VETERANS' RIGHTS WATCHED

Legion Is Non-Committal On National Health Plan

By JACK BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Legion, on guard against any change that would jeopardize the treatment privileges now enjoyed by sick veterans, took a non-committal approach Tuesday to the issue of a national health plan.

It told the royal commission on health services it is concerned that present arrangements providing high - quality care of veterans be preserved intact.

At the same time it recorded its apprehension lest DVA hospitals become over-taxed with non-veteran patients, prejudicing the prior rights of the ex-servicemen.

"There have been instances, the Legion said, where the federal government made use of veterans hospitals to treat such patients as fishermen, mariners and immigrants.

"Certainly the Legion does not wish to suggest that hospital space should not be utilized to the fullest, but we would not wish to see the services overtaxed to such an extent as might tend to limit the treatment of veterans. . ."

The group referred to here was overseas men who are entitled to treatment for a non-pensionable condition provided hospital space is available. Those with pensionable conditions or in receipt of war veterans allowances have an unconditional right to hospital admittance.

The Legion's brief, presented on the last day of commission sittings here, did not specifically deal with the question of a national health plan. At present, it said, there exists an adequate system for the treatment and care of Canadian ex - servicemen.

Chief Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan, commission chairman, asked Dominion Secretary D. M. Thompson whether he felt any federal-provincial medical care plan should "bypass" veterans.

ITS BIG CONCERN

Mr. Thompson replied that the Legion's concern is that present facilities for veterans "not be in any way altered."

Answering commission Dr. Arthur van Wart, Mr. Thompson said however it would be a "great boon" to veterans if their families were cared for under an over-all program.

The Legion expressed concern lest care of veterans be placed under provincial jurisdiction—possibly a reference to suggestions that DVA hospitals be turned over to local or provincial authorities.

If such a transfer occurred, there could be "no escape" from a loss of uniformity which the Legion said has helped maintain high standards in vets' hospitals.

Frondizi Defies Revolt Threat

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Generals, admirals and air force chiefs flew into Buenos Aires from all parts of Argentina Tuesday to debate what to do about President Frondizi, who refused to resign. Among them was a general who declared himself in open rebellion against the president.

Frondizi attended to business as usual, adamantly sticking to his post and apparently hoping that his defiant stand would crack the military and political front demanding his ouster.

The president rejected the recommendation of his own chosen mediator, former president Aramburu, that he resign as the only way out of the crisis.

Frondizi's decision brought nearer the possibility of a military coup.

Most Argentine military leaders were angered at the decision of the Frondizi government to permit followers of former dictator Juan Peron to participate openly in the provincial elections March 18. The Peronistas scored a victory with about 35 per cent of the popular vote. Frondizi's action in sending federal interventors into five provinces to cancel out Peronist victories failed to pacify the military.

WANTS REBELLION

Gen. Franklin Rawson, commander of the 3rd calvary division at Tandil, 180 miles south of Buenos Aires, openly called for rebellion after Frondizi declared he was maintaining his decision not to resign.

But there was no sign of military activity in Buenos Aires except for the arrival of the military leaders and a heavy guard at Frondizi's palace.

Gen. Raul Poggi, army commander-in-chief, relieved Gen. Edgar Lanta of his command of the powerful 1st army corps in Buenos Aires.

The reason was not immediately apparent, but Lanta was reported to have objected to Poggi's reported stand that Frondizi should be forced to step down at once.

Film Board Documentaries Tell Indians About Canada

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — Seven documentaries produced by Canada's National Film Board are playing an important part in helping to dispel ignorance among the Indian people about the life and culture of Canadians.

In the last five years there has been a 10-fold increase in the number of Canadian documentaries circulating in India.

As many as 28 outlets have been established by the film board's Asian branch in various cities of India to enable those interested to borrow the documentaries. There is at least one outlet in each of the 15 states and some have two.

Educational and cultural institutions make extensive use of the productions and film critics of Indian newspapers have commented enthusiastically about their technical standards.

The children's film corner in New Delhi regularly shows Canadian documentaries to big gatherings. The corner, which organizes about 20 shows a month, has been given equipment by the film board.

AMONG THE BEST

Ezra Mir, Indian documentary director whose films have won many international awards, says that "for creativeness, realism and imaginative handling Canadian documentaries are among the best in the world."

