That Unbelievable Shack

The Toronto Maple Leafs are in third place, just two points ahead of fourth place Detroit, and Leaf fans are beginning to yell ... We want Shack!

Those who [illegible] Eddie Shack isn't being used much this season by Punch Imlach and disappointed Torontonians, the Maple Leaf [illegible] is a temperamentous character who collects penalties almost by the dozens, might be the guy to bring the Leafs back to their winning ways.

Shack has pulled the Leafs out of troubles on other occasions, but it doesn't appear that he will get a chance to put his unusual talents to work this time. As for Punch and his positive-thinking-course-hockey coach says: "Nothing but jib jah."

Eddie believes in just playing hockey. In fact, his lack of theory when playing the game, or lack of common sense as a lot of people call it has made Eddie something of an NHL freak. The guy who doesn't play by the book.

He can't score goals, but if by chance he should net one, he probably did so from a horizontal or inverted position. He backchecks very poorly. His skating is unscientific to say the least. And more often than not he is where he shouldn't be.

As one sportswriter told us awhile ago: "He reminds me of the Keystone Cops. All of them".

Eddie doesn't think he is funny though. He takes his hockey very seriously. "I play the game the way I know it," says the once New York owned Shack.

The Rangers coach who disposed of Eddie a few years back, Phil Watson, said that Shack was uncoachable; that it was impossible to teach him anything; that he knew nothing but thought he knew everything; that he was a clown and a bad influence.

When Shack was informed of this later Watson was as cockeyed the Boston Bruins to last place. His only retort was, "He must have a lot of uncoachable guys there too."

Shack joined Toronto in exchange for Pat Hannigan and Johnny Wilson and since then has carried on his reputation for never backing down from anyone and usually being ready with the wood or the knuckles should trouble rear its ugly head.

He was asked if this ever kept him awake at night, knowing that quite a few players in the NHL had his license number from the last time he had left the scene of an accident.

"I think there are a few guys who would like to get me," he said. "But I don't go out looking and it doesn't bother me. I get somebody one night or somebody gets me. It all even's up in time."

Without overlooking his assets as a colorful warrior, there is an inner detection in Eddie Shack to be a consistent 20-goal-a-year scorer.

"I heard a fellow the other day complaining that he was being shifted around too much," Shack said. "I told him that he was a big star but I said to myself, 'What am I, chopped liver?' "

Trip To Boston Is Big Success

Our week-end trip to Boston to see NHL hockey matches and a professional basketball game was an unqualified success. The Boston Bruins beat Detroit Red Wings 2-1, and took the Maple Leafs 5-3. The Boston downed the Philadelphia Seventy-Sixers 106-93. Boston had a wonderful week-end, and so did we.

Forbes Kennedy was used a lot during the two games, getting an assist in Saturday's match, and scoring a goal on the Sunday tilt with Toronto.

Bruins Could Do Better Next Year

With such promising hockey rookies as Gary Dornhecker, Wayne Rovers, Wayne Rivers, Ron Schock and Orland Kurtenbach, Bruins should do better next year. The home crowd at least is prepared for the crowd within hearing distance of us, had a special pick on Johnny Bucyk. They kept calling him a bum, an idiot and other insults at him. Crowd reactions are difficult to understand for Bucyk has a 13-27 record, next to the top man, Murray Oliver, who has 19-35.

The basketball game was highlighted by the Harlem Globetrotters. Forbes Kennedy had some other good chances, and Simmons made a brilliant save to stop him on one occasion.

We had a talk to Forbie at the Hotel Madison after Sunday night's game, and we expressed the opinion that the Bruins looked good enough to be in the play-offs instead of in last position. Some of the clubs picked to finish fourth," Forbie said. "We seem to be able to knock off the top teams fairly often, but don't do so well against the lower clubs."

Suggests Hoop Courts For Shorties

We were having dinner at the hotel Madison when four human beanpoles strode in and sat down at the table next to ours. All four being so tall, they just had to be basketball players, and, sure enough, they turned out to be the coach and three members of the Philadelphia team. The coach, who looked to be the tallest, must have been an ex-player. Anyone less than six feet would look like a sawed-off runt in that company. Why don't they have basketball courts with lower baskets, made exclusively for shorties who might like to play the game too.

We met two ex-Summerside boys, Reg Phillips, and Tommy Wood outside the Madison Hotel, and at the airport, a girl we taught in Cape Traverse school. Her name was Bessie Crossman, but she's married now and living in Boston. A most enjoyable trip, and just before we got off the plane, everyone gave three cheers for Charles Linkletter, who made the trip to Boston possible.

