ADVERTISING RATES

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is 50 cents per inch for the first insertion, and 20 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, cnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size.

THE DAILY EXAMINER is for sale by the following agents:—

HAVE A GUESS.

Oh, wheelmen, all take my advice,
And don't forget, be sure
To take a look at the famous "Bike"
In PROWSE'S well-known Store.

The handsome Brantford Bicycle
That in their window's shown
Is as good as any in Charlottetown,
And it may be your own.

A jar in which are cents galore
Is placed where all can see;
Guess how many cents the jar contains
And the "Bike" your own will be.

Be wise, make all your purchases
At PROWSE'S Clothing Store;
Each purchase, on that Bicycle,
Will give you one chance more.

Their Carpets, Hats and Furnishings,
And all, in fact, they keep,
Compared with others in the town
Are more than quite as cheap.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE HYPOCRITE OF THE PERIOD.

Who lifts to heaven a watery eye,
And "Curse the drink!" aloud doth cry,
Yet whiskey drinks upon the sly?—
The hypocrite.

Who preach can on the love of God,
A weeping saint appear abroad,
Yet rules at home with iron rod?—
The hypocrite.

Who cries, "O Lord, I love to dwell
Within Thy courts Thy praise to swell,"
While yet his heart's a flaming hell?—
The hypocrite.

"Nearer my God to Thee" who sings
On Sunday till the rafter rings,
Yet loveth all forbidden things?—
The hypocrite.

In language sacred and sublime,
Who can describe the heavenly clime,
And pick your pockets all the time?—
The hypocrite.

With breast unfeeling as a stone,
Who pray can in the saddest tone,
To further interests of his own?
The hypocrite.

Who vows the treasures in the skies
Are what his soul doth mostly prize—
Yet knows that in his heart he lies?—
The hypocrite.

Who can a Scripture text propound,
And, smiling, deal damnation round,
While on the road to hell he's bound?—
The hypocrite.

And when a youthful saint's o'ertaken
By some temptation strong, and shaken,
Who keeps the sin forever waken?—
The hypocrite.

Who doth among the faithful creep,
And can by turns rejoice and weep,
And fleece the unsuspecting sheep?—
The hypocrite.

Who is a sneaking coward knave,
To every secret vice a slave,
But cowers before the true and brave?—
The hypocrite.

Who wears a smile but to betray?
Who strews the flowers upon the way
To lead confiding souls astray?—
The hypocrite.

Whose faith, as he his end pursues,
Assumes unnumbered shades and hues
To suit all men's beliefs and views?—
The hypocrite.

Who can discourse on Saving Grace,
And weep, too, when it suits his case,
And hid his heart behind his face?—
The hypocrite.

And who, if he the way could find
To heaven, would shut, with cheerful mind,
The gates of mercy on mankind?—
The hypocrite.

But who shall, as the Scriptures tell,
In chains and darkness writhe and yell?
And surely he deserves it well!—
The hypocrite.

PLEASING FOR WOMEN.

The womanly side of Queen Victoria is pictured exceedingly well—and appropriately, too, in this the month of her seventy-fifth birthday—in an article on "The Womanly Side of Victoria," which Arthur Warren contributes to the May issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. Among the pictures in the article, those showing the Queen at breakfast and in her pony carriage, are interesting and new. Frank R. Stockton gives two more of "Pomona's" characteristic letters, showing the heroine of "Rudder Grange" in various adventures in her quest for a social boom among the English aristocracy. Mr. Howells' literary biography under the title of "My Literary Passions" holds the interest surprisingly well. The editor questions whether all this clamor about this being "woman's century" is wise. The biography of the number consists of sketches, with portraits, of Mrs. Edward Everett Hale, the wife of the famous preacher-author, and of Miss Nancy Bailey, the wonderful indexter of England. Mrs. Burton Kingsland takes up the education and religious development of "A Daughter at Sixteen," and Alice Morse Earle, the author of "China Collecting in America," gives a delightfully humorous account of her attempt to secure "My Delft Apothecary Jars." Women everywhere are remembered in Miss Hadley's "Needle Houiton for Polished Tables"; "The Silks of the Summer" and "The Art of Dressing for Travelling," by Mrs. Mallon. "Materials for Summer Gowns," by Emma M. Hooper, and "Still Life in Oil Painting," by Mrs. Haywood. Thoughtful mothers will appreciate Miss Scovil's "Children and the Sabbath." and housekeepers will welcome the page devoted to "The Strawberry and its Uses." Altogether this May issue is singularly attractive and worth many times its modest price of ten cents. Published by The Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia, for ten cents per number and one dollar per year.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES."

The Original of Conan Doyle's Detective is an Edinburg Surgeon.

There will not be much dispute, says Harper's Weekly, among those who have read Dr. Conan Doyle's "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" that they are the best detective stories ever written in their kind, and that their kind is in some essential respects a new one.

The current detective of fiction is of French origin, and he bears very little resemblance to the current detective of fact. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" for the first time introduce us to a conceivable detective, being a man who cultivated the habit of observation until it has become a second nature or a sixth sense. No discerning reader of the stories can fail to have been impressed with the possibility that a man who diligently employed and trained faculties that all men possess might arrive logically at conclusions which to less observant persons seem like magic when it turns out that they are true. Sherlock Holmes, in a word, makes much more strongly than any previous detective of fiction the effect of being founded on fact.

