Sherwood Fire Dept. Gets First Inspection

The first annual inspection of the Sherwood Fire Department took place at the Sherwood Fire Hall last evening. The inspection was carried out by Charlottetown Fire Chief Herbert Jewell, Deputy Chief Gordon Stewart and Sherwood Fire Chief Keith Carmichael.

The Sherwood Fire Brigade, consisting of 19 volunteer firemen serving the village of Sherwood with a population of approximately 2,000, also assists the school districts of East Royalty, Marshfield, York, Brackley and Harrington.

The department, formed in 1960, consists of one 500 gallon per minute pumper equipped with booster tank, a 1,300 gallon tank truck with power take off pump, and a 2,000 gallon tank truck also equipped with a pto pump.

A two-way radio system is available on all trucks for prompt communications between the fire station and fire trucks as well as the Sherwood police vehicle.

Officers of the department include Fire Chief Keith Carmichael, Deputy Chief C. Stewart, Captain B. Newson, Captain Eric Wood, Lieutenant Roy Clarke and Lieutenant R. Wright. Chief Commissioner is John McAleer and John Richard is chairman of the Sherwood Fire Department.

COMMANDED RESPECT
A gruff-voiced man with rugged features, Mr. Nowlan commanded universal respect as a gentlemanly debater. The day after the 1963 budget was brought down, he graciously apologized to Mr. Gordon in the House for having used intemperate language in his criticism the night before.
During his five years as revenue minister he reported to

Souris Man Member Of Winning Cast

SOURIS—Patrick Wood of Halifax, formerly of Souris, was a member of the cast of Wakefield Cycle, a play recently presented in Brockville, Ont.

The play presented by the Xavier Players of St. Francis Xavier University, won the top award for the Dominion Drama Festival and also was awarded $1,000.

Mr. Wood graduated from Souris High School in 1957 and studied for a year at St. Mary's University, Halifax. He was employed in Charlottetown for a period before joining the civil service in Halifax.

He has a summer job in Boston and plans to return to third year at St. Francis Xavier University this fall where he is majoring in psychology.

Parliament for the CBC. He often resisted pressure to interfere with CBC management and proclaimed the corporation's independence from political meddling.

George Clyde Nowlan was born Aug. 14, 1896, at Havelock, N.S., the son of an Irish farmer and Acadian mother. His father ran a farm, a sawmill and a general store at various times. George attended Acadia University in Wolfville and enlisted in the 11th Field Battery in the First World War, serving in France. He narrowly escaped death in a German bombardment and was about to start officer training when the war ended.

He graduated later from the Dalhousie University law school in Halifax and opened a successful law practice in Wolfville. He married July 18, 1923. FIRST ELECTED AT 27.

Mr. Nowlan was elected to the Nova Scotia legislature at 27 in 1925 and was returned three years later. He was defeated in a Liberal landslide in 1933 and stayed out of politics until 1948 when he became minister J. L. Halsey resigned his Commons seat to take an appointment to the Nova Scotia bench.

Mr. Nowlan won the bye-election by 1,588 votes on Dec. 13, but lost by four votes to Liberal A. A. Elderkin in the 1949 general election six months later. Mr. Elderkin's election was declared void a year later by the provincial Supreme Court because of irregularities and a new bye-election was called. Mr. Nowlan won with a majority of 2,585 votes.

He won the next five elections with margins as high as 5,451 in 1959 but squeaked through with 416 votes in his last contest.

Mr. Nowlan was national president of the Progressive Association in 1950-54. He served for most of his career as a member of the Acadia University board of governors. He was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion and the Rotary Club.

His death reduced Conservative strength in the 265-seat Commons to 93.

There are 129 Liberals, 18 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes, nine Social Credit MPs and two independents.

Plan Would Give Work To Persons On Relief

Persons receiving aid from welfare agencies here may, in future, have to work for payments received.

The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, at a recent conference in Windsor, Ont., passed a resolution calling for communities to put such a plan into effect.

Local welfare officials here are expected to investigate the plan thoroughly.

Officials here feel the plan should be tried for several reasons. Among them is the belief that a family man has a better chance of retaining his self-respect if allowed to work to support his children rather than accepting "handouts" from city welfare agencies.

They also feel such a labor force could be well used to cut down expenses in such jobs as snow removal from streets.

The federation's resolution calls on the federal government to reconsider its action in barring from federal financial help communities putting the plan into effect.

The federation also approved in principle the policy of able-bodied persons being required to work an appropriate number of hours for welfare money received.

Rate of pay would be based on "the going union rate for labor."
The federation executive will put the plan before the federal cabinet at the fall annual meeting of the executive and the cabinet ministers in Ottawa.

