

POLLY PEMBROKE'S BABY.

(Concluded.)

But the trains came and went, and still no one appeared to claim the baby.

Miss Jones grew desperate.

'Polly Pembroke,' said she, 'I've no patience with you for getting us into this scrape. What do you suppose is to be the end of it all?'

Polly rose up quietly.

'I am going to take the child home with us,' said Polly.

'Polly!'

'I am!' reiterated the girl. 'Poor little helpless innocent! what else can we do?'

'Let it be sent to the house of refuge or to the poorhouse, or some such place!' screamed Miss Jones.

'With those eyes?' said Polly, looking down into the tender, pleading orbs.

'Never! It will be all right, I am quite sure, Miss Jones. All this is only a mistake. Stewards,' to the suspicious quadroom, who had taken care to keep at a safe distance all the while, 'here is my address. Give it to the gentleman when he comes back.'

'Yes,' said the woman, pursing up her lips. 'But it's my private opinion as nobody won't see hide nor hair of him again.'

So Polly Pembroke brought home not only a blue silk dress, but a dark-eyed baby into the bargain.

'Child,' said Deacon Pembroke, 'I can't blame you for doing a charitable action, but I am afraid you've taken a terrible charge upon yourself.'

'Don't fret, father—don't fret!' said Mrs. Pembroke, who was a cheery little body, with an invincible habit of looking on the sunny side of everything.

'It seems a nice, healthy child enough, and I dare say it will soon be called for. Besides, don't the good book say that "Whosoever gives one of the Lord's little ones even a cup of cold water in His name, shall not be without a reward."'

And so the days passed by, and the weeks; and even Polly Pembroke, the most trusting of mortals, began to think that she had been the victim of a conspiracy, and that she was destined to bear the whole responsibility of this little nameless life.

'Mother,' said she, wistfully, 'I may keep her, mayn't I, if I'll give up going to see cousin Sue in Boston, and not ask father for a new cloak this winter? And we'll take summer boarders next season, and I'll raise poultry, and she shall be no expense to you, mother, indeed!'

'Well, well, child,' said Mrs. Pembroke, with a moisture in her eyes, 'have your own way.'

'You'd a deal better send it to one of the public institutions,' said Miss Jones, severely.

'Our little Rosebud?' said Polly, showering soft kisses on its velvet cheeks. 'Oh, never, never, Miss Jones!'

'You was a big fool to begin to with, and I don't see but what you mean to be a fool all the way through,' said Miss Jones!

She had come to bring Miss Pembroke's fall hat home—a venerable Leghorn, trimmed with drab satin bows—and when she was going Polly happened to pick up the New York daily paper which had been wrapped around it.

'Murther,' cried she, springing breathlessly to her feet, 'just listen to this advertisement.'

'If the young lady who took charge of an infant in the depot on the afternoon of Saturday, July 30, 1875, will send her address to Messrs. Kobel & Ledger, No. — Broadway, she will confer an inestimable favor!'

'Mother!' said Polly, 'what does it mean?'

'It means you,' said Mrs. Pembroke. 'Shall I answer it?' said Polly.

'Of course,' said Mrs. Pembroke.

'But suppose they want to take Rosebud away from me?' faltered Polly.

'My dear, we must accept our fate as Providence metes it out to us,' said the old lady.

So Polly wrote her little note, and by the next train the tall gentleman with the Spanish eyes arrived at Whip-Poor-Will Glen.

'Do you think me a heartless wretch?' he said to Polly, with his voice choked with emotion. 'But I am not. When I went out of the depot that day, my foot slipped while crossing the street, and I fell under a horse's feet. They carried me insensible to the hospital, and I lay there for weeks in the delirium brain fever, caused by my injuries. The moment I returned to consciousness I made every inquiry, but could hear nothing of you.'

'I gave my address to the stewards,' said Polly.

'But the stewardess had gone away. A strange woman occupied her position who remembered nothing of the circumstances; and for a while I actually believed that my motherless little treasure was lost forever. How can I ever thank you, Miss Pembroke, for all you have been to my little Isaura?'

So the tiny Rosebud was carried away; but her father brought her back several times to see the adopted mother whom she loved so devotedly.

'Polly,' said he, one day, 'Isaura is happier with you than anywhere else. Is she?' said Polly.

For by this time they had become great friends, and she had lost her awe of the stately gentleman.

'And it is a singular coincidence,' he added with a smile, 'that I am also.'

At this Polly colored radiantly.

What was the end of this? Can any one guess?

'Perhaps if I'd take the baby home and made a fuss over it, the rich gentleman would have married me!' said Miss Jones, when she was cutting the white silk for the wedding dress. 'I thought Polly Pembroke was a fool then, but I've seen cause to change my mind since.'

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniments. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER.

You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will sell hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.

CATARRH

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy
CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevented me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
