CAT SCRATCH DISEASE

When we receive a scratch from a cat the majority of us may think nothing about it yet a few weeks later symptoms arise not only at the spot scratched but also in infected lumps in the same region or elsewhere.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Drs. W. B. Daniel and Frank MacMurray, Washington, D. C., report that during the past four years hundreds of cases of cat scratch disease have been reported from Europe and America. This newly recognized group of symptoms can be proven by means of a special skin test.

In its commonest form, a cat scratch (or more rarely some other form of skin injury) is followed within a few days by the development of a slowly growing formation at the site of the scratch. Within the next few weeks, striking inflammation of the neighboring glands appears. Fever and systemic symptoms are usually present. These enlarged glands may gradually subside within a few weeks or may progress to form a pus which is sterile.

It is only within the past 20 years that this disease has been generally recognized. As early as 1932, Dr. Lee Foshy in Cincinnati began to recognize a group of patients, previously suspected of having tularemia (undulant fever—spread by bedbugs, ground squirrels, stable flies, etc.) as really having suffered their symptoms following a scratch from a cat.

In Dr. MacMurray's article, 160 case histories were studied, 27 personally and the rest furnished by doctors in 27 states and 8 foreign countries. Each case had been proved by the special skin test. The disease occurred predominantly in

Smelling Salts

To make smelling salts secure a wide-mouthed bottle with a glass stopper and fill it almost to the top with subcarbonate of ammonia in coarse powder form. Then pour over it just enough oil of lavender to cover the contents.

Paint Brushes

After using paint and varnish brushes, clean them thoroughly with turpentine, then rub with Vaseline jelly and put away free from dust. They will keep soft.

Prevent Tarnishing

Keep a piece of camphor gum in the drawer with the silver and this will delay tarnishing. Patients who were in the younger years; over one-third were children under 10 years of age and two-thirds were persons under 30 years of age. The majority were able to remember when the scratch occurred.

What were the symptoms? Aside from the original scratch, there were markedly enlarged glands in the area, sometimes as large as a golf ball. These usually subsided within six weeks but some remained as long as two years.

Eighty per cent of patients had some of the general symptoms of infection, such as chills, headache, generalized aching, weakness, loss of appetite, abdominal pain, nausea, general feeling of discomfort, sometimes a rash, low fever.

The point is that should you consult your physician for the above symptoms, try to remember if you have been exposed to a cat scratch, cat bite. We are so apt to dismiss such a light scratch at the time that we may not even remember it when the more serious symptoms arise.

MOLDED TUNA FISH SALAD

by Miss Verna Darrach, R. N., President, P. E. I. Association of Nurse

- 1 envelope gelatin
- 1/2 cup cold water
- Yolks of 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 tablespoons melted butter
- 3/4 cup milk
- 2 1/2 teaspoons mild vinegar or lemon juice
- 2 cups canned tuna fish
- 1 teaspoon mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika

Mix egg yolks, slightly beaten, with salt, mustard and paprika; then add butter, milk and vinegar. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Soften gelatin in cold water. Add softened gelatine to hot mixture and stir until dissolved. Add tuna, separated in flakes.

Turn into a mold that has been rinsed in cold water and place in refrigerator to chill. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves and garnish as desired.

Observations From Europe's Culinary Art

By PAULINE KENNEDY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, (CP)—After a month of travelling through European countries and eating his way through multi-course European meals, Toronto restaurateur Hans Freed returned to Canada with some observations and suggestions. Mr. Freed, whose television cooking show "Hats in the Kitchen" has even interested some males in the culinary art, said that one of the first things he noticed overseas was the small amount of meat consumed compared with Canada.

"In Canada we eat eight or nine ounces of meat per person at a meal—Europeans eat about four," he said.

GOOD ENGLISH COOKS

Mr. Freed who came to Canada from Germany more than 20 years ago said he was very impressed with meals in England. "I think you can find some of the best cooks in the world there, despite their reputation for lack of imagination." The English, he said, excelled in preparation of fish and have a "Hats in the Kitchen" to cook chicken, Switzerland, he loved because of the wide choice of cheese. He praised Swiss fondue, its most famous dish. It is a mixture of hot white wine and cheese eaten on chunks of French bread.

OVERCOOKING FAULT

Mr. Freed listed five bad Canadian cooking and eating habits. Housewives overcook both their meats and vegetables, he said. Properly cooked vegetables should be steamed in very little water and taken out when just a shade underneath then braised in butter. "Some people have the idea the more you cook meat the more tender it gets," Mr. Freed said. "It just turns to leather."

Some Canadian cooks don't have that "feel for flavoring" which Mr. Freed thinks is so important. He advised abolition of the measuring system and experimenting with the test and taste method of cooking for best results to the palate.

His fourth caution—"don't drink hard liquor with your meals." It completely strangles the taste buds. "Wines, yes—hard liquor, never."

