Broker And Historian Disagree On Paintings

TORONTO (CP)—Old Masters —or fakes? That is the dispute between a Calgary broker and a Toronto art historian concerning 200 paintings stored in a disused Calgary night club.

Keith Grafen believes the collection may include works by El Greco, Van Dyck, Rubens and Hogarth.

"I'm no art expert, but I felt that perhaps a dozen in the collection might be genuine Old Masters.

G. S. Vickers, professor of fine art at the University of Toronto, believes that those he has seen are copies.

Mr. Grafen is in Toronto with eight of the paintings, seeking authentication. He is acting for the owner, Clifford Harris, a former Calgary bar owner who collected them in the hope of starting an art gallery in the Prairie city.

CALLS THEM COPIES

Prof. Vickers studied the eight, then pronounced:

"I'd say they were all 18th century copies. They're the sort of copies that you can rummage out of any county in England by the hundred. They're all relatively amateur — journeyman copies. I once saw a whole collection of copies like this in Massachusetts."

He said the English aristocracy often had copies made of Old Masters they'd sold to keep up appearances.

To this, Mr. Grafen said:

"This was the type of comment I was expecting to get. I think art experts are always ultra-conservative."

However, Prof. Vickers was less positive on one of the pictures,a portrait of poet Robert Burns.

"It may be an original portrait by a competent painter, perhaps around 1830. But its certainly not by Goya."

He has advised Mr. Grafen to send photographs of the paintings to the National Gallery.

"If anything catches their interest they'll probably send someone to take a look."

Clifford Harris says he obtained several of the pictures from a girl friend, whose family comes from Coventry, England.

Another, which he says Archie Keys, former head of Calgary's Allied Art Centre, thought might be a genuine El Greco, was obtained in exchange for some Sevres porcelain vases.

Ottawa Promises Que. Aid On Improved Gaspe H'way

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Pickersgill has announced the federal government will pay up to $15,000,000 to the Quebec highways department to rebuild and pave part of Highway 6 in Matane and north Gaspe counties.

He told the Commons this would be in place of the $16,000,000 which was to have been spent on a Gaspe railway from Matane to Ste. Anne des Monts. The railway was authorized by an act of Parliament passed in 1963 under the former Conservative government.

Mr. Pickersgill said after consulting the Quebec government it was decided the greatest contribution towards improved transportation in the Gaspe area would be speedy reconstruction of the North Gaspe Highway.

The Quebec highways department, however, has a heavy backlog of work and said it could not undertake the Gaspe work unless helped financially by Ottawa.

"The substitution of expenditures on the highway for the proposed railway does not mean that the possibility of a railway is excluded for all time," Mr. Pickersgill said.

MAY BE CONSIDERED

"Should industrial development of the region justify the building of the railway on economic grounds at some time in the future such a project would, of course, be considered on its merits."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker criticized the project as an invasion of provincial responsibility in road building, and for setting aside the act authorizing the railway without repealing it.

Mr. Pickersgill said the act merely authorized the railway and did not appropriate any money for the project.

Guy Marcoux (SC —Quebec-Montmorency) welcomed the announcement. The Gaspe railway had been an invention of politicians to reap votes; it would have done nothing to improve Gaspe's depressed economy.

Alexandre Cyr (L — Gaspe) said the announced highway project will help to develop the tourist and mining industries in his riding.

More Apartment Building Appears Trend In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — More mushrooming apartment buildings and fewer houses appear to be the future for Vancouver.

A statistical survey by the Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board shows that more than 5,000 new apartment suites are being built in the area each year.

The number of housing starts, however, has remained stagnant at about 3,600.

The survey predicted that with increasing land values, high-rise buildings will become even more common, including areas where land values are not as high as they are in Vancouver's apartment-ringed west end.

Most of the apartments in Greater Vancouver are being built in the west end. Most of the houses are being built in the suburbs rapidly are flowering with apartment blocks.

At March, 1964, there were 3,279 apartment suites in greater Vancouver. This number was increasing at a rate of about 15 per cent a year.