Gallery Director Outlines Plans Of Contemporary Crafts Museum

Moncrieff Williamson, Confederation Art Gallery and Museum director, yesterday described to a conference of the Canadian Museum Association in Ottawa plans for a museum of contemporary crafts here.

The curator's plan for the craft museum is part of a scheme which would involve turning the offices in the neighboring Legislative Building into "period rooms, furnished with the historical artifacts at present stored by us and belonging to the Prince Edward Island Historical Society."

"The exhibits would be confined to history since Confederation, with perhaps one or two rooms devoted to pioneer life on the Island. For this we would be able to accept gifts of Confederation material from other collections across Canada," Mr. Williamson said.

"In the vaulted basement areas... I would like to see crafts workshops for the use of young people between the ages of 16 and 25, which would nicely supplement the crafts workshops at present operated by the Handicrafts Branch of the Provincial Government."

CENTRE OF HISTORY
"Those tourists coming to Charlottetown would stand at the centre of Canadian history and see Confederation Chamber, the Legislative Chamber and a series of historical exhibits in keeping with the environment. Crossing the intervening Mall, they would then enter Confederation Centre and the twentieth century," he pointed out.

The craft museum would be housed on all four exhibition floors of the Confederation gallery, and the displays of "applied and decorative arts of the finest quality" would be surrounded by painting and sculpture dating from 1867 and including some of the best contemporary works of art.

Other future plans include a 1967 "retrospective exhibition" of the works of Robert Harris, Mr. Williamson said. The Gallery has inherited the paintings owned by the Robert Harris Trust and will borrow some of his other works from collections in other parts of Canada.

VARIOUS FACETS
The curator commented on various facets of the Centre as follows:

On the Centre's local acceptance: "The Islanders and other inhabitants of the Atlantic provinces are taking full advantage of it, believe me... Only among the very old or mentally stagnant do we find hesitation and reluctance to step forward and be admitted to the body of culture."

On the Centre as a tourist attraction: "During the first season Confederation Centre has brought about a modest financial boom and at the close of last summer's tourist period there was recorded in the local banks an increase of $7,000,000 over the previous year's trade... This year advance bookings for tourist accommodation are up 20 per cent on 1964 and we expect a minimum of 350,000 visitors, of whom at least 300,000 will pass through the Centre."

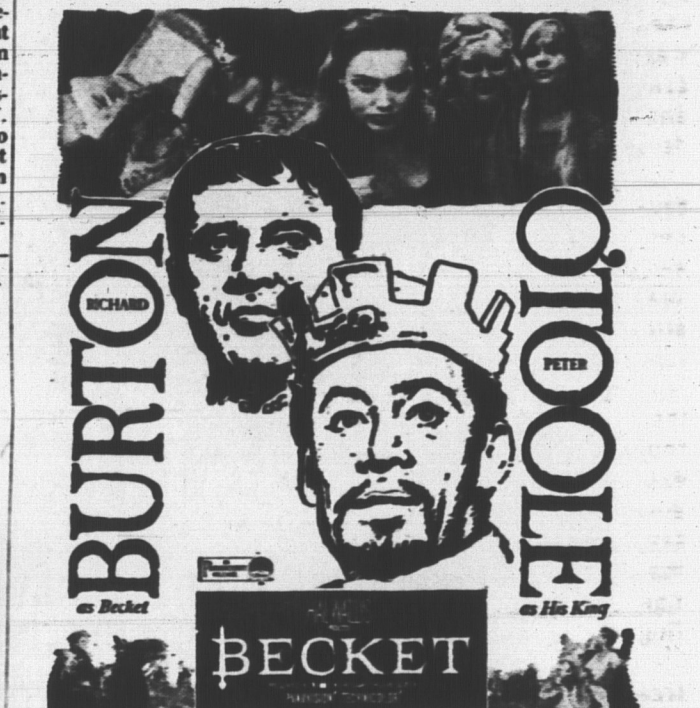

On the Centre as a symbol: "Confederation Centre is a visible reminder that Canada has finally come of age, thrown off colonial domination of the past. In Charlottetown we have erected a Shrine to our independence, to the rebirth which encompasses all ethnic groups and cultural structures: it is a living organism of unbounded potential."

The Centre as an example: "From air-conditioning to aesthetics we have endeavored to cut a trail from which other community centres of performing arts might learn."

On financial problems: "Financing the Centre is quite heavy the powers of both the Provincial government and the City of Charlottetown. After all, this is the Nation's monument, and it is to the people of Canada that we must turn. It now costs $300,000 annually to operate the Centre and this figure will increase inevitably as our program develops."
"Of the present $300,000 we receive a special annual grant of $100,000 from the Federal Government and the Province..."
