

STEEL INDUSTRY ASKS PROTECTION

LOADING SUPPLIES FOR LIGHTHOUSES
The C.G.S. "C.D. Howe" arrived in port yesterday morning and is berthed at the Department of Marine Wharf where private supplies will be taken on for distribution at the various lighthouses and radio stations on the coast of Newfoundland. This annual pre-winter chore assigned to the "Howe", follows the rigorous and important activities of the ship in the Arctic region and Hudson's Bay, which is routine during the summer months. Capt. Fournier, who commands the C.D. Howe, is well known in Charlottetown.

Team To Study Atomic Radiation Effects On Man

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—The UN assembly's political committee Monday unanimously approved the creation of a 15-nation team of scientists to study the effects of atomic radiation on man and his environment.
The vote was 59 to 0. Russia and the other Communist bloc countries voted with the West even though a series of Soviet amendments had earlier been defeated.
The eight sponsoring countries, including Canada, made important concessions to India and the powerful Latin-American group in order to secure passage of the measure.
FOUR COUNTRIES ADDED
Under an amendment which the sponsors acceded to, four countries will be added to the list of those originally slated for membership in the committee: Argentina, Belgium, Denmark and the Netherlands.
DENVER (AP)—President Eisenhower will leave the hospital for Washington Friday but two of his doctors said Monday it will be "late January or February" before he can decide on trying for a second term.

Sign First Guaranteed Wage Contract In Canada

TORONTO (CP)—The guaranteed wage has been won for the first time by a Canadian labor union.
Beginning Sept. 1, 1957, the 5,000 Ontario employees of Massey-Harris-Ferguson Ltd. will be eligible for company-paid unemployment insurance. It will be in addition to benefits they receive under the federal government's unemployment insurance plan.
The company and the United Automobile Workers union (CIO-CCL) announced Monday that the principle of the guaranteed annual wage has been incorporated into a new contract they signed last Saturday. The contract still must be ratified by employees at the MHP plants in Toronto, Woodstock and Brantford.
If the company agrees to start paying into an unemployment fund built up to $1 million, employees who are laid off can draw from it in proportion to their length of service and wages earned.
The plan, however, is not annual, nor does it pay an employee's wages. It guarantees him a minimum of 65 per cent of his wages for four weeks and 60 per cent for a further 22 weeks—a total of half a year.
Here's how it works:
The contract states that an employee is entitled to draw from the fund an amount which will bring his total unemployment benefits up to 5 per cent of his regular weekly wage, after taxes.
Thus if an employee earns say $3,000 a year after taxes, the company pays him enough in benefits to bring the total of his federal unemployment insurance and his company insurance is less than $2,000 (66 2/3 of his income).
No benefits are paid for the first week of the job and no benefits go to workers with less than a year's seniority.
After the 26 weeks are up, the employee draws his government insurance benefits for a further 10 weeks and then he runs out of benefits.
The rules by which the company insurance is paid are similar to government regulations and employees must be eligible for government benefits in order to receive the company insurance.
Massey-Harris-Ferguson employees are not the first Canadians to receive the unemployment benefit—Canadian employees of the U.S.-controlled Continental and American Can companies were covered by a new contract signed several weeks ago—but they are the first to receive the benefit under a contract negotiated in Canada.
The United Automobile Workers union was the first in the United States to sign the agreement—with Ford—and the Canadian branch of the union is currently negotiating with General Motors of Canada for a similar agreement.

Reports First Armed Holdup

CAMPBELLTON, N. B. (CP)—Two young men were sought Monday night after Campbellton's first known armed holdup.
It occurred Saturday evening when the pair, masked with handkerchiefs and one carrying a concealed weapon, took $70 cash from Handron's grocery store on the outskirts of town. They over-looked $90.
Mrs. H. Handron, 53, wife of the proprietor, was the only other person in the store. She had been suffering heart trouble and the incident left her shaken.

Five nursing assistants will receive certificates and pins at graduation exercises of the Provincial Sanatorium to be held next Monday in the afternoon.
The graduates of the one year course are: Mary Elizabeth Cole, Stanley Bridge; Joyce Mary DeCoste, Charlottetown; Mrs. Mary Anne MacDonald, Charlottetown; Margaret Josephine Doyle, Hunter River; Laura Gertrude Reid, Stanley Bridge.
Presiding at the graduation exercises will be Col. G. Elliot Full, chairman of the Sanatorium Commission. The address to the graduates will be given by Dr. Burton D. Howatt, Department of Health and Welfare. The nursing assistants will receive their certificates and pins from the hands of Miss Mona Wilson, director of Public Health Nursing in the Province.

