The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass

Opening lead—two of clubs.

Many more mistakes are made in the play of the cards on the easy hands than are made on the difficult hands. The reason is that in the ordinary course of events there are many more simple hands to play than there are complicated ones, and because there are therefore more opportunities for error, mistakes on easy hands outnumber those on difficult ones.

A typical example is found in today's deal. Declarer played a low club from dummy and won the opening lead with the seven. South could count to nine tricks—three clubs, four diamonds and two aces—but the count was false. The four diamond winners were easier to count than to take.

He cashed the king of diamonds and led the queen and overtook with the ace. When the jack failed to drop the outstanding ten, South resorted to a heart finesse. West took the queen with the king, returned a heart, and declarer wound up with eight tricks.

South's failure to make the contract can be traced to his opening play. He should have won the club lead with his ace or king. Obviously, West had opened from his long suit. By refussing to win the opening lead cheaply, declarer could assure himself of a subsequent entry to dummy's jack of clubs.

South can see he has nine tricks in his two hands. His only concern is to find a method of play that will permit him to cash all four diamonds. This cannot be done with complete safety if a diamond honor is overtaken in dummy.

Proper play requires declarer to win the first two tricks with the ace and king of clubs. When East shows out on the second play, dummy's jack becomes an assured entry.

The KQ of diamonds are cashed first and then a club is led. What West does now cannot matter. The diamonds have been unblocked, the jack of clubs is an entry to cash the remaining diamonds, and nine tricks are in the bag.

Blacky's Good Guess

With all the knowledge we possess
Sometimes we can no more than guess.
—Blacky the Crow

Little, very little, goes on in the Green Forest of which Blacky the Crow does not sooner or later find out. In the first place Blacky gets about. People who get about see and hear many things unknown to people who stay at home. That is one advantage of getting about, of doing a lot of travelling. Then, too, Blacky has the sharpest of eyes, and sharp eyes are a great help in learning things if you know how to and do use them. Blacky knows how to and does use his eyes all the time when not asleep. Also Blacky is full of curiosity. Not even Peter Rabbit has more.

"You would be taking a chance," said Blacky.

Blacky had just discovered Paddy the Beaver where he had least expected to see him. It wasn't in the home brook where he and Mrs. Paddy had built a dam and made a pond in which they had built a house and lived for a long time. It was in another brook quite a distance away that he had spied Paddy. He had known that Paddy had left home some time ago for a vacation and had gone down to the Big River. That was all he had known until now. Paddy asked him if there wasn't a way to get across to his own brook without too much danger.

"You would be taking a chance," said Blacky.

Paddy had been taking chances ever since leaving home and was quite willing to take more to get back there. He said so. If there was any chance at all he was willing to take it.

Blacky remembered that a little above where Paddy now was the brook branched and one branch had its beginning not a great way from where Paddy's own brook came down from the Great Mountain.

"I'll see you again," he cried abruptly and took to his black wings Paddy was no wiser than before. "He might have told me what he knows about it if he really knows anything," grumbled Paddy.

Blacky was not long gone. He had flown over to have a look at that little branch of the brook. Looking down from up above the trees he could see that little brook for quite a distance. He couldn't know how much water there was in it, but he thought there was enough for Paddy for quite a distance. He was guessing at this, of course. There was no way for him to know how deep the water was; whether or not it would be safe for Paddy the Beaver should Buster Bear or Yowler the Bobcat or Old Man Coyote happen along. Paddy would have to leave the water altogether and travel overland, over a small ridge that separated the two brooks. There, of course, he would be taking a chance.

"Keep on until you come to a little branch. Follow that branch as far as you can and then go across to your own brook. I did not see any signs of anybody you need be afraid of, so I guess you can make it safely," said Blacky.

It was a good guess. It just happened that there was no danger anywhere along the way just then. Paddy started on.

See China As Market For Canadian Wheat

By DAVE OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is to make an effort to re-establish trade contacts in Red China, with emphasis on selling some of this country's huge stockpile of wheat.

Trade Commissioner C. M. Forsyth-Smith and external affairs officer Thomas Pope, both based in Hong Kong, are expected to leave for Peiping within two weeks to discuss trade between the two countries.

But there is little likelihood that this will be a step towards establishing diplomatic relations between China and Canada. Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Monday the Progressive Conservative government has no intention of recognizing the Communist regime.

WOULD JUSTIFY REDS

Diplomatic recognition, said the prime minister, would be taken as a justification of Communism in those areas of Asia that stand as a bulwark against the Red threat.

Almost as he made this statement, news of the trade mission to Peiping became known.

Informants said Mr. Forsyth-Smith will make a special effort to dispose of some of Canada's 1,100,000,000 bushels of wheat, but discussion are to cover the entire range of non-strategic items.

The Chinese mainland market is one of the largest available in the Far East. China, with a population of about 600,000,000 now is struggling for self-sufficiency through a forced program of industrializtaion and efforts to increase food production.

LITTLE TRADE AT PRESENT

At present there is little trade between Canada and the Communist country. Last year Canada's imports totalled $5,700,000. Purchases of peanuts and walnuts made up four - fifths of this amount. The balance include spices, textiles, tea, furs and a large number of miscellaneous items.

During the same year Canada's exports to China were valued at $2,427,000, mainly fertilizers.

The visit to Peiping by the Canadian representatives comes less than six months after a Japanese and British decision to take steps to increase trade with Red China.

Informants said there is little prospect of any move by Canada to reduce the number of items which are banned for export to China. In addition to arms, munitions and other military stores, such items as electronic equipment, and precision instruments are on the list of embargoed items.

Tourist Should Be Tax Free

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SEIGNIORY CLUB Que, (CP)—An old idea for a new government was brought forward Monday at the annual convention of the Canadian Exporters Association.

The idea is that tourists be allowed to buy goods in Canada free of customs, sales and excise taxes.

Its supporters believe this would cut the cost of tourist purchases by from 20 to 50 per cent, and might add $1,000,000,000 or more to Canadian sales to other countries, and that it would be a boost for the tourist trade.

NOT ON AGENDA

The suggestion was made by the exporters' association at two successive convention in recent years, but having had no governmental response was not on this year's agenda.

However, it got resurrected from the convention floor following comment from an American delegate.

The American delegate, J. G. Ziegler of New York, asked if it wouldn't help Canadian trade with United States if such things as British materials for men's suits were made available in Canada at prices comparable with those in England.

One Canadian delegate thought this might bring objections from Canadian manufacturers. But Ivan E. Lenard of Toronto, a past president of the association, said this was a misunderstanding of the proposal and he recalled the resolution on the subject by past conventions.

Under those resolutions, he said, the proposal would apply to both imported goods and goods of Canadian manufacture.

ADDITIONAL SALES

Sales of imported goods to tourists, most of them probably goods not made in Canada anyway, would be sales which would not otherwise be made, and at the same time, Canadian goods would be offered to tourists at attractive prices.

He added that the suggestion had not been taken up by the last government, but perhaps the new government might take a different view.

The convention decided to ask the incoming executive to review the matter and if it still seemed a good suggestion to re-submit it to federal authorities.

The two - day convention, attended by some 300 delegates, got under way Monday and will continue today.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