Art Burke Edged Out 9-7 In Exciting Brier Finish

By JIM CULLEN
Guardian-Patriot Sports Writer

Charlottetown's own Art Burke curling foursome brought the Dominion Brier competition to a dramatic close in vesterday afternoon's draw as they forced the British Columbia rink into an extra end before dropping a 9-7 decision in a game in which a win for the Burke rink would have forced a playoff game between the Saskatchewan team and the Dagg skipped foursome from B.C.

Art had last stone in the first end and deliberately blanked the end in order to maintain last rock. In the second end B.C. was lying one and Art missed an attempted knockout with his last rock to give the B.C. foursome one.

Burke came through in the third when with the Dagg foursome lying one and two Art made a double out and rolled out to blank the end and keep last stone.

The B.C. team stole the fourth end when Burke missed th. B.C. shot stone and allowed them to count one and take a 2-0 lead.

The Charlottetown foursome tied the game up in the fifth when Burke made a beautiful shot with his last stone as he skimmed by a guard to knock out the B.C. shot rock and stayed to count two.

British Columbia partially missed their knock out attempt in the sixth, when with Burke lying one, two and three they only took one and rolled out to leave Burke counting two with a 4-2 lead.

Dagg's draw to the button in the seventh was just a shade heavy and left the Island counting one. The Dagg team, playing a strictly draw game in the eighth, came up with a big end as they counted three to tie the game at five-all.

The Dagg foursome continued with a draw game in the ninth and collected one when the Island's attempted knock out with last stone was narrow and just wicked the front guard to have B.C. go ahead 6-5.

Burke picked one up in the tenth and the eleventh, thus coming home with a 7-6 reading on the score board, but with the Dagg team having last stone in the final end.

Allan Smith (third stone) made a nice draw to a junked up house to take shot position with his second stone in the twelfth end, but it was unguarded. B.C. took the shot rock and stayed. B.C. was lying three now. Art then nudged their shot rock and rolled to 6 o'clock on the 4-foot circle to take over shot position. Dagg took and stayed to regain number one position. Burke drew to number two position. The B.C. skip drew to the button to count one and force the game into an extra end.

In the thirteenth and crucial end a series of misses by the local team and a series of excellent draws by British Columbia was the difference. Dagg made two beautiful draws with his last two stones. On the first he drew to 2 o'clock on the 4-foot circle directly behind his own guard for shot rock position. Art then made a nice shot and wicked the shot stone, opening it up some and rolling out himself.

Dagg made a tremendous draw as he again drew in to the button directly behind the guard and was now lying one and two. Art's draw was heavy and missed and that was the "Ball Game", bringing a thrilling

Legionaires Nip North River Team

The Summerside Junior Legionaires scored two goals in the 10 minute overtime session to defeat the North River Juniors 4-2 in the first game of their best-of-five series for the Island Junior championship.

North River got a rather soft goal after one minute of play in the first period. Vessey's long shot bouncing over Sonier's stick, and the goal stood up for two full periods of play.

After four minutes of the third period John Poirier batted one past Lyle to tie the game up but the visitors took less than two minutes to get the goal edge back. MacKenzie sailing away Vessey's pass-out from behind the net.

The North River boys were fore-checking the jointers to a standstill at this stage of the game but shortly after the half-way mark Wendell Grady's slap shot caught the upper right corner of the net behind the visiting net guardian, knotting the count again.

The Legionnaires really got untracked in the overtime period, and it took only 14 seconds for Dave Gaudet to put his team ahead. Martin got the insurance tally at 8.21. Granville was referee, and Matthews and Sloan were the linesmen. The next game will be played in North River on Monday and the teams meet again at Civic Stadium on Wednesday.

Saints Topple Mount Allison

Ed Hilton's St. Dunstan's University Saints finished its regular Maritime Intercollegiate Conference schedule yesterday afternoon with a 77-72 victory over Mount Allison Mounties. The win gives St. Dunstan's a 4-8 record on the season.

The Saints led throughout the game and were never in any real trouble, although the Mounties came close in the final minutes. At half time, St. Dunstan's were leading 40-31, but Mount A came within three points of tying the score. A brilliant driving display by Bob Francouer and Frank Garrity, however, coupled with two free throws by Francouer put the game out of reach.