Local Man Charged In Shocking Murder Case

A 38-year-old Charlottetown mother was slain by a blow from a heavy instrument, apparently an axe, while she slept at her home in the City early yesterday morning, and a four-year old daughter received a bad throat wound but will recover in hospital.
Mrs. Ada Louise MacNeill, wife of Headley George MacNeill, wife of Headley George MacNeill, was found dead in her bed with a deep wound in her forehead, by City Police who were summoned to the MacNeill home at 85 Rochford Street shortly after four a.m.
The husband, a 38 year old theatre employee, was found lying the hallway of the home in his under clothing. He was taken into custody before Magistrate K. M. Martin in City Police Court on a charge of murder.
No plea was entered by the accused, who was later taken to Falconrow Mental Hospital for examination and observation. MacNeill had been employed by the theatre company for the past 16 years and had been on duty for the late show last Saturday night. Close friends however report that he had been suffering from an emotional strain during the last two weeks. Police state that he showed no signs of liquor or evidence of drinking.
Mr. MacNeill had apparently been sleeping in the same bed with his wife and the other children were awakened by the cries of their four year old sister Phyllis who received the throat wounds. It is reported that another sister went to the home of Edward Gallant next door to phone for the Police.
Eight children were left motherless by the tragedy and were immediately taken to St. Vincent's Orphanage by the Catholic Welfare Bureau. The children are Joan, 15; Roy, 14; Fay, 12; Carol, 10; Joyce, 8; James 7; Phyllis 4; and Donald five weeks old.
An inquest was ordered into the death of the woman by Coroner L.E. Prowse who empaneled the following jury: Earl Baker, foreman; Frank Lacey, Duncan MacCannell, Wilbur H. Andrew, Elmer MacDonald, Ralph Crockett, John Squarebriggs. After viewing the remains the inquest was adjourned until November 15 at 8 p.m. in City Hall. An autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. MacNeill by Dr. Harold Shaw, provincial pathologist.
The deceased was formerly Miss Ada Louise Batchelder of George town.

No Election In Nfld. This Year

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood said Monday there will be no election in Newfoundland this year.
There had been rumors that the premier might call a general election for late this month.
Just back from a European trip and preparing for another Tuesday to Chicago, the premier also denied there would be by-elections.
The last election was Nov. 26, 1951. Liberals under Premier Smallwood now hold 20 seats, Progressive Conservative 17, and the CCF one. There are two vacancies, in seats won by Liberals in the 1951 election.
The CCF member, Sam Drover, was elected as a Liberal but switched last year to the socialist party.
LADY ROSE TO WED
LONDON (Reuters)—The engagement of Lady Rose Alexander, 23-year-old daughter of Earl Alexander of Canada, was announced Monday. She will marry five and a half year old Humphrey Crossman, Royal Artillery, son of the late Maj. Gen. F. L. M. Crossman of Berwick-on-Tweed. Lady Rose, who returned to England two years ago after studying arts and sciences at McGill University was educated in Canada during Lord Alexander's six years as governor-general.

Present Tariff Said Archaic

OTTAWA, (CP)—Canada's basic steel industry opened its plea for higher tariff protection Monday with an assertion that the country's 50-year-old steel tariff structure is archaic, loosely phrased and full of loopholes.
Lionel A. Forsyth, president of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, told the tariff board that given sufficient tariff safeguards, Canada's expanding steel industry can serve all of Canada's needs.
Canada currently imported more than one-third of her steel requirements but the Montreal manufacturer said that "steel capacity has reached a level where the entire Canadian demand can be satisfied through domestic production."
"It is hoped that the proportion of imports will decline but we must face the fact that tariff conditions are even less favorable than they were before the war," he said in presenting argument for the industry.
The three-man tariff board, under the chairmanship of Hector McKinnon, has been requested by Finance Minister Harris to investigate and recommend revisions for the steel tariff. The issue is vital to the Canadian economy since steel is the backbone of industry.
Mr. Forsyth contended that no one in 1907 could have foreseen the extent of the purchasing power drop in the next half-century.
Chairman McKinnon observed that the Canadian industry could meet all of Canada's steel requirements yet there had been complaints by some Canadian users that they could not obtain sufficient supplies and that some types of steel simply were not made in Canada and had to be imported.
Mr. Forsyth replied that in the first half of 1954 the Canadian steel industry was "working its head off" to try to get enough orders to keep 70 per cent of its capacity operation. The industry could not get all the customers it wanted.
But now there was high demand for steel. Some consumers had allowed stocks to run low and were having difficulty in getting supplies.
As for complaints that some kinds of steel were not produced in Canada, the tariff was to blame, he said. It did not give Canadian industry sufficient protection against foreign competition.
TARIFF ARCHAIC
He said the 50-year-old tariff was archaic in its approach to business and contained many meaningless phrases.
He argued that national survival depends on a country's capacity to produce steel. Canada's wartime production of ships could not have been possible without home manufacture of plates and steel shapes.
"The billions now being spent by Canada on defence would be a doubtful investment if the vitality of the nation's steel industry, the centre of industrial life and defence production, should be weakened."

