Detroit Takes Over Lead In American League with Twin Win Over Boston

(Canadian Press)

Detroit Tigers today are in undisputed possession of first place in the American League after defeating Boston Red Sox twice yesterday, 13-4 and 5-3.

While rain plagued the National League, the junior circuit went through a full bill of afternoon games, including two double-headers. In the other twin-bill, New York Yankees swept a pair from St. Louis Browns, 5-1 and 6-3. Cleveland Indians downed Philadelphia Athletics in 10 innings by a 4-3 score, while Washington Nationals copped an 8-5 win from Chicago White Sox.

Boston and Detroit had been tied with .667 percentages before yesterday, the Sox with 14 victories and seven losses and the Tigers with a 10-5 mark. In the opener, Freddie Hutchinson went the distance, losing his shutout in the eighth when Ted Williams blasted a grand-slam homer for Boston's only runs. Williams was the goat in the nightcap when an eighth-inning error gave the Tigers two unearned runs. All told, the Tigers got three runs in the eighth and two in the ninth to overcome a 2-run deficit.

Lou Boudreau, back in the Cleveland line-up after benching himself for weak hitting, cracked four hits, drove in one run and set up the winning marker against Philadelphia.

Boudreau's fourth hit, in the 10th inning, sent Joe Gordon scurrying to third, from where he scored as Jim Hegan hit into a force play.

Bob Ortiz hit a triple, double and a single today to lead Washington Senators to their fifth straight victory.

Scoring three runs in the first, the Senators never were headed. Even so, starting pitcher Joe Haynes needed nearly two hours to win the game of the year, Mickey Harris took over the pitching chores for Washington in the seventh.

Chicago's Cass Michaels and Johnny Ostrowski slammed home runs for a losing cause. In addition, Michaels had a double and a single to pace Chicago's nine-hit attack.

The double New York victory boosted the Yankees into second place, a game behind Detroit.

Cliff Mages was the big gun of the opener with his three-run home run which broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning. The blow knocked out Al Widmar, making his first start of the season after holding out all through spring training. Allie Reynolds went all the way to his second victory.

Herbert Hearnich pitched the 5-1 tie in the second game with a pinch-hit single in the seventh after Ray Coleman's homer with two on had evened the game for the lowly Browns.

Sport Echoes From Prince County

Sockol! We hit the canvas! Struggling to our knees, and shaking our head to clear away the mist from our eyes, we glance over where Kid Towncouncil is standing in a neutral corner waiting for the full count. Seven, eight, nine—We're up, ready to continue, but gazing anxiously at the clock.

Seriously, it isn't quite as bad as that. The Summerside Town Council, like a lot of the rest of us, would like to see a new up-to-date rink in Summerside. Their offer to private enterprise shows that they will give free water, electric power and taxes for five years, and under specified conditions will help with a loan up to $50,000, if necessary. Taking this into consideration, it must be admitted that the town fathers are worried, even as you and we, about our deplorable distinction of being "The Rinkless Town of the Maritimes."

They have come out courageously for what is, no doubt, their honest convictions, and instead of dodging the responsibility which naturally goes with making a decision, by leaving it to the people to decide, they have made it clear that they do not believe it feasible for the town to undertake the construction of a community centre or rink at the present time. They could be right. On the other hand, being fallible human beings, like the rest of us, they could be wrong. Certainly there are some men on the Citizens' Committee whose mental stature and business acumen equal that of our mayor and councillors, and this committee are of the opinion that the construction of a rink by the town is feasible and desirable, at least, if the people of the town should give a mandate for such action.

Time, more than anything else, perhaps, will prove the Town Council right or wrong. If, as they think, the matter of encouraging private enterprise to undertake the construction of a rink hasn't been sufficiently pressed, and if with further promotion of this idea private enterprise does enter the field, then we think the Council will have won its point. On the other hand, if business men shy clear of this enterprise despite the Council's largesse, and we continue to be the "Rinkless Town of the Maritimes," the Council, because of their recent decision will probably find themselves the butt of considerable adverse criticism.

People will be ready to cite other cases where projects, which were carried into effect with much misgiving and a storm of criticism from the disciples of "stard-patism," proved to be so successful that people today find it difficult to believe that the projects met with opposition when first introduced. Others will remind the Council that other towns no larger nor wealthier than Summerside have carried the matter of building community centres to a successful termination. The virtue of taking time by the forelock instead of panting after his flying heels will be stressed. Someone may remind the Council that deficits incurred because of service to our youth might add far more credit to a town than surpluses piled up and services neglected. If bank balances are the measure of an individual's or a town's success, then Dickens's Ebenezer Scrooge can be regarded as one of fiction's greatest heroes.

If next winter rolls around without any further action being taken, and with Summerside's having no rink, (Some Charlottetown hockey leaders have stated that they would not take teams into the old Crystals Rink if it is in operation next year) then this feeling of criticism against the Council's action might crystallize

Johnny Sain Flashes Old Form As Braves Defeat Chicago Cubs

Johnny Sain yesterday flashed some of his 1948 form, handcutting Chicago Cubs with a four-hitter to lead Boston Braves to a 3-0 triumph which split a two-game National League series between the clubs.

Two games were rained out—Brooklyn at Cincinnati and New York at St. Louis. Philadelphia Phils were scheduled to play a night game against Pittsburgh Pirates.

Sain outduelled Bill Voiselle and Walt Dubiel in registering his fourth victory of the season against two losses. Voiselle, the loser, was a fairly good hurler himself, allowing only six hits during his eight innings. Dubiel finished with a perfect ninth. A sloppy defence cost Voiselle two runs in the fifth and one in the sixth from Sid Gordon's seventh homer of the season.

Sain himself started the fifth-round ruckus with a single after two outs. Sam Jethroe beat out a hit to Wayne Terwilliger, and when the latter threw wild trying to pick Sain off second, both runners advanced.

Sain then scored and Jethroe into action centering around next winter's civic elections, and we should have, in effect, our plebiscite after all. Personally, we feel like one who has been reading an interesting story only to have someone come along and tear the last two pages out. Darn it, we'd like to know what would have happened if a plebiscite had been taken.

We don't want to see a plebiscite now, however. We hope the Council will be proved correct. We hope someone will come along and take advantage of the Council's offer. We hope a rink will still be built this summer.

If our fellow sports writer, John McNeill, misses an issue of "The Realm of Sport," forgive it. He has been pacing floors—and absent-mindedly crushing his hat. At least, that's our guess. Congratulations, Bennie and John, on the new arrival of a baby daughter.