Indian -language versions of some 25 Canadian documentaries now are under preparation. The expenditure is being financed out of the sale of the films in India. To start with, they will be produced in eight languages — Hindi, Bengali, Gujarati, Marathi, Malayan, Tamil, Telugu and Urdu.

To most Indians, Canada is just a romantic geographical name — a fabulously beautiful land of lush plains, towering mountain ranges and sparkling streams. For the average citizen the mention of Canada brings to mind gallant mounted policemen and picturesque Eskimos.

After seeing on documentary the leader writer of a Hindi language paper of Delhi is reported to have remarked:

"Why, here are people apparently more advanced than Americans. Yet, how little we know about Canadians!"

Directive Issued On Slot Machines

A directive to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and all other police forces in the province, was issued yesterday by Attorney - General Melvin McQuaid, with instructions to enforce the section of the Criminal Code of Canada dealing with slot machines.

According to the Code, anyone having a slot machine in his possession can be charged with running a common gaming house.

Mr. McQuaid said that police will need warrants, issued by a magistrate, to search any establishment where it is believed a slot machine is located. "Police will depend on the public, to a great extent," he said, "for would face a significant tariff if the U.K. joins.

For automobiles, certain manufactures of wood, gasoline engines and domestic and commercial appliances, loss of preference would be significant, especially in regard to competition from the United States, Japan and other non-European countries.

Agricultural exports' to the U.K. were $300.000.000 in 1960 and $320,000,000 in 1959, with the biggest items wheat, wheat flour and coarse grains, and with wheat alone accounting for $135,000,000.

In this group U.K. entry into EEC could mean that Canada would be faced with various artificial supports. Wheat enters the U.K. free from all sources and there is no preference, but wheat flour and coarse grains now have a preference.

Police have the power to seize slot machines, but disposition of machines will depend on the courts when convictions are obtained.

Mr. McQuaid said that police will be instructed to watch for complaints about slot machines, and at regular intervals further directives will be issued to remind police to check for complaints.

It was pointed out by Mr. McQuaid that there is a provincial Slot Machine Act which empowers police to search premises without a warrant, but the constitutional validity of the act is doubtful, and for that reason the Criminal Code section is being used.

Extensive Study Is Made On ECM Effect On Canada

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

An extensive examination of the possible effects of common market groupings on Canadian trade was made by Vincent L. Chapin of the department of trade and commerce in an address to the international business management course at Waterloo University College.

To be abbreviated form, and based on the existing situation rather than on what may come out of negotiations, here are some of Mr. Chapin's figures, taken from 1960:

Canadian exports to the six countries of the European Economic Community (EEC) totals $500,000,000—40 per cent agricultural products, 60 per cent industrial items.

Ninety - three items account for $363.000,000. Of this, about $180,000,000 enters EEC countries free and there will be no change. This includes asbestos, iron ore, nickel, copper, silver, various non - metallic minerals, wood pulp for rayon making, lumber and synthetic rubber.

Wheat exports total $100,000,000 and there are various potential dangers.

PULP HAS FEARS

Aluminum, wood pulp for paper making and newsprint—totalling $60,000,000—fear that the lowering of tariffs in higher-tar iff EEC countries won't compensate for raising of tariffs by lower - tariff countries, where most sales now are made.

For another $20,000,000 of exports probabilities are hard to assess.

If the United Kingdom enters EEC, Mr. Chapin presented these further figures:

Canadian exports to the U.K. total $915,000,000—33 per cent agriculture products, 49 per cent basic materials and 18 per cent in a variety of semi-processed and manufactured items.

If Britain accepts EEC tariffs as they stand, there would be no effect on a group of basic industrial materials totalling $218.000,000, which enter both Britain and EEC countries free. Main items in this group are copper, nickel, other nonferrous metal ores and scrap; furs and skins; pit props and iron ore.

An additional group totalling $155.000,000 includes aluminum, wood pulp, newsprint, lead, zinc and ferro silicon. No problem is involved if the EEC provides for free entry but otherwise there would be a significant barrier.

In a further group totalling $45,000,000 — mainly soft wood lumber, pulp wood, asbestos—no effect gives free entry, but Canada now has a small preference in the U.K.

SEE DIFFERENT PROBLEM

Synthetic rubber and aluminum alloys have somewhat different problems. For sythetic rubber EEC provides free entry but, in addition to free entry, there is a 10-per-cent preference in the U.K. Aluminum alloys, which has free entry and a 10-per-cent preference in the U.K., complaints regarding the machines."