Children Saved From Mad Moose

FOSTERVILLE, N. B. (CP)—A shot from a woman's gun saved several terrified children from a moose snorting behind them near York county village.
Mrs. Raymond Graham of Pemberton, Ridge saw the moose emerge from the woods and begin to chase the youngsters. She ran screaming she dashed into her house, snatched a gun and shot the animal, killing it.
Mrs. Graham said she thought only of saving the children at the time "but when it was all over I was a nervous wreck."

Eden Proposes Committee To Study Gov't Security

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Eden Monday night proposed to set up a small parliamentary group to study government security and consider whether further precautions could be taken to prevent a repeat of the Burgess-Maclean spy case.
Eden acknowledged that the government might have been "a little negligent" in realizing the danger after Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, two foreign office officials, defected to the Reds in 1951.
Eden made his proposal after Foreign Secretary Macmillan had opened a full-scale Commons debate on the case.
The prime minister said: "We should examine... the security measures now applied in the public service and also consider whether any further precautions can properly be taken to reduce the risk of treachery."
He suggested that the study group be composed of senior members from both the Conservative and Labor parties and should be members of the Privy Council, the body which advises the Queen on constitutional matters.
Eden said that government security arrangements have been "progressively" tightened since 1951 and that he is convinced that the foreign office security standards were now "of the very highest order in this or any other country."

New 600-Mile Radar Line Linkup Is Being Planned

OTTAWA (CP)—A 600-mile east coast link-up of the Mid-Canada and Pinetree radar lines is being planned, it was learned Monday.
The chain would run from the vicinity of Cape Race, southeast tip of Newfoundland, up the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador to roughly the 55th parallel. Defence department officials described the line as a "fill-in" and not a fourth line in addition to the Mid-Canada and Pinetree lines and the DEW (Distant Early Warning) chain which is across the continental Arctic coast. Washington officials also said they had heard nothing of a fourth line.
TO PAY ONE-THIRD
A reliable source here said Canada has agreed in principle to pay one-third the cost of the link-up, the United States paying the remaining two-thirds. This would be a cost-sharing system as was allowed for the Pinetree chain, of which the Newfoundland-Labrador hook-up would be an extension.
Pinetree, extends across most of southern Canada, with its heaviest concentration of radar stations in Ontario and Quebec.
The $170,000,000 Mid-Canada line, being constructed and paid for by Canada, runs roughly along the 55th parallel. It will link up with the western leg of Pinetree in the Canadian Arctic. The U.S. is building and paying for the $250,000,000 DEW line. Target date for completion of the Mid-Canada and DEW lines—Pinetree has been in operation for some time—is "it would be estimated as 1957."
With good progress being made

