in his native Prince Edward Island. After visiting in Digby, Souris and other places, he also attended the Confederation celebration in Charlottetown last week and declares that he had never before witnessed such an elaborate and well arranged programme of events marking so historic an occasion. Charlottetown, he says, was never in so gala attire as last week and everyone had a hearty welcome for the visitors. (Moncton Times)

DECREASE IN CATCH—The lobster catch for the season which closed the last of June was 1,000 cases less than that of last year it has been learned. Although it was thought that the lobster were plentiful in the section fished, on the north side of the Island to Victoria, nevertheless stormy weather which made it impossible for the boats to leave shore on many days, was a big factor in the poor catch. The late season opens on August 10th for the area from Victoria to North Point and should good weather prevail prospects for a good catch appear bright.

ROOSEVELT AND FARLEY SILENT ON CONFERENCE

President And Democratic Chairman Decline To Disclose Nature Of Talk.

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL Associated Press Staff Writer

THE PARK, N. Y., July 24—A conference between President Roosevelt and National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley ended today in an atmosphere of secrecy, leaving unanswered flickish political questions about a third term, the 1940 campaign, and the personal relationship of the heads of the Democratic Party.

One significant but puzzling pronouncement came from the President—that he thought the talks with Farley would continue to be effective.

He said that at his home here where Farley was a guest last night, the two of them had just had another of the regular conversations they had been having since 1922.

They continued along the same lines as they had for 11 years, Mr. Roosevelt said, and there wasn't much story in that except that the results on that score had been fairly effective, and he thought they would continue to be effective.

If there was a hint that Farley and the President might have taken up the third term issue that statement contained it.

Reporters noted especially the remark about the talks continuing in the same tempo in previous parleys through the last 11 years. Mr. Roosevelt and Farley have canvassed political conditions from every angle and mapped out their own political destinies.

But whether Farley asked about the President's 1940 intentions, or got an answer, was a question which only they could answer. They remained silent.

As to what passed between the Chief Executive and the man who has been his chief political ally, Mr. Roosevelt said that if he were writing the story, he would have to make it uninteresting and devoid of speculation, and he would have to stick to the truth. The truth, he said, was that the conference was merely one of the regular talks.

He said he didn't know what reporters could make of his statements about the effectiveness of those talks, and that he did not believe they would obtain additional information either from himself or the postmaster general.

"Nobody is going to catch up with me," Farley interposed. The Democratic Chairman said for Europe later in the week.

charge of the theological college at the same time. Later Dr. Ernest Coffin took a post-graduate course at Clark University at Worcester, Mass. After spending a year teaching in India, he went to Alberta and became Principal of the Normal School in 1911. The Doctor will leave today on return to Sackville and his family will proceed to Picton, where Mrs. Coffin will visit relatives.

Japanese Foreign Office and their military leaders it was thought desirable to agree to the formula rather than run the risk of an army usurping the negotiations and making stiffer terms.

3. The sole purpose of the formula was to mark the Tokyo negotiations which may place conversational relations on better terms.

Agitation to Cease

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax in the House of Lords declared that as a result of the agreement it was expected Japanese anti-British agitation would cease. (Hailing the agreement as a "sweeping diplomatic victory," Japanese insisted it granted them virtual belligerent rights in the war against China.)

Replying to a barrage of opposition questions, Mr. Chamberlain denied the agreement constituted de facto recognition of Japanese sovereignty in Japanese-controlled areas of China and gave assurance that in the Tokyo negotiations on Chinese local issues, nothing would be agreed upon which would impair Chinese currency or Britain's right to grant credits to China.

Confronted with a political furor over one of his junior ministers, Robert Hudson, parliamentary secretary for overseas trade, the Prime Minister told Parliament that the "private conversation" between German and British trade officials last week about a broad European settlement, which was without the cabinet's knowledge or sanction.

He publicly exonerated Mr. Hudson of any impropriety in discussing with Dr. Telmuth Wohlthat, German trade expert, the possibilities of enabling Germany to return to a policy of negotiation and disarmament through a big British loan to the Reich and a colonial settlement.

Opposition members pressed him for an assurance the government did not entertain further appeasement intentions.

Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the Labor opposition, asked bluntly "can we take it that there is no intention on the part of the government now to begin discussions which might look like bribery to Herr Hitler in order to buy peace?"

"It is not the intention of the government to initiate any discussions of this kind," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

Mr. Hudson said a few places behind Mr. Chamberlain on the treasury bench as the Prime Minister gave his account of the conversations which caused sensation in political and diplomatic quarters during the week end.

Lord Halifax in the House of Lords gave similar assurances that Hudson's talks had been "unofficial," and "in no sense unusual."

The German Government declared Mr. Hudson and Wohlthat merely exchanged private views on economic matters and asserted initiative for the exchange came from Britain.

World Wheat Trade Exceeds Estimates

OTTAWA, July 24—World trade in wheat for the present crop year ending July 31, will reach 600,000,000 bushels according to the monthly report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics issued today. This is from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels more than earlier estimates.

The July report of the bureau on the world wheat situation is particularly significant because it is the last report for the current crop year.

"This is the best world export volume since 1922-23," the report states, "and it is somewhat gratifying in view of the large 1938 crops in most importing countries. Increased world shipments this past season have been due partly to purchases for security stocks, partly to a revival of demand from the Orient and partly to low world price levels.

Vacation Diary—In Pictures

Make your vacation "picture-diary" complete. Take general views and scenic—but get "fun" pictures and close-ups, too. And snap interesting details of places you visit.

EACH of us, at some time or other, has kept a diary. Have you thought of using your camera for this purpose? It's a good idea any time, but now, at vacation time, it has special point.

Look back over your vacations for the past few years. How good a picture story of each vacation did you get? Does your picture album show all the things you did—all the interesting spots you visited—the fun your group had? Or is the record rather spotty, and the pictures too much alike?

Chances are, you missed many opportunities. Perhaps you ran short of film—that's a common mistake of vacationers. But, more likely, you shot your vacation pictures without a definite plan. You didn't outline a story for your vacation pictures to tell.

For this year's vacation, here's a better method. As you map out your vacation plans, jot down picture possibilities in a notebook—one small enough to keep with you. Note down the things you want to remember—packing, departure, points of interest en route to your destination, things you will do each day after you arrive.

If you're taking a motor tour, also note down in advance the interesting or different features of the country through which you will pass.

—mountains, prairies, big trees, pines or moss-hung oaks, gorges and canyons, or whatever you expect to see. Then resolve to get good pictures of these revealing features.

If, perchance, you're taking a cruise to another land, make similar notes of things you'll want to picture—the people, national dress, any public fiestas or celebrations, interesting types of architecture, the "different" aspects of the country you'll see.

If you're visiting places of historical interest, or special current interest—such as a World's Fair—study the literature available, and note down the buildings you'll want to shoot, and other details you'd like to keep in pictures.

And, on vacation, keep this notebook and your camera busy. Concentrate on getting pictures that really tell the story of what you saw and did. Don't take general views exclusively—single out details that especially interest you, and get close-ups of them. Shoot as many pictures as are necessary to make your vacation record a true "picture diary."

That's the real way to picture a vacation. Try it—and you'll build up an album to show your friends that is genuinely worth while; an album to treasure for years.
