

Student Drive Snowed Out Quiet Nam Rioting

Two Bolt Parties On Flag Issue

OTTAWA (CP)—An Ontario Liberal and a Quebec Conservative bolted their respective party policies on the flag issue in Commons speeches Monday.

The views of Ralph Cowan (L-York - Hunter) and Remi Paul (PC - Berthier - Maskinonge - Delandroue) came as no surprise, however.

What did come as a surprise was the tossing of a carton of red liquid from the west gallery onto the green carpet in the centre aisle of the chamber.

The Communist protective staff detained a man who threw the carton from the opposition gallery.

Mrs. Jean Waddis (PC - Green-Dundas) said later in debate the "unfortunate incident" was startling evidence of how dangerous and divisive a subject the flag is.

Mr. Cowan is the only Liberal so far to go on record as being in favor of the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

He did not believe a plebiscite, sought by the Conservatives, was only a means to avoid a division such as this country's.

Mr. Paul also called for a plebiscite and a vote against a plebiscite and for a distinctive national flag.

He did not believe the Liberal government had adopted a new flag. No clear mandate was possible when a government had less than half the members of the Commons and less than half the popular vote.

Mr. Cowan served notice he will speak on every amendment put forward in the flag debate.

"If we make any change in the Red Ensign, it will lead to a division such as this country has never seen."

The Liberal dissenter was applauded, frequently by the Conservative and New Democratic MPs who support the Red Ensign. There was no applause from Liberal benches.

Mr. Paul also called for an end to Commons speeches on the flag. They were merely exciting Canadians who favored either the proposed maple leaf flag or the Red Ensign.

Mrs. Waddis said the maple leaf flag is no more a symbol of unity than a skeleton of an elephant was a symbol of strength.

Two Bolt Parties On Flag Issue

OTTAWA (CP)—An Ontario Liberal and a Quebec Conservative bolted their respective party policies on the flag issue in Commons speeches Monday.

The views of Ralph Cowan (L-York - Hunter) and Remi Paul (PC - Berthier - Maskinonge - Delandroue) came as no surprise, however.

What did come as a surprise was the tossing of a carton of red liquid from the west gallery onto the green carpet in the centre aisle of the chamber.

The Communist protective staff detained a man who threw the carton from the opposition gallery.

Mrs. Jean Waddis (PC - Green-Dundas) said later in debate the "unfortunate incident" was startling evidence of how dangerous and divisive a subject the flag is.

Mr. Cowan is the only Liberal so far to go on record as being in favor of the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

He did not believe a plebiscite, sought by the Conservatives, was only a means to avoid a division such as this country's.

Mr. Paul also called for a plebiscite and a vote against a plebiscite and for a distinctive national flag.

He did not believe the Liberal government had adopted a new flag. No clear mandate was possible when a government had less than half the members of the Commons and less than half the popular vote.

Mr. Cowan served notice he will speak on every amendment put forward in the flag debate.

"If we make any change in the Red Ensign, it will lead to a division such as this country has never seen."

The Liberal dissenter was applauded, frequently by the Conservative and New Democratic MPs who support the Red Ensign. There was no applause from Liberal benches.

Mr. Paul also called for an end to Commons speeches on the flag. They were merely exciting Canadians who favored either the proposed maple leaf flag or the Red Ensign.

Mrs. Waddis said the maple leaf flag is no more a symbol of unity than a skeleton of an elephant was a symbol of strength.

Two Bolt Parties On Flag Issue

OTTAWA (CP)—An Ontario Liberal and a Quebec Conservative bolted their respective party policies on the flag issue in Commons speeches Monday.

The views of Ralph Cowan (L-York - Hunter) and Remi Paul (PC - Berthier - Maskinonge - Delandroue) came as no surprise, however.

What did come as a surprise was the tossing of a carton of red liquid from the west gallery onto the green carpet in the centre aisle of the chamber.

The Communist protective staff detained a man who threw the carton from the opposition gallery.

Mrs. Jean Waddis (PC - Green-Dundas) said later in debate the "unfortunate incident" was startling evidence of how dangerous and divisive a subject the flag is.

Mr. Cowan is the only Liberal so far to go on record as being in favor of the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

He did not believe a plebiscite, sought by the Conservatives, was only a means to avoid a division such as this country's.

Mr. Paul also called for a plebiscite and a vote against a plebiscite and for a distinctive national flag.

He did not believe the Liberal government had adopted a new flag. No clear mandate was possible when a government had less than half the members of the Commons and less than half the popular vote.

