Equipment Urged To Recover Subs

WASHINGTON (AP)—A special navy study board, formed after the loss a year ago of the atomic submarine Thresher, has recommended eventual development of equipment able to bring sunken submarines to the surface from depths exceeding 1,000 feet.

The report, for security reasons, spoke only of recovering submarines intact down to "collapse depth." This depth has been unofficially estimated as something more than 1,000 feet.

The program, estimated to cost $333,000,000 for the first five years, also calls for developing equipment to bring to the surface objects such as missiles and space vehicles, from depths of 20,000 feet.

The organization, called the Deep Submergence Systems Review Group, made clear, however, that even this equipment would have been useless for rescue purposes in the case of the Thresher, which went down in 8,400 feet of water off Cape Cod, "well beyond her collapse depth."

If the hull had been intact when the Thresher reached the bottom, the submarine was too deep to reach with any present equipment, the report said.

In addition to long-range recommendations, the group proposed improving present equipment and techniques to make possible recovery of intact submarines and rescue of crews from depths of continental shelves—600 feet—which would be substantially less than the collapse depth of modern nuclear submarines. This can be done in two years from the time development and construction is started, the report said.

Under the long-term program, the group recommended construction of six rescue units, of two small submersible vehicles each, able to rescue crews down to collapse depth, and "capable of quickly responding to emergencies at any location in the world."

These vehicles could be carried by combatant submarines, or flown in large cargo planes.

The new system for recovery of small objects would consist of two units, one in the Pacific and the other in the Atlantic.

Free Trade In Autos, Parts May Be Discussed At Talks

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A U.S. cabinet delegation, meeting with Canadian ministers at Ottawa, likely will explore the possibility of developing a gradual cross-border free trade area in automobiles and parts to head off a trade battle between the two countries on this issue.

Dr. Robert McNeill, deputy assistant commerce secretary, said in an interview here there should be a pragmatic approach to the problem with the two countries moving towards free trade as the "ultimate solution."

McNeill emphasized in the interview that these were his personal views and that he was not speaking on behalf of the U.S. delegation.

A specialist in Canadian affairs and an adviser to the U.S. group, McNeill said the free trade concept, if accepted by the Canadians, could be applied to other products, such as lumber, which also forms a problem between the two countries.

The U.S. administration appears to be giving increased attention to the free trade idea. A week ago, Christian Herter, chief U.S. tariff negotiator, said in an interview he would warmly support such a proposal for the two countries, though he maintained the initiative must come from Canada.

George Ball, undersecretary of state, said in a speech last Saturday efforts of the two countries should be focussed not on economic nationalism but on steps towards "an increasing economic interdependence."

"To achieve this will require, of course, a considerable measure of agreement between the Canadian and American governments on a basic philosophical approach to the purposes that should govern our relations," Ball said in his speech at Harriman, N.Y.

Ball will be at the two-day Ottawa meeting of the Joint cabinet committee on trade and economic affairs opening Wednesday.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump. The bidding has been: West: NT; 3 NT; North: Pass; East: 2 NT; South: 3 hearts.

West	North	East	South
3 NT	Pass	2 NT	3 ♥

North leads the ten of hearts, which you win with the king. South playing the eight. You lead the ace of clubs, North playing the five and South the queen. When you play the ten of clubs, North follows with the seven. How would you play the hand?

♠ KJ 4 ♥ K 9 ♦ AQ 10 8 3 ♣ A 10 4

♠ 10 2 ♥ J 6 3 ♦ K J 5 ♣ K 9 6 3

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Spades. North leads the nine of clubs. How would you play the hand? (Assume the trumps are divided 2-2.)

♠ A Q J 7 2 ♥ A 8 3 ♦ A Q ♣ K J 5

♠ A 10 8 4 ♥ Q 7 2 ♦ 10 5 ♣ A Q 10 7

1. It is practically certain that South started with the singleton queen or doubleton Q-J of clubs. The contract can therefore be made by guessing correctly whether to finesse the ten or go up with the king in the hope of catching the jack. The decision is vital, since the failure to guess right is sure to lead to defeat.

Problems of this type are not entirely a matter of guesswork. There are nearly always clues to point the way to the right decision. In this case there is a good reason for playing the king. This conclusion can be reached by first assuming that South has the singleton queen.

This would mean that North started with the J-8-7-5, and if North had this holding he would presumably have covered the ten with the jack in order to assure himself a club trick. North's failure to cover the ten indicates that he does not have the jack, and this in turn is sufficient reason for playing the king. No guarantees go with the play, since it is based entirely on North's skill or lack of skill, but it is best to assume that North is defending properly.

2. Win the club, draw two rounds of trumps, cash three more clubs, discarding a heart, and then play the ace and another heart. If North has the king, the queen of hearts becomes the twelfth trick. If it turns out that South has the king, there is still a chance that the diamond finesse will work. It is important to lead hearts before diamonds because you get a second chance if South has the king of hearts. But if the diamond finesse were attempted first and lost, you would almost surely go down.

Excavation Of N.B. Fort Set For This Year

OTTAWA (CP) — A professional team of archaeologists this summer is to undertake the excavation of historic Fort Meductic in New Brunswick's Carleton County, which is to be flooded by construction of the Mactaquac Dam.

Resources Minister Laing, in a written Commons reply to Hugh John Flemming (PC — Victoria - Carleton), the province's former premier, also said an intensive survey of the proposed reservoir to be created by the dam will be made before the land is flooded in 1966.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
