Drop In Nickel Price Has Unusual Features

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—The price of refined nickel dropped 2¼ cents a pound Thursday amid unusual circumstances and some puzzled questions of "why?"

Most unusual circumstance was that the drop was initiated in an announcement Wednesday by Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. which, while it is the free world's second largest producer is much smaller than the giant International Nickel Mining Company of Canada Ltd.

International Nickel, which traditionally sets the price pace, appeared to be taken completely by surprise, but followed suit Thursday with the same price cut as Falconbridge, as did Sheritt Gordon Mines Ltd., another substantial Canadian producer.

DEMAND BRISK

A further unusual circumstance is that demand for nickel has been brisk.

Apparently, however, Falconbridge doesn't consider the demand brisk enough, especially with its stockpile orders from the United States running out.

At Falconbridge's annual meeting April 27, H. J. Fraser, president, said the only remaining deliveries to be made to the U.S. stockpile totalled about 8,100,000 pounds, to be delivered prior to June 30, 1964. He added, however, that for several years the company had not been able to accumulate enough inventory to service its customers, nor to embark on a strong sales program, and it hoped now to do both.

At the time, this did not sound like a price-cut indication, though "strong sales program" may have been the key words.

A spokesman commented Thursday that though he has faith in the long-term nickel outlook, there would be problems in transferring former stockpile sales to commercial channels.

"Most commonly asked question was: What did Falconbridge hope to gain from the decrease assuming, as has happened, its competitors followed suit?"

GAIN ATTENTION

One answer may be that it has gained a lot of attention as leader in the price cut.

In this regard, one of International Nickel's traditional worries has been that buyers, wishing to see competitive sources maintained, may take care of smaller producers first.

Over the years Inco has emphasized "stability" in prices and, during periods of nickel scarcity was criticized by some of the smaller producers, then trying to establish themselves, for holding the price down. The last price increase was 6¼ cents a pound June 30, 1951, which was the first increase in more than 4½ years.

Factors probably involved in Falconbridge's decision include the lower foreign - exchange value of the Canadian dollar and growing signs of Cuban competition. Because the nickel base price is in American currency, the return in Canadian dollars is greater with the devaluation.

The new base price is 79 cents (U.S.) a pound from Canadian refineries, including the 1¼-cent U.S. import duty. Allowing for exchange differences, the Canadian price is 84 cents. Similar adjustments are being made in European prices.

MARX QUOTE SPARKS PROBE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Embarrassed school officials are having to explain how a quotation by Karl Marx got into Kingsbury High School's 1962 yearbook.

It was all a mistake, they say, but several citizens have protested the inclusion of the quotation: "From each according to his abilities, to each according to his need."

"It got in because of the ignorance of one of the year book's student editors and an oversight on the part of the faculty sponsor," explained principal John Crothers.

COAL CENTRE

Lethbridge, Alberta's third largest city, was so named in 1885 after William Lethbridge, coal company president.

Opening lead—five of hearts.

Good defense depends largely on partnership cooperation. The defenders always try to help each other in pursuing their mutual goal of trying to overcome the declarer. In uniting their efforts to accomplish this, they lean heavily on universally accepted defensive conventions.

Examine the play of this hand, which shows how important it is for the defensive side to send messages to one another with accuracy. West opens the five of hearts, the fourth best card of his longest suit. East wins with the ace and returns the six on which South plays the nine.

If West makes the mistake of winning the nine with the jack, South makes the contract. There is no hope for the defense after this. Whatever West returns, declarer establishes his clubs to guarantee nine tricks.

But if West plays the two of hearts on the nine (thus disclosing he started with five hearts), South is defeated regardless of which way he turns. His best play, a club finesse, loses to the king, and a heart comes a heart to sink the ship.

Now how is it that West is smart, enough to duck the nine of hearts at trick two? Must not his nerves be made of iron to resist the impulse to win the trick? No, not at all. Ducking is simply the right play to make and that is why he makes it.

He knows from the return of the six that that is the highest heart East has left. This means that South started with the Q-10-9-7 and that there is no chance of running the suit immediately. By ducking the nine, he relies on the hope that East has a solid entry in clubs or spades so that another, more deadly, heart lead can be made by East.

West realizes, of course, that East may have neither of the black kings, but he knows that if this is the case there is no hope for the defense. He therefore adopts the only line of defense that can possibly succeed.