Mr. Cowan served notice he will speak on every amendment put forward in the flag debate.

"If we make any change in the Red Ensign, it will lead to a division such as this country has never seen."

The Liberal dissenter was applauded, frequently by the Conservative and New Democratic MPs who support the Red Ensign. There was no applause from Liberal benches.

Mr. Paul also called for an end to Commons speeches on the flag. They were merely exciting Canadians who favored either the proposed maple leaf flag or the Red Ensign.

Mrs. Waddis said the maple leaf flag is no more a symbol of unity than a skeleton of an elephant was a symbol of strength.

Two Bolt Parties On Flag Issue

OTTAWA (CP)—An Ontario Liberal and a Quebec Conservative bolted their respective party policies on the flag issue in Commons speeches Monday.

The views of Ralph Cowan (L-York - Hunter) and Remi Paul (PC - Berthier - Maskinonge - Delandroue) came as no surprise, however.

What did come as a surprise was the tossing of a carton of red liquid from the west gallery onto the green carpet in the centre aisle of the chamber.

The Communist protective staff detained a man who threw the carton from the opposition gallery.

Mrs. Jean Waddis (PC - Green-Dundas) said later in debate the "unfortunate incident" was startling evidence of how dangerous and divisive a subject the flag is.

Mr. Cowan is the only Liberal so far to go on record as being in favor of the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

He did not believe a plebiscite, sought by the Conservatives, was only a means to avoid a division such as this country's.

Mr. Paul also called for a plebiscite and a vote against a plebiscite and for a distinctive national flag.

He did not believe the Liberal government had adopted a new flag. No clear mandate was possible when a government had less than half the members of the Commons and less than half the popular vote.

Mr. Cowan served notice he will speak on every amendment put forward in the flag debate.

"If we make any change in the Red Ensign, it will lead to a division such as this country has never seen."

The Liberal dissenter was applauded, frequently by the Conservative and New Democratic MPs who support the Red Ensign. There was no applause from Liberal benches.

Mr. Paul also called for an end to Commons speeches on the flag. They were merely exciting Canadians who favored either the proposed maple leaf flag or the Red Ensign.

Mrs. Waddis said the maple leaf flag is no more a symbol of unity than a skeleton of an elephant was a symbol of strength.

CWL NATIONAL CONVENTION OPENS HERE

Around 300 delegates from across the nation attended opening ceremonies of the 44th annual convention of the Catholic Women's League at the Basilica Recreation Centre last evening. Seen prior to the official opening are, left to right, Mrs. Urban Pincan, New Glasgow, N.S., national convener of girl guides; Miss Isabelle Arsenault, P.E.I. provincial president, and Miss Catherine Tait, first national vice-president and national convener of laws. Members began arriving from across Canada Sunday for the six-day event, and registration took place yesterday morning.

500 Communists Arrested In Indian Food Protests

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—More than 500 Communists were arrested throughout India Monday as their party launched a five-day countryside protest against rising food prices.

Police, in full readiness for the three-month-old regime of Premier Lal Bahadur Shastri and the Indian Communist party, the party planned to have some 10,000 members, including Leader S. A. Dange, risk arrest in peaceful demonstrations in hopes of gaining support at least 1,000 people.

Some 300 more were arrested when they picketed whole grain markets and state legislatures in New Delhi, Lucknow, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and elsewhere.

400 MARCH In a morning demonstration at New Delhi, some 400 persons marched on the main market

Hurricane Aims Blow At Jamaica

From AP-Reuters KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP)—Hurricane Cleo battered the southern tip of Haiti Monday at the same spot where thousands were killed by Flora last year.

The battle with Haiti's mountainous peninsula robbed Cleo of some of her 140-mile-an-hour punch. But the weather bureau said Cleo would regain strength when she whirled back toward the open Caribbean beyond Jamaica.

Jamaicans were warned to brace for destructive winds and heavy battering surges.

Flora's path was known a little off course and her next victim was uncertain.

Flora's path was known a little off course and her next victim was uncertain.

GIRL ABANDONS $500 IN BANK

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—An Imperial Bank of Commerce bank here has $500—and it doesn't know what to do with it.

The money was taken to a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce last Wednesday by a young girl who wanted to change into smaller denominations.

The leaders of the Communist party based near the city was cancelled.

Shastri's government, which took over after the death of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, has entered a critical period. With six weeks remaining before the harvest of winter crops, rice and wheat are scarce and lines have started appearing at grain stores in several parts of the country.

The weather office said the Truro area had received 2.8 inches of rain in a 24-hour period.