Another bad habit—to Mr. Freed as a restaurateur—is unforgivable. "Canadians have the most abominable habit of souvenir hunting, taking silver, small cups or anything else they can get their hands on when eating out."

The Stars Say

By Estrellita

THERE is an over-all trend which complicated relationships and clear thinking now. Look out for possible difficulties in contacts with both kin and neighbors. Don't expect too much from others where business matters are concerned, either. They may let you down or display a lack of approval. The late evening is less restrictive and favors relaxation with friends or family.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, the next five months will be more favorable for the completion of outstanding affairs than it will for the inauguration of new ventures. Your horoscope promises eventual success for your plans, but achievement will result from a slow and steady program of endeavor rather than from any sudden or dramatic turn of events.

By year's end most of your difficulties should have been solved and it will be time for you to enjoy some well-earned relaxation and enjoyment. Try to plan a short trip then or engage in some stimulating social activities as a relief from possible over-exertion or emotional tension during October and November.

A child born on this day will be endowed with imagination and intelligence, and should succeed in any work involving contact with the public.

Butler-Kelly Wedding

A pretty wedding took place in St. Dunstan's Basilica on June 30th, at 9 a. m. when Mary Teresa Loretta, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius O. Kelly became the bride of Wilfred Arthur, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. Andrew Butler. Rev. T. Butler performed the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

The altar was beautifully decorated with baskets of summer flowers in yellow, white and blue interspersed with vigil lights while pink rosebuds, tied with white ribbon, marked the pews of the guests. The music was under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Dougan who accompanied the vocal solos of Miss Maureen Blake and Frank MacIntyre.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a full length gown of white nylon net and champagne lace over taffeta. The nipped in jacket with peplum, which covered the strapless gown, fastened in front with tiny self-covered buttons and had long sleeves tapering to points over the hands. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Mary Kelly as maid of honor, who wore blue nylon net over taffeta. The bridesmaids were Miss Joan Kelly, who wore yellow nylon net over taffeta and Miss Beryl Beagan attired in mauve net over taffeta. All attendants wore matching hats and mitts and carried nosegays of yellow and white mums. Little Miss Mary Helen Murphy, as flower girl, wore a floor length dress of white nylon with pale blue sash and matching headpiece carried a basket of Lilies-of-the-Valley and blue forget-me-nots.

Mr. John Butler was the usher, her best man while the ushers were Mr. Louis Butler and Mr. William Kelly.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kelly chose navy blue cheer over mauve taffeta with mauve accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Miss Margaret Butler, sister of the groom, wore flowered nylon with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at "Sandy's" where the bride's table, with its attractive arrangement of mixed mums and lighted tapers, was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Father Leonard Macdonald proposed the toast to the bride and read the congratulatory telegrams while Mr. John Butler proposed the toast to the bridesmaids.

For her wedding trip Mrs. Butler donned a suit of turquoise garden with white accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations. They plan to live in Charlottetown where Mr. Butler is employed with the Associated Shippers.

DOROTHY DIX

Her Despot Army Beau

DEAR MISS DIX: I am heart-broken over a situation that seems to be out of my hands. I'm 17 and going steady with a boy of 21 who is in service. Naturally, I promised to wait for and be loyal to him. Last week, however, my brother, who is also in the Army, came home from camp with a buddy. My brother is engaged, and asked me to complete a foursome for a movie date. Since his friend was staying at our house, it seemed more than polite for me to agree.

I certainly had no intention of being untrue to Roger, my steady beau. I wrote him about the date explaining just what had happened, and in his reply he said we had better call it quits since I couldn't be true. I don't think one mistake on my part called for such drastic action. He has always been jealous, and this time I think he's a bit unreasonable. Am I right or wrong?
Corinne M

NO REASON FOR JEALOUSY

ANSWER: Even the most loving man should concede the fact that his girl can't be kept locked in a dungeon away from the world, and that in the course of any daily activity, she's bound to see other men, to be pleasant to them, even talk to them without being considered disloyal.

What you did was absolutely no more than should have been done for a visitor. After all, since your brother brought him home, you were in a position of hostess, and in that capacity were required to make the boy's stay a pleasant one. Such incidents will recur all through life and if Roger is going to get on a high horse every time courtesy requires you to be pleasant, you are going to have a miserable time of it. With older brothers in the family, bringing friends home to meals, to spend the night, or a week-end, you will have to sit at the table with them, talk to them in the evening, probably attend church, or the movies with them. Your Roger should realize that such conduct does not detract from your feeling toward him.

If you write, explaining how these things do, and will occur, I'm sure he'll get over his petty jealousy. Don't besiege him with apologies—you owe only an explanation. Let him come to a realization of his own childishness. If you let this jealousy of his get the upper hand, you'll have a rough time later. Don't hurt him, but don't pamper him, either.