Of the total, 62.5 per cent were one-bedroom suites, 18.1 per cent bachelor units and 17.3 per cent two-bedroom apartments.

RENTS VARY

In the west end, where about one-third of all greater Vancouver apartments are located, bachelor suites accounted for 29 per cent of the total.

Rents varied widely.

The overall average in all areas ranged from a low of $70 monthly for a bachelor suite to $139 and more for a two-bedroom apartment.

The survey also showed an increasing demand for commercial buildings and property.

The office vacancy rate was quoted at 4.2 per cent,about half that of Toronto or Seattle, Wash.

Most popular areas for office buildings was in the Georgia, Grenville and Pender Street areas of Downtown Vancouver, where commercial land values have soared to a high for corner locations of $50 a square foot.

Cost of industrial land ranged from $25,000 to $50,000 per acre in the False Creek, Marine Drive and Boundary Road areas of Vancouver to $3,500 to $5,000 in the southern sections of Richmond.

Justice Dept. Gives CAM Okay

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons the justice department has found no basis for prosecuting the so-called Christian Action Movement.

He told Guy Marcoux (SC—Quebec-Montmorency) that the mayor of Moncton had written to the justice department complaining about a recent meeting held in Moncton by the movement.

However, no charges could be laid on the basis of the information supplied to the department, Mr. Pearson said.

The mayor charged publicly that the movement is an anti-semitic organization.

Ford Co. Reports Profits Increase

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. had net earnings from Canadian operations of $13,800,000 for the first six months of 1964 compared with $8,300,000 for the corresponding 1963 period.

Karl E. Scott, president, said in a report to shareholders that reduced earnings in Ford of Australia brought consolidated net earnings down to $15,600,000 or $9.42 a share compared with $16,000,000 or $9.62 a share last year.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

QUIZ

You are the dealer, neither side vulnerable, and have opened One Diamond. Partner responds One Heart. What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠7 ♥AQ62 ♦AQJ763 ♣A4
2. ♠AQ8 ♥74 ♦KJ86 ♣AQ83
3. ♠J3 ♥AJ62 ♦KQJ96 ♣A94
4. ♠AJ84 ♥QJ2 ♦AKJ78 ♣8

1. Four hearts. It would be wrong to bid three hearts or three diamonds, neither of which is forcing. The jump to four hearts is a slam try, since it says in effect that a game contract is feasible even though the heart response may have been based on six points. The jump to game by the opening bidder is in a vastly different category from the jump to game game by the responder.

Obviously, the hand cannot be played for less than game, once partner responds with a heart. It is hard to conceive of partner's losing four tricks.

2. Two clubs. The problem here is to represent a 16-point hand without exaggerating or understating the values held. A rebid of one notrump would represent a hand of the minimum class with a maximum of 15 points, while a rebid of two notrump would represent 18 or 19 points.

Such problems are best solved by making an ambiguous rebid, such as two clubs. This bid, a change of suits by the opening bidder, is sometimes based on minimum values, and sometimes on values above a minimum opening bid. The two club bid is of course not forcing, but there should be no concern about missing a game if partner fails to bid again.

3. Three hearts. This is by no means a perfect rebid, but it comes closer to hitting the mark than any other bid. The trouble with the jump rise to three hearts is that it implies four trumps, and we have only three. However, this deficiency in trumps is sufficiently compensated by the high-card values (18 points) to make the bid reasonably accurate. The jump raise is not forcing, but, in practice, partner seldom passes.

4. Two spades. This bid, being a jump-shift, is 100 per cent forcing and states in effect that a game can be made even though partner may have only six points. The destination of the hand is not yet clear—the final contract may be played in spades, hearts, diamonds or notrump, depending on partner's hand.

There are two objections to bidding only one spade over a heart. First, partner may pass, and this is certainly not desirable; and second, if it turns out that there is a slam in the hand, it may be missed because of the failure to identify that possibility immediately.