It was therefore with great satisfaction that the reader of Dr. Cronan Doyle's fascinating stories learned some time since, from the author of his being, that Sherlock Holmes was indeed founded on fact and drawn from life, and that the model for him had been a professor in the medical college in which Dr. Doyle studied. This gentleman has been the object of an extensive and pardonable popular curiosity. He is Dr. Joseph Bell, of the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, took his degree at twenty-two, was for two years assistant demonstrator of anatomy in the university, then became house surgeon at the Royal Infirmary, where has remained ever since, having for many years been senior surgeon, and lately consulting surgeon.

It is evident that the medical profession offers peculiar advantages for the development of the faculty of observation, which, indeed, is as helpful and indispensable to an ideal doctor as to an ideal detective. Diagnosis is, indeed, largely detective work, and those who have had the good fortune to be the patients of a "born doctor," when they had the misfortune to be patients at all, often have occasion for astonishment at a knowledge of their condition that seems to them like clairvoyance, but is in truth the result of a natural faculty for observation assiduously cultivated. It is evident that the original of Sherlock Holmes has the faculty in an eminent degree.

A reporter for the Pall Mall Gazette has had, and related for his paper, a highly interesting interview with the original of Sherlock Holmes. It appear that Dr. Bell has made use of his remarkable faculty not merely in the line of his profession, and for the astonishment of his acquaintances, but that it has frequently been employed in actual detective work, and in furtherance of the ends of justice. As might be expected, he has paid special attention to medical jurisprudence. The crown retains in Edinburgh a regular medical adviser in criminal cases, and this medical adviser has for some twenty years been in the habit of enlisting the services of Dr. Bell, although in these cases he has merely been retained as an expert, and has no official connection with the crown. The reporter who visited Dr. Bell was in Edinburgh to report the Ardlamont murder trial, which has attracted comparatively little attention in this country, but has excited a great and widespread interest in England and Scotland; and in this case Dr. Bell has been retained as an expert adviser for the prosecution. While he declined to give any reminiscences of his detective work that had not already been made public, he declared that whatever deductions he had been able to make that had been of service to the authorities had been "simple and commonplace."

They had come from the habit he himself had formed and had tried to inculcate upon all his scholars—Conan Doyle among them—the habit of paying attention to what are commonly dismissed as unimportant things. "I always impressed over and over again the vast importance of little distinctions, the endless significance of the trifles." To what important results this habit may lead is illustrated in the facts of Dr. Bell's career, as well as in Dr. Doyle's fiction founded on those facts. One illustration of it is striking enough to be well worth giving in Dr. Bell's own reported words:

"This one struck me as funny at the time. A man walked into the room where I was instructing the students, and his case seemed to be a very simple one. I was talking about what was wrong with him. 'Of course, gentlemen,' I happened to say, 'he has been a soldier in a Highland regiment, and probably a bandsman.' I pointed out the swagger in his walk, suggestive of the piper; while his shortness told me that if he had been a soldier it was probably as a bandsman. In fact, he had the whole appearance of a man in one of the Highland regiments. The man turned out to be nothing but a shoemaker, and said he had never been in the army in his life. This was rather a floorer; but being absolutely certain I was right, and seeing that something was up, I did a pretty cool thing. I told two of the strongest clerks, or dressers, to remove the man to a side room, and to detain him till I came. I went and had him striped. Under the left breast I instantly detected a little blue 'D' branded on his skin. He was a deserter. That was how they used to mark them in the Crimean days, and later, although it is not permitted now. Of course the reason of his evasion was at once clear."

After one knows that Sherlock Holmes is not entirely the creature of the novelist's imagination, but that his qualities are drawn from life, many readers must be incited to develop those qualities in themselves. In the interview from which we have quoted, Dr. Bell says, very truly and suggestively:

"I should just like to say this about my friend Doyle's stories, that I believe they have inculcated in the general public a new source of interest—the kind of interest created by Richard Jefferies and the 'Son of the Marshes.' They make many a fellow who has before felt very little interest in his life and daily surroundings think that, after all, there may be much more in life if he keeps his eyes open than he had ever dreamed of in his philosophy. There is a problem, a whole game of chess, in many a little street incident of trifling occurrence if one once learns how to make the moves."

THE STRONG POINT about the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla is that they are permanent. They start from the solid foundation—Pure Blood.

The most palatable preparation of Cod Liver Oil in the world is Miller's Emulsion, and is now being taken by invalids with astonishing success. Miller's is "the kind that cures" coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Every bottle warranted. No oily taste like others. In big bottles, 50c. and $1.00, at druggists.

A drink that is popular everywhere.
Delicious, Sparkling, Effervescent.

A 25 cent package makes 5 gallons of this delicious beverage. Don't be deceived if a dealer, for the sake of larger profit, tells you some other kind is "just as good"—'tis false. No imitation is as good as the genuine HIRES'.

Take no substitute for HIRES.

PERFECTLY WELL.

John H. Varney,
E. Bath, Me.

Was all run down, poor in flesh, could not sleep, his food distressed him, and he felt tired all the time. He took