DEAR MISS DIX: With the exception of a very few close friends my own age, most of my associates are elderly; in fact, most of them are friends of my mother. I am 30 years old, and have three children. I go to church, belong to a club, but can't make friends my own age.

ANSWER: With three small children to act as entering wedges, you should have no trouble. Make every effort to meet the parents of their schoolmates or playmates. Ask new acquaintances in for cookies and a cool drink—a most conducive combination to friendship. Since you seem to be a congenial person, able to make friends easily, I'm sure you'll soon add many younger companions to your social list.

Graczyk-Cousins Wedding

Saturday morning, June 19, at eleven o'clock, a pretty wedding was solemnized in the Young People's Church, Buffalo, N. Y., when Carolyn Elizabeth (Betty) Cousins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Blamark Cousins, Breadalbane, P. E. I., became the bride of Mr. Eugene Graczyk of Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. James R. Carroll officiated. The wedding music was under the direction of the organist. Previous to the ceremony, Miss Virginia Davis sang "How Do I Love Thee". The chancel was decorated with lighted candles, a large bouquet of white gladioli and carnations created the floral setting.

The bride chose a full-length gown of white satin, with a fitted bodice and lily point sleeves. The finger-tip veil was held in place with a matching halo, and was held in a bouquet of white orchid. She was given in marriage by Mr. Clifford Logan.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Jim Basel, was gowned in ice blue net-over-taffeta, with matching head-dress and gloves. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Carolyn Pention, niece of the bride, was flower-girl. She was dressed in blue organdy, and carried a nosegay of yellow roses, and a forget-me-not.

Mr. Wally Graczyk was his brother's best man. Mr. Dan Graczyk and Mrs. Jim Basel were ushers. Mrs. Cousins chose for her daughter's wedding a navy blue crepe dress with white accessories, and wore a corsage of mauve orchids.

A wedding breakfast was served at the bride and groom's apartment, by the sisters-in-law of the groom, Mrs. Dan Graczyk and Mrs. Wally Graczyk, assisted by the bride's sisters-in-law, Mrs. Lorne Cousins.

At four o'clock, a reception was held at Castrine's Restaurant. A four-tier wedding cake was cut in the traditional manner, then served by the bride's sister, Mrs. Wally Pention.

Following the reception, the couple left for a honeymoon trip to Vermont, U. S. A. The bride travelled in a gray suit with blue and white accessories. Her corsage was white orchid.

On their return they will reside in Buffalo.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Blamark Cousins, Breadalbane, P. E. I.; Mrs. Lorne Cousins, Borden, P. E. I.; Mrs. Wally Pention and daughter, Carolyn, West Palm Beach, Florida.

two rounds of trumps, then to cash the ace and king of diamonds. With West showing out of diamonds also on the second round, the hand would become the simplest laydown. The diamond jack should be led through East, who can cover this time or the next, at his pleasure. Declarer ruffs away the diamond queen, cashes the trump ace, then enters dummy by ruffing a heart. The spade queen draws East's lone jack, and the rest of the diamonds are run.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

Now after a day pleasantly warm and sun-dappled, "deary fingers" draw the gradual dusky veil" of evening over the reaches of our valley. And a star first—come of all, lights a quiet sparkle above a dimming hill. A little wind of the rowan not far from this window, and the sound is a happy one, like that which comes to us from the barnyard where in this twilight the children help their Dad turn the cows to their night-pasture up the farm-lane. It is now about spent—this day which brought to us a new work-day week this morning.

With lovely promise it was given . . . "What's the day like?" James asked from the kitchen where he hurried into his boots, of "at the door. Like? What should I tell him, this hay-farmer, who evidently looked for a sign? Of the fresh clean loveliness prevailing? Of the wind, young and sweet as a babe, born beyond a hill of dawn and nurtured at the breast of the summer? Of the dew-damp ashine on the meadows and the returned sun gleam above the rise?

"I don't believe it's going to make much of a hay-day, Ellen," she offered coming then to stand a moment beside us. "It's, I'd say, too still!" He nodded. "We may just get another shower or two before it's over."

Down the farm-lane the cows were moving, colors bright in the sunlight, home to the milking; calves stabled, gave voice to complaints of hunger—or was it thirst? Cats

And about gone now are the hours, bearing with them, it comes to us, record of our smiles and our tears, our virtues and sinnings . . . Gone . . . past recall!

Until tomorrow . . . Diary . . . Good-night . . .

Modern Etiquette

Q. What is the correct way to answer an invitation to a wedding reception?

A. On the first page of note paper, and although it is written by hand, the spacing of the words should be the same as though they were engraved. Also, since the invitation was written in the third person, your reply should also be written in the third person.

Q. When one is traveling on a train and wishes to leave one's seat for a few minutes, in what manner can it be shown that the seat is reserved?

A. A coat or bag placed on the seat is sufficient.

Q. Should a man use his right or his left hand when tipping his hat to a woman?

A. Either hand, whichever is the more convenient at the time.