Seven Lost In Sudden Sinking In St. Lawrence

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP)—Seven members of the 11-man crew were drowned Sunday night when the dredge Fundy sank suddenly in the St. Lawrence River while under tow.
All were pitched from a rolling lifeboat. Four managed to hang on to bits of debris in the bitter cold water. They were rescued by the tug A. F. Fifield, which put back after her crew had quickly cut the tow line to prevent their vessel from being dragged down.
The four survivors of the disaster, which struck the dredge 11 miles from Rimouski and about 200 miles east of Quebec, were brought to Rimouski. They are:
Bill McIntire, 50, St. Catharines, Ont., skipper of the dredge; Hector Bluff, 28, Neils Harbor, Cape Breton; N. S. Leo Patrick Mason, 33, Catalina, Nfld., John Jeans, 24, Catalina, Nfld.
The drowned:
Matthew Mahar, 32, Sonora, Guyabon county, N. S.
John J. MacDonald, 46, Dunnville, Ont.
Warren J. Bezanson, 61, Lower Rose Bay, Lunenburg county, N. S.
Edward Simms, 1, Port aux Basques, Nfld.
Andrew Hartnett, 22, Lords Cove, Nfld.
William Duffett, 35, Catalina, Nfld.
Louis White, 26, Catalina, Nfld.
WAS UNDER TOW
The dredge was being towed from Rimouski, Nfld., by Both Pellers were owned by the J. P. Forter company, with head offices in Montreal.
Skipper McIntire said the dredge began taking water about 5:30 p.m., about an hour before she went down. A strong northeasterly wind was blowing at the time.
"All of us got into the lifeboat," he said. "She was rolling badly and we hung on. Then as we pulled away she gave a sudden jerk and we were all thrown into the water. I was the last man to be picked up. I had just about had enough. Like the others I had a lifebelt on. But I don't know what happened to it. I guess it came off in the scramble when we tumbled out of the boat."
"I swallowed so much salt water I felt like a drunken man when they pulled me out. I still feel the same way. They pumped out my stomach this morning when we got in."
McIntire said possibly the men who were lost were injured when thrown from the lifeboat.
SAW DREDGE SIGNAL
Captain J. McTavish of the tug A. F. Fifield told the Montreal Star in a ship-shore telephone interview that the first he knew the Fundy was in trouble was when the dredge signalled with her light about 6:20 p.m. His own crew had to work fast to cut the towing cable so the tug wouldn't be pulled down by the sinking dredge.
Capt. McTavish immediately put back. The dredge was about 1,000 feet astern when the cable was cut but when the tug reached the spot the Fundy had disappeared. It was pitch dark but the tug searched the waters and picked up the four survivors, gave them hot drinks and wrapped them in blankets.
Capt. McTavish said he didn't know what caused the Fundy to sink. There was no explosion and no noise.

Bald Head Was Downfall Of B.C. Prison Escapee

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Wasylenchuk said he had no trouble eluding Rip, the RCMP's tracking dog, but the 44-year-old escaped bank robber's bald head was his downfall.
Wasylenchuk, sentenced to life imprisonment for the Jan. 13 holdup of a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, was one of four prisoners who shot their way out of Oakalla prison in suburban Burnaby last Friday.
Harold Coulter and Carl LeVie-toire were caught within a half hour of the break-out. Wasylenchuk was picked up early Sunday and Robert Lewis, 24, serving a 10-year sentence for bank robbery, was captured early Monday.
"If I could have covered my bald head you wouldn't have got me," Wasylenchuk told police.

Russia Parades New Atom Weapons On Anniversary

By SYDNEY WEILAND
MOSCOW (Reuters)—Russia's gala parade for the anniversary of the 1917 revolution featured Monday what are believed to be atomic guns and atom bombers—along with a big athletic display built up for 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne.
A giant four-engined jet bomber with swept-back wings, thought to be powerful enough to carry atom bombs to all parts of North America headed the flypast over Red Square where the Soviet leaders took the salute.
Moscow Radio said the plane was to be "a new type" of "airborne battleship."
But military observers said they had not seen any new Soviet equipment. They spotted the jet bomber in the parade in May, 1954, and the giant guns, believed to be 280-millimetre calibre and capable of firing atomic shells, were seen last May Day.
Nine swept-wing, twin-jet bombers and 15 twin-jet fighters also flew past Monday while bringing up the rear were 30 turbo-jet fighters believed capable of supersonic speeds in level flight.
BAR MILITARY SHOTS
Foreign photographers were allowed to take pictures of the procession of the civilian marchers with their banners and the athletic parade but not of the military troops.
Defence Minister Marshal Georgi Zhukov inspected the troops who wore new steel-grey dress uniforms with gold-braided belts. A band of 1,000 instrumentalists played military airs.
Zhukov said in a speech that the troops would "continue to defend the national interests of our socialist motherland and the peaceful labor of the people."
He said the fifth five-year plan had been fulfilled in four years and four months and "we shall have more bread this year than last, in spite of very bad weather in the eastern parts of the country."
The Soviet leaders stood in this order on the reviewing stand: Communist Party Secretary Nikita Khrushchev; Soviet President Voroshilov; premier Bulganin; Mikhail Pervukhin, a first deputy premier; former Premier Malenkov, now a deputy premier in charge of power developments; Lazar Kaganovich, a first deputy premier; Foreign Minister Molotov; Anastas Mikoyan, a first deputy premier; and Maxim Saburov, a first deputy premier.