Mount A's Phil Johnson led all scorers with 35 points, followed by Bob Francouer of SDU and Frank Garrity controlled the backboards with 19 and 10 respectively; Mike Harrison had 15. St. Dunstan's topped the shooting averages 35.3 to 32.6.

Dominion Ch'ship Bonspiel Has Successful Closing

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A Vancouver rink skipped by a hard-to-ruffle public relations executive gave British Columbia the Canadian curling championship Friday with a 9-7 extra-end win over host Prince Edward Island in the final round.

Lyall Dagg's foursome rode in ahead of the Richardsons of Saskatchewan on a 9-1 record after upending the four-time national champions from Regina 8-3 in a morning-round showdown.

A win by Art Burke's young Charlottetown foursome — averaging only 25 years in age — would have forced a playoff.

Dagg, an amiable 34-year-old and six - handicap golfer counted two in the 13th end when Burke's last rock was heavy and sailed through the house.

The islanders were ahead 5-2 after seven ends and appeared upset-bent when Dagg came through with a superb takeout to count three and square things.

SECOND B.C.C. WIN

It was British Columbia's second win in the Macdonald-Brier Dominion championship—the first was the triumph of Frency D'Amour of Trail in 1948 — and gave the Pacific Coast a sweep of both men's and women's titles this year.

The Richardsons — four-time winners of the championship, shaded Nova Scotia 7-6 in the final round and wound up second with a 8-2 mark.

Bruce Hudson's Manitoba foursome from Winnipeg, 11-3 winners over Quebec, was third with 7-3 and the Quebecers a surprising fourth with a 6-4 tab.

Hudson is the son of the 1938-39 winner of the event.

LYALL DAGG

The host islanders shared a 5-5 bracket with Ron Northcott's Calgary rink from Alberta—who got off to a miserable start—and the university student rink from Ontario skipped by 42-year-old Bob Mann.

13-8 PASTING

Northcott gave the veteran Harold Mabey of New Brunswick a 13-8 pasting in the final round while Mann upended Jack Polyblank of Northern Ontario 10-9 in an extra end.

Dagg said later in an interview that he has no immediate plans "other than to get back to work and to see something of my family."

"I haven't seen too much of them since January."

His wife Shirley gave up an interest in amateur theatre in Vancouver to baby-sit with their four children—two boys and two girls ranging in age from eight to two—so hubby could play and practice with his rink.

Dagg, a man with a handsome face and thinning hair tinged with premature greyness, took the accolades of his fellow competitors with a wide grin.

"How do I feel?" I just can't believe it," he said.

Barry Naimark, Fred Britton and Leo Hebert were lead, second, and third respectively on Dagg's rink.

None of the four were born in British Columbia. Dagg is from Tisdale, Sask., and Naimark Tisdale, Sask., and Naimark salesman, was skip of British Columbia's 1959 entry in the championship.

Britton, an office worker was born in Brandingly, Man., and Hebert, a driver-salesman for a fuel company, in Athabasca, Alta.

N.B. Defeats P.E.I. Curlers

The P.E.I. team dropped their first game yesterday, 13-6 to the New Brunswick team, in what was the Islanders poorest showing of the '64 Brier.

Island skip Art Burke had one of those games a curler would like to forget, as he missed important shots on several occasions. Hap Mabey however, throwing last rock for New Brunswick, played a strong game, picking up points when the Islanders left an opening.

After P.E.I. had counted a single in the first end, New Brunswick built their biggest end of the game in the second as Burke missed a take-out with his first stone and went through the house with his second shot.

Burke put his last rock in the foor foot circle in the third end to make the score 4-2 for New Brunswick. Mabey cleared the house with his last rock in the fourth to keep the score at 4-2.

Mabey came to the four foot circle with his last rock in the fifth end to count two after Burke had missed a take out with his last rock. Burke gave the Island two points in the sixth as he brought his last rock to rest against another P.E.I. stone.

The teams split points in the seventh and eighth ends as both boys drew to centre for single points. New Brunswick led 7-5 after eight ends. N.B. picked up three important points in the ninth as Burke put his last rock through the house and Mabey drew in to make the score 10-5.

The teams exchanged last rock points in the 10th and 11th ends and New Brunswick finished the game with two in the final end as Burke managed to wick-out only one of three N.B. lying stones.

Ice Racing Is Cancelled

In the second game, Kensington Seabrooks defeated Tignish 5-3, in a hard fought Prince County Intermediate "C" contest. As the game was played under protest no scorers were given.
