

MR. AND MRS. LEO DOYLE AND THEIR ATTENDANTS

Young Couple Pledge Vows At Holy Redeemer

The church of the Most Holy Redeemer was the setting of a pretty winter wedding on January 27, when Rev. Fr. Moreau united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Mary Catherine, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Cumiskey, Fort Augustus, and Leo William Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Doyle, St. Anthony's Parish, Montreal.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina dress of white net over satin with lace bodice and sleeves and carried a white prayer book. Miss Ernestine Hughes was bridesmaid and wore a ballerina dress of shrimp net over taffeta and carried a nosegay of pink carnations. The groom was ably supported by his brother Dominic. The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of navy crepe with pink accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

ELLEN'S DIARY

We Are Favored People In This Island Province

"What does the day look like, Ellen?" James asked of her first to a window this morning. "It looks" we replied "as if there might be pussy willows out, down there" we noted "along the old mill-road."

Wind of day yet born. It was a morning to put feet into the briskest pair of shoes and be off to the unexplored paths of the new week. Unexplored but promising. What nice surprises, what adventures would be there for us to find and gather-lovely blossoms, rosemary and heart's ease and a myriad of blooms as we made our way up its trails.

By-passed the Island this winter" James offered. "For instance when they get quite a snowfall over on the mainland or 'up along' we only get the end of it." "Perhaps we're the favored people!" we chuckled. "Not in that sense, Ellen" he said. "Though when we come to consider everything, we are a favored people. No earthquakes, no floods, no extreme cold or heat. And it's a rare year-oh there were odd lean ones in my memory-when we don't have enough pasture for the stock through the summer, or enough crop to gather to see them through the winter. Might be 'touch and go' with the feed sometimes, but there's mostly plenty if a farmer's careful." Favored? Aye... Yesterday - The Lord's Day-how lovely it was with its sunshine and gentle wind and the light haze veiling far hills! Kin came to Alderlea in the afternoon - a first granddaughter in many years of this house. And her husband, his name counted among the Island's best farmers, he has land in plenty and herds, with which to practice his inherent skills of husbandry. And sons in a pair they have, a daughter-in-law and little granddaughters two... altogether a fine family to share in the interests of the farm. Others too were our visitors - parents and children in an enviable half-dozen of girls and boys. How full and happy and never lonely that Island home must be! And each year in passing more interesting, horizons ever-widening. "A great little family" James said. And we agreed remembering how extremely good it was to be one of eight children-never to get short of playmates... or affection. "The Northern Lights, Ellen - I never saw them so bright and pretty" James says homing now from a "kaley" at the house across the lane. "Perhaps" he suggests "you'd slip into your coat and come yourself and see?" Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night....
