Souris Girls Down Young Men

The Souris Girls battled the "young men" to a 4-4 draw in an exciting hockey match played before a large crowd in Souris rink on Saturday, Feb. 23. The kid line of the "young men" Paul Gallant, Tom Battersby and Arthur Peters on a nice passing play scored the only goal of the first period with Gallant shooting the goal. The girls came back strong in the second period with Bobby MacLellan and Joyce Paquet both scoring to take a one goal lead. The third period opened fast with Bruce Stewart scoring two unassisted goals and Frank MacKenzie scoring another to put the "young men" two up. Thelma Paquet scored for the girls, and in the dying minutes of the game Foch MacDonald played a standard game for the "young men" in attempting to clear the puck into his own net to end the scoring. Clifton MacCormack handled the whistle and made a good job. Girls — Goal, J. Gilberts; defence, B. MacLellan, R. Webster, Mrs. Frank Paquet; forwards, Joyce Paquet, S. Ford, Frances MacCormack, E. Stubbert, B. Madore, Jeanette Peters, Thelma Paquet.

Young Men — Goal, J. Jennings; defence, Walter Douglas, Neil MacDonald, Herman Martin, Jack Edgcombe, Foch MacDonald; forwards, Paul Gallant, Art Peters, Bruce Stewart, Elmer Doucette, Frank MacKenzie, Tom Battersby.

The quarantine on nine municipalities adjacent to Regina will continue indefinitely until federal authorities are confident the outbreak has been eliminated. No livestock will be allowed to move out of the area. Humans living on infected farms will be asked to disinfect their persons and clothes before moving out of the quarantine zone.

The two packing plants in Regina have been closed down. Regina consumers will be supplied by plants from nearby cities.

Outward movement of livestock from stockyards at Moose Jaw, Prince Albert, Saskatoon and Winnipeg is restricted.

Livestock moving from, say, Alberta to the Ontario market can move through the restricted area if there is no stop-over. This movement will be slowed, since Moose Jaw is a feeding point and shippers will not be allowed to stop-over.

The wider, restricted area — Winnipeg, Prince Albert, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw — will be changed as soon as authorities feel confident that the disease will not spread.

What will emerge out of final plans is a smaller "buffer zone" to include Moose Jaw and the nine municipalities. Cattle moving east from Alberta will be shifted north to Saskatoon for a feeding stop-over. This will cause a "lag" in the time it takes to ship livestock eastward, but will prevent complete disruption in movement.

The agriculture department indicated that "special measures" may be necessary to prevent build-

She was attended by her sister, Miss Gloria Feehan as bridesmaid and Mrs. Richard Collings as matron of honor.

The bridesmaid wore a becoming floor length gown of pink embroidered net over tulle with matching shoulder length veil.

The matron of honor was attractively gowned in a floor length dress of blue frosted sheer with matching shoulder veil.

The bridesmaid and matron of honor carried colonial bouquets of roses.

Linda Feehan, small sister of the bride as flower girl was daintily gowned in floor length peach tulle and matching bonnet. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

Master John Flavell, small cousin of the bride acted as page boy.

The bride's mother wore a dress of black nylon sheer with matching picture hat and corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother wore a beige suit with matching hat and corsage of white carnations.

Mr. Richard Collings attended his brother as groomsmen. The ushers were Ken Flavell and Albert Garrett, uncles of the bride.

converged on Regina to begin destruction of infected animals.

Mr. Taggart was dispatched to Washington to assist Hume Wrong, Canada's ambassador to the U.S., in explaining how Canada aimed to "protect" the U.S. against the possible spread of the disease into the U.S. It appeared likely that the Canadian officials would ask that the U.S. embargo — which may run for a year — be eased.

Prices for coarse grains — oats, barley and rye — on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange declined, influenced by declines on U.S. markets and the U.S. embargo on Canadian livestock and meat.

Is Big Buyer

The U.S. has been a big buyer of Canadian feed grains. There was no indication of whether the U.S. planned to extend the embargo to cover these items. This likely will be discussed at the Washington talks. Straw and hay are known to be carriers of the foot-and-mouth virus.

First step by the federal government to "localize" and stamp out the disease will be destruction by the R.C.M.P. of animals in the infected area around Regina.

Federal authorities at Regina estimated that 1,015 cattle, 193 swine and 140 sheep will be destroyed, valued at $363,000. In Ottawa, Mr. Taggart estimated the slaughter will cover only between 300 and 400 cattle and 174 hogs, valued unofficially at more than $100,000.

All animals destroyed will be either cremated or buried deeply or "otherwise disposed of" to eliminate completely the disease organism.

All farms and other places known or suspected to have been contaminated will be cleaned up, disinfected, quarantined and kept under close observation until authorities are certain the virus has been destroyed. All this will be done at federal expense.

If exterminators find it necessary to take over premises or equipment to help in the extermination, the owners will be paid "reasonable compensation."

Indefinite Quarantine

The quarantine on nine municipalities adjacent to Regina will continue indefinitely until federal authorities are confident the outbreak has been eliminated. No livestock will be allowed to move out of the area. Humans living on infected farms will be asked to disinfect their persons and clothes before moving out of the quarantine zone.

A reception followed at the Charlottetown Hotel for the im-up of heavy surpluses of meat in one area and shortages in others. It gave no indication what will be done to prevent the deficit-surplus problem, but it appeared possible the department may decide to control shipments to steady the market.

"There may also be problems in connection with live stock, costs of transportation and other such matters which will have to be kept under constant review," the department said. "No specific announcements can be made in this connection at present."

Could Be Disastrous

Never before in history has Canada contended with such a disease problem. An advantage in the fighters' favor is that cattle movements are usually light this time of year. But if foot-and-mouth, an infectious disease which causes blisters on the animal's tongue, mouth and parts of the hoofs, continued into the summer months when the volume of cattle production climbs, results could be chaotic.

Federal veterinarians compared the disease in deadly toll to an epidemic of bubonic plague which has devastated human populations in the older countries of the world. Foot-and-mouth broke out in Mexico in 1946 and almost destroyed the cattle industry there. The U.S. has spent $122,000,000 trying to control the Mexican outbreak which has yet to be eliminated.

"Hitting hard and spreading fast," said federal authorities, "an outbreak of this disease in Canada could be disastrous to the whole national economy."

The U.S., which controlled an outbreak there in 1929, sent an expert, Dr. M. S. Shahan, in charge of foot-and-mouth research for the U.S. Government, to Canada.

He conferred with authorities here and moved out to Regina to help in the eradication. In Washington, Dr. B. T. Simms, chief of the U.S. Bureau of Animal Industry, said suspected cases of foot-and-mouth disease were reported from 22 farms near Regina.

He estimated imports of Canadian livestock have been running to more than 100,000,000 pounds of meat a year and about 360,000 head of cattle, swine and sheep.

U.S. inspectors will police the Canadian border to make sure none of the Canadian animals move into the U.S. Every live animal that has come into the U.S. from Canada in the last few weeks will be tracked down and watched for possible infection.
