Time And Money Boost Woman's Take Of Tuna

By DAVE BUTLER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A United States sportswoman has gone home after establishing record tuna catches in Newfoundland's Conception Bay. Her only complaint seemed to be that she caught the bluefin faster than they could be weighed.

Dorothea Lincoln Dean, an attractive Boston blonde who now makes her home in Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., boated 11 tuna with a combined weight of more than three tons during a 36-hour period, bringing her total catch to 18 during her two weeks angling in this province.

Although residents were sorry to see her leave, they were relieved she left at least a few bluefin in the bay, said to be teeming with tuna this year.

Time and money — the sojourn cost her $1,000 a day, which usually meant 12 hours on the bay—along with special bait of Florida mullett stacked the odds in her favor over local fishermen.

Mrs. Dean says she considers herself a musician and composer but her biggest pride is in the three world records she holds for catching fish on flimsy line.

HOLDS WORLD RECORDS

She holds the world record for blue shark which she earned by coaxing a 150-pound specimen to her boat with a 12-pound test line. She boated a 461-pound Atlantic tuna with a 20-pound test line and a 316 - pound mako shark with a 20-pound test line.

She has also held two International records — a 741-pound white marlin with an eight-pound test line and a 830-pound tuna with a 130-pound test line.

Although facilities for tuna fishing at Conception Bay ports are meagre, she had only one complaint: She sometimes had to wait as long as three hours to get her fish weighed.

She disagreed with some who say big hotels and fancy dock areas should be built to cater to sports fishermen.

"The docks are adequate and the hotels in St. John's are close enough so as not to be inconvenient," she said. "But the weighing arrangements are bad."

Mrs. Dean's stay here was shortened because of a series of colds which she said she could not shake.

Newsprint Output Up

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian newsprint production in July amounted to 616,526 tons, compared to 551,103 tons in the same month last year, the Newsprint Association of Canada reported.

The production rate in July was 85.2 per cent of 1964 rated capacity, against 88.1 per cent in June. In July, 1963, it was 78.5 per cent of 1963 rated capacity.