Floods Reported In Truro Area

TRURO (CP) — Heavy rain early Monday sent brooks cascading over their banks to flood some fields and farms in central Nova Scotia.

At Brookfield, water ran over a road near the construction site of the Canada Centre Commercial plant. The waters receded later in the day, however.

The weather office said the Truro area had received 2.8 inches of rain in a 24-hour period.

PM Queried On Quoddy Project

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Monday the Commons he hopes to reply Tuesday or Wednesday to a question by Robert Coates (PC - Cumberland) about whether the government will initiate an economic study of the proposed Quoddy Light project.

Mr. Pearson also said in reply to Tom Bell (CP - Saint John Albert) that all proposed power projects in the Maritime Provinces would be considered in that light.

Mr. Pearson also said in reply to Tom Bell (CP - Saint John Albert) that all proposed power projects in the Maritime Provinces would be considered in that light.

Luci Joins Convention Throgs

LUCI JOHNSON, 17-year-old daughter of the President, joins her 'Tea-Dem' friends on a boat being wheeled along Atlantic City's Boardwalk Monday. She was the first of the Johnson family to arrive at the scene of the Democratic national convention. Seated behind her is Beth Jenkins. (AP Wirephoto)

Democrats Fail To Solve Seating Rival Delegates

By ARCH MACKENZIE ATLANTIC CITY (CP)—Intensive efforts failed to find a compromise on seating of rival Mississippi delegations before the Monday night opening of the Democratic national convention.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., a committee member and champion of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, a predominantly Negro group, told reporters the committee put the case over until 2:30 p.m. today.

Unable to solve the problem, the convention's credential committee put it aside until today.

The result, a committee member said, is that neither competing delegation was to be formally seated as Monday night's opening session and no report would be made on the case until later.

However other sources said both delegations would attend the session as guests. The pre-convention planners did succeed, however, in averting a threatened floor fight over civil rights.

Mr. Rauh said Monday the Commons he hopes to reply Tuesday or Wednesday to a question by Robert Coates (PC - Cumberland) about whether the government will initiate an economic study of the proposed Quoddy Light project.

Mr. Pearson also said in reply to Tom Bell (CP - Saint John Albert) that all proposed power projects in the Maritime Provinces would be considered in that light.

Lightning Hits Three N.S. Homes

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Lightning struck three houses in the Wolfville area Monday, destroying one and leaving a family of five homeless.

The home destroyed was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Crowell, their two children and Mrs. Daniel Crowell, 70.

Within an hour, a bolt struck the home of Mrs. Arthur Farris here, smashing dishes.

Platform Adopted

ATLANTIC CITY (AP)—A platform condemning extremism, pledging civil rights enforcement, and promising further tax reduction was adopted Monday by the Democratic national convention.

The platform, which was adopted Monday night, called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

The platform also called for a reduction in the top marginal rate of the income tax to 70 percent.

Blood-Bomb Tossed In House Of Commons

By JAMES NELSON OTTAWA (CP) — An errant "blood-bomb" was tossed on the House of Commons floor Monday during the flag debate and a man identified as the director of an underground organization was later turned over to the RCMP by Commons.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said his staff had issued a pass the opposition flag debate.

Mr. Thompson said he had never seen or heard of Mr. Cowlishaw, and his staff gave him the gallery admission card on the strength of a letter of introduction, the signature of which was indecipherable.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

Sought Recognition

Mr. Thompson said he had never seen or heard of Mr. Cowlishaw, and his staff gave him the gallery admission card on the strength of a letter of introduction, the signature of which was indecipherable.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

INSIDE TODAY

Births, deaths ... 3 16
Classified ... 14, 15, 16
Comex ... 10
Finance, markets ... 8, 11
Sport ... 10
Kings, Queens, City ... 4
Sunnyside ... 3
Price Co. ... 8

Mr. Thompson said he had never seen or heard of Mr. Cowlishaw, and his staff gave him the gallery admission card on the strength of a letter of introduction, the signature of which was indecipherable.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.

Speaker Alan MacNaughton, who was presiding there, said later he did not see the object tossed. It was lobbed over the government benches and splashed a red stream across the green carpet at the centre aisle in front of George Brown (PC - Digby - Annapolis - Kings), who was speaking in support of the Red Ensign at the time.

Commons officials said later the incident was in no way connected with the flag debate.

The "blood-bomb" was a small waxed cardboard milk container containing a red fluid. It was under police examination for a claim that it was blood, but first reports were that it was either a casing paint or colored milk.